13. ————— Assignment of mortgage—Consideration—Stamp. A executed to B an assignment of a mortgage. It was stamped with a stamp of R168, and recited that B had instituted a suit against C to recover R3,000, interest and costs, and that an agreement had been come to between B and C; that on C getting A to execute the assignment of the mortgage, and on his paying R500, the suit should be dismissed and settled. It further recited that R5,000 was due to A on the mortgage, and that A had, at C's request agreed to assign it to B. By the operative part, A, in consideration of R5 paid to A by B and "in consideration of the premises," assigned the mortgage to B. Held, that the consideration for the deed of assignment was not merely R5 paid to A, but the assignee's agreement to withdraw the suit if A assigned the mortgage to him upon the instrument; that the money value of the latter part of the consideration was the amount covered by the stamp

16. — Change of name in Government records—Mortgage or conditional sale—Subsequent agreement to re-transfer land in Government records on payment of debt—Document creating a right in land. In 1877, the plaintiff, being indebted to the defendant, transferred certain land to the defendant's name in the Government records. In July 1879 the defendant executed the following document to the plaintiff reciting the previous transfer and agreeing to re-transfer the land to the plaintiff's name on the 12th July 1880, if the debt which would then be due should be paid off: "In the village of Berhampur is your (plaintiff's) field, Survey No. 146, measuring 5 acres 3 gunthas, bearing assessment R16. You (plaintiff) have got it transferred to our name. That field therefore stands in our (defendant's) name in the Government records. You owe a debt to us. On account of that debt, you have transferred it to our name. . . . The field shall be re-transferred to your name when you repay the said debt to me. You have cultivated the field for the produce of Samvat 1936, and a lease in respect thereof you have this day passed to me. And a stamp paper was purchased at the time of the transfer for the execution of this agreement, but no agreement was then passed. This agreement is therefore this day passed to you when the lease is executed. And you owe me (a) debt bearing interest. I will pay out of my pocket the expenses to be incurred at present in cultivating the field. The debt due to me would in all amount to R100. If you repay all these rupees due to me till the Vaishakh Shudh 6th. Samvat 1936, I will take them and transfer the field to your name. And if you fail to pay (them) till Vaishakh Shudh 4th, you will have no claim whatever to the said field. I shall not take the rupees after the 4th (chauth), nor shall I give (or transfer the field to you. . . . I shall lease the field to any one I like without keeping any claim of you as regards cultivation, manure, and hedge. You have no claim or right whatever. . . . This document was not registered. The plaintiff brought this suit to redeem the land, alleging that it had been mortgaged to the defendant, and that the debt had been paid off. The defendant contended that the transaction in 1877 was not a mortgage, but a sale of the land to him, and that the document of July 1879 was an agreement to resell it to the plaintiff, which was not admissible in evidence, as it was not registered. Held, that the document of the 11th July 1879 did not require registration. It created no rights in land, but only amounted to a personal covenant to effect a mutation of names in the Government books when the debt due by the plaintiff was satisfied. PATEL RANCHOD MORAR v. 17. — Document providing for payment of hereditary allowance—Interest in immoveable property—Registration Act (III of 1877). s. 3—Bombay General Clauses Act (Bom. Act III of 1886). Plaintiffs sued in the Court of Small Causes at Poona to recover R400 for arrear alleged to be payable to them under an agreement by the defendant's father to pay R150 per annum, of which R50 were for maintenance of plaintiff's mother, and the residue was to be applied towards defraying the expenses of a temple. The terms of the agreement showed that it was intended that the payment for the expenses of the temple should be continued in perpetuity. The Judge dismissed the suit, holding that, being for a hereditary allowance, it was a claim for immoveable property, and came within the meaning of ss. 3 and 17 of the Registration Act, and that the document creating it required registration, and, not being registered, was inadmissible in evidence. On application by the plaintiffs to the High Court under s. 25 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887) :—Held, reversing the decree, that the document did not require registration, as it was not an instrument purporting or operating to create or declare an interest in immoveable property within the meaning of s. 17, or create an hereditary allowance in the sense in which that expression is used in s. 3 of the Registration Act. VISHNU GANESH JOSHI v. 18. ———— Bond creating charge on immoveable property—Larger sum payable on contingency. The words in s. 17 of the Registration Act (VIII of 1871), "present or future," "vested or contingent," point, not to the value or its ascertainment, but to the right or interest in the land which is to be created as a security. If the charge or interest created is of a value less than R100, registration is needless. NARASAYYA CHETTI GURUVAPPA CHETTI . . . I. L. R. 1 Mad. 378

19. ———— Valuation of right, title, and interest created by mortgage. The value of the right, title, or interest created by a mortgage is estimated by the amount of the principal money thereby secured. The words "or in future" in s. 17 of Act XX of 1866 and s. 17 of Act VIII of 1871 have reference to estates in remainder or in reversion in immoveable property, or to estates otherwise deferred in enjoyment, and not to interest payable in future on principal moneys lent on the security of immoveable property. *NANA BIN LAKSHMAN v. 21. ———— and s. 49—Mortgage. The value of the interest created by a mortgage of immoveable property is estimated, for the purposes of the Registration Act of 1871, not by the amount of the principal money thereby secured, but by the amount of such money and the interest payable thereon. Consequently, a bond, dated the 9th August 1873, which charged certain immoveable property with the payment on the 31st May 1874 of R98, and interest thereon at the rate of one per cent. per mensem, should have been registered. *Darshan Singh v. The proper test for determining the value of the interest created by a mortgage for the purpose of registration is the amount of the least sum recoverable, and not the consideration for the bond. Although an unregistered mortgage

28. ——— and cl. (h)—Instrument creating a charge in the nature of a mortgage—Admissibility in evidence of documents compulsorily registrable, but unregistered. A kararnama (agreement), dated 11th day of June 1885, was passed by A to B to the following effect: "As my father S is dead, it has been arranged that I should succeed to his estate . . . . Part of this estate, at Vagoda, consisting of a house, fields, cattle, and a cart, has been given into your possession for use and enjoyment. The reason thereof is that you have undertaken to pay R450 found due on an adjustment of khata from my father to G. I am unable to pay off this debt; and so you have been put into possession of this property. I shall pass to you a sale-deed in respect of this property, and shall transfer the fields to your name from the year 1888-89." Held, that the kararnama required registration. It did not fall within the exception provided for by cl. (h) of s. 17 of the Registration Act (III of 1877). It was not a document which merely created a right to demand another document. It created as between the parties to it a charge in the nature of a mortgage. The document of itself declared a right, and the mention of an intention to execute a deed of sale made no difference. An unregistered mortgage-bond for one hundred rupees and upwards may be admissible in evidence to prove the simple debt or a personal obligation, but it is inadmissible in evidence to prove any right to the property affected by it. VANI v. BANI . I. L. R. 20 Bom. 553

29. ——— Document compulsorily registrable—Valuation—Least sum payable—Sum repayable before expiry of stated term—Principal sum without interest. A charge on certain property to secure R50 was given by the jenmis in favour of defendant No. 1, who held a kanom on the property granted three years previously, containing the following terms: "This amount of R50, together with the customary interest thereon, will be added to the kanom amount when after the expiry of the period of demise of the paramba a renewal is effected or the paramba is caused to be surrendered. The jenmam right over the said paramba has been mortgaged to you for this R50 and the interest thereon. The document was not registered. It was contended that the document was one compulsorily registrable under s. 17 of the Registration Act, 1877, inasmuch as payment under it was postponed for at least nine years (i.e., the balance of the term granted by the kanom) by the end of which period the accumulations of interest would have amounted to R54 in addition to the principal sum of R50, making R104 in all. Held, that the document did not contain a clear expression of intention that the sum of R50 was not repayable except at the end of the previous kanom term. Full effect would and could be given to the words by construing them to mean no more than that, in the event of the amount remaining unpaid when the kanom became redeemable, the R50 with interest thereon should be treated as if it were part of the kanom amount so as to entitle the appellant to insist on redemption upon payment of such amount in addition to what might be found due under the kanom. That there was nothing in the document to prevent the interest accruing under it from being paid from time to time, even if the unpaid capital were not repaid until the kanom was redeemable. And that the least sum payable being the test as to whether a document is compulsorily registrable, the document need not be registered under s. 17 of the Registration Act, 1877. Per O'FARRELL and MICHELL, JJ., that under cl. On the 15th February 1879 the obligee sued the obligor on the bond to recover R196-8-0, being the principal amount and interest, from the hypothecated property. Held, by the majority of the Full Bench (STUART, C.J. dissenting), that, for the purpose of registration, the value of the right assigned by the bond to the obligee in the property should be estimated by the amount secured for certain by the hypothecation, and, that amount exceeding R100, the bond should have been registered. Per STUART, C.J.—That, for that propose, the value of that right should be estimated by the principal amount of the bond, and, that amount being under R100, the bond did not require to be registered. *Nana bin Lakshman v. the 12th May 1873. The amount thus secured exceeded R200. The property mortgaged was the tenant holding of the obligor. Held, that the interest of a tenant in his holding was right or interest to or in immoveable property; that consequently such bond, which affirmed as a security a right of which the value, estimated by the amount secured, exceeded R100, ought to have been registered; that being unregistered it could not affect the "immoveable property comprised therein" or "be received in evidence of any transaction affecting" the same: and that the suit brought on the basis of such bond for the enforcement of the lien must, in the absence of the bond, fail. *Himmat Singh v. There was no stipulation preventing the obligors from repaying the loan at any time within the six months after which it was reclaimable. Held, that the only amount certainly secured by the bond was the principal, and the bond did not therefore need to be registered. *AHMED BAKHSH v. 48. — Assignment of mortgage—Extrinsic evidence—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 91—Title to sue—Amendment of plaint. An equitable mortgage by deposit of title-deeds was created on 15th August 1862. In March 1873 the mortgagee, P D, executed an assignment of all his property and of all debts due to him, and all the securities therefor, to the plaintiff. The assignment also contained a power-of-attorney from the mortgagee to the plaintiff, "in the name of the said P D, his executors, etc., but for the sole use and benefit of the said AD (the plaintiff), to ask, demand, sue for, recover and receive of and from all and every the person or persons liable in that behalf all and every (inter alia) the sum and sums of money and debts hereby assigned or intended so to be or any of them or any part of them, to hold the same unto and to the use and behoof of the said AD, his executors, etc." Some days after the execution of the assignment, the title-deeds, which had been deposited in 1862 with the mortgagee, were handed to the plaintiff, in accordance with the terms of an agreement to that effect contained in the assignment. The deed of assignment was not registered. On 13th August 1874 the plaintiff, as the assignee of the equitable mortgage, sued for foreclosure. The Court of first instance held that, as an assignment, the deed required registration, and that, not being registered, it could not be received in evidence; that under s. 91 of the Evidence Act (I of 1872) no evidence, other than that contained in the document itself, could be given to prove the fact of the assignment; and that therefore the plaintiff had failed to show a title to sue as assignee of the equitable mortgage. The Court, however, permitted an amendment of the plaint, by which the plaintiff was described as suing "in his own name and as the constituted attorney of P D," and then allowed the deed of assignment to be put in as evidence of the power thereby conferred on the plaintiff to sue for and recover all debts due to P D, and therefore to maintain the present suit in respect of the equitable mortgage. On appeal:—Held, that, if the suit were regarded as the suit of P D, the power-of-attorney contained in the deed did not enable the plaintiff to maintain the suit for P D, inasmuch as it purported to enable the plaintiff to recover the debts mentioned in the deed on his own account only and not on account of P D; and, on the other hand, if the suit were regarded as that of the plaintiff, the Court, by treating the power in the deed as enabling him to recover on his own account, virtually gave to that power the full effect of an assignment, and for that purpose such an assignment, whether legal or equitable, should be registered under ss. 17 and 49 of Act VIII of 1871. The Court, however, being of opinion that there had not been any deliberate intention on the part of the parties to the deed, to evade the law of registration, granted the plaintiff

49. — Deed of assignment showing payment of rent as interest—Admissibility of deed in evidence—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), s. 20—Payment of interest as such—Mortgage—Payment of rents to mortgagee in lieu of interest on debt. By a bond, dated the 15th July 1872, A assigned to B the "vahivat of assessment" of certain lands belonging to him as security for a loan of R10,000. The bond provided that B should receive the assessment, and after making certain payment should retain the balance in lieu of interest until the principal debt should be repaid. The bond was not registered. The assessment was duly received by B until April 1887. In February 1890, B filed this suit to recover the principal sum from A personally, relinquishing his claim against the land, as the bond was not registered. A pleaded limitation. B contended that the receipt of the assessment in lieu of interest was a payment of "interest as such" within the meaning of s. 20 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), and that, the last of such payment having been made within three years before suit, his claim was not barred. Held, that the assignment of the "vahivat of assessment" contained in the bond was an assignment of a benefit arising out of immoveable property within the meaning of ss. 17 and 3 of the Registration Act (III of 1877), or else a mortgage; and in either case the bond could not be admitted in evidence, as it was not registered. But it was only by reading the terms of the bond that the Court could gather that the assessment was to be received in lieu of interest. This would be to admit indirectly the provisions of the bond in evidence. Apart from the bond, there was no evidence that the plaintiff (B) had been paid "interest as such" within three years of the filing of the suit by the duly authorized agents of the defendants, and the claim was therefore barred. VENKAJI BABAJI NAIK v. ## 52. ——— Deed of compromise.

R S R, a Hindu, died in 1811, leaving a will, by which he gave his property to his four sons subject to certain charges, and, among other things, directed that the profits of a portion of it should be dedicated to a certain idol. After his death, his sons partitioned the property. In 1857, B, one of the sons, brought a suit in the late Supreme Court to establish the will and to have the trusts carried into execution. The decree in that suit ordered that the portion so dedicated by the testator should be conveyed to N C, B D N, and K R M, as trustees for the idol. In pursuance of this decree, a conveyance was settled by the Master, but it was never executed, the parties having come to an agreement to compromise, and executed a deed to that effect on 15th March 1866. The deed recited that the parties now agreed to compromise certain suit and to execute mutual releases, etc., as thereafter declared, and then witnessed that the real property belonging to the idol, which the trustees were entitled to hold under the will, was set forth in a schedule, and that it had been agreed that a conveyance should be executed to the plaintiff and others in trust for the idol, and that the same should be duly registered; provision was then made for the settlement of the dedicated portion, when for more than one year, and extending beyond the term of the turn of worship of any one of the parties; and there was a declaration that all leases, etc., made without consent of the parties should only be valid for the turn of worship of such party; that the rents and profits were to pass to and remain with the party or parties who should for the time being be entitled to the turn of worship; and that a house of worship should be built for the idol on the land mentioned in the schedule: provision was also made for the forfeiture of interest of any party who should renounce the Hindu religion; and it was declared that a certain portion was not to be considered divided as theretofore, but that it belonged to the plaintiff, and was not liable to be sold. Held (reversing the decision of MARKBY, J.), that the document was one which required registration under s. 13 of Act XVI of 1864. RAJKUMAR ROY v. A covenant for title, running with the land, would seem to be in itself a transaction affecting the land, and the instrument containing it, if coming within cls. ## 55. ——— Contract of mortgage—

Letter stating terms of equitable mortgage, effect of—Equitable mortgagee, his proper remedy. A and B executed a joint and several promissory note in favour of the plaintiff. On the same day A deposited with the plaintiff the title-deeds of his property as collateral security, and received conjointly with B a part of the consideration-money for the promissory note. Shortly afterwards A addressed a letter to the plaintiff to this effect: "As collateral security for the due payment of R2,000 secured by a promissory note of even date . . . I herewith hand you the title-deeds of my property . . . money borrowed and received in pledge of house," and obtained the balance. In a suit on the basis of the documents for foreclosure or for sale of the property or in the alternative for a conveyance of the legal estate:—Held, that the letter itself was not a contract of mortgage, and was without registration admissible in evidence of the equitable mortgage which had been completed upon deposit of the title-deeds. Held, also, that the fact of the existence of the letter would not prevent the plaintiff from giving any other evidence in proof of his claim. Kedar Nath Dutt v. 56. ——— Endorsement on deed of sale of immoveable property. D sold a house to P, and executed a deed of conveyance, which was duly registered. P did not pay the purchase-money, and therefore did not get possession. Shortly after the conveyance had been registered, P returned it to D with an endorsement thereon to the effect that it was returned because P was unable to pay the purchase-money. The right, title and interest in the house were subsequently attached and sold under a decree obtained against him by the plaintiff. The plaintiff became the purchaser. Held, in a suit by him against D for possession, that the endorsement on the conveyance, not having been registered, could not affect the property. UMED MAL MOTIRAM v. The defendant, who was the original grantor of the hak, pleaded a re-grant of the hak to himself. In support of this plea, the defendant produced from his possession the original sanad bearing the following endorsement by K: "You have passed me a receipt for the sanad. I have accordingly given you the ownership of the sanad. Therefore over the said sanad I have no right or title." The defendant offered to put in this endorsement, and also tendered the evidence of K's brother. This evidence was rejected by the Court, on the ground that the endorsement, which had the effect of extinguishing the grant, was not registered. Held, that the endorsement did not require registration. It did not itself rescind the grant to K, nor constitute a re-grant to the defendant. It was simply an endorsement returning the sanad to the defendant, and therefore passed no interest in any property. HERAMBDEV DHARNIDHARDEV v. KASHINATH BHASKAR.

58. ——— Letter depositing title-deeds—Admissibility in evidence of unregistered document. The defendant deposited certain title-deeds with the plaintiff as security for money due on a bond executed by the defendant in favour of the plaintiff. The deeds were sent with the following letter from the defendant to the plaintiff's attorney: "I have the pleasure of handing to you the title-deeds of a house, 56, Lower Circular Road, as a collateral security for R20,000, which falls due this day. Please accept them from my manager." In a suit for an account of what was due to the plaintiff on the security of the deed:—Held, that the letter needed registration, as being a document which created an interest in land, and therefore, being unregistered, was inadmissible in evidence. DWARKANATH MITTER v. SARAT KUMARI DASI . . . . . 7 B. L. R. 55

59. ——— Letter containing contract—Acknowledgment of receipt of consideration—Evidence Act, s. 91—Oral evidence, Admissibility of—"Instruments." An advertisement appeared in the Bombay Gazette newspaper of the 9th March 1874, advertising for sale certain moveable and immoveable property situate in the village of Angur, near Junnar, in the district of Poona. On reading that advertisement, plaintiff entered into a negotiation with the solicitors of the widow and administratrix of the owner of the said property for the purchase of a certain portion of it. On the 26th May 1874 the plaintiff wrote a letter to the solicitors, offering to purchase the said property for R14,000 on certain conditions, and proposing to pay a deposit of R1,000 as earnest-money if the offer was accepted. On the following day the solicitors informed plaintiff, in writing, that the widow accepted his offer, and requested him to deposit the earnest-money offered by him in his letter. Plaintiff accordingly deposited the earnest-money (R1,000) with the solicitors on the same day, and obtained from them a receipt, bearing a one-anna receipt stamp. The receipt mentioned the money as being in part payment of the sum of R14,000, the amount for which the plaintiff had agreed to purchase the property. Instead of completing the contract of sale with the plaintiff, and putting him in possession of the property, the widow sold it to other persons. In a suit of the nature of a suit for specific performance brought by the plaintiff, as first purchaser, against the widow and the other purchasers to set aside the subsequent sale of the property, and to compel the widow to execute a conveyance thereof to the plaintiff, the following documents were produced and tendered in evidence, viz., the advertisement of the 9th March, the plaintiff's letter of the 26th May (exhibit No. 3), the solicitors' reply (exhibit No. 4), and their receipt of the 27th May 1874 (exhibit No. 5), and it was contended that three of the four documents—viz., exhibits Nos. 3, 4, and 5—required registration under the Registration Act (VIII of 1871), s. 17. Held, that the plaintiff's letter (exhibit 3) offering to purchase the property in question, and the letter of acceptance (exhibit 4) written on behalf of the vendor (defendant No. 1) by her attorneys, did not fall within cl. (b) of the 17th section of the Registration Act (VIII of 1871), and were admissible in evidence to prove the contract of sale, although not registered. The acceptance of the plaintiff's offer was conditional on his payment of the R1,000 as earnest-money, and therefore, until that sum was paid, no estate, legal or equitable, in the property passed to the plaintiff. Quære: Whether the letters between the parties (exhibits Nos. 3 and 4), even if they did constitute a complete contract for sale unincumbered by the necessity for the payment of the deposit by way of earnest could be regarded as "instruments" within the meaning of s. 17 of the Registration Act (VIII of 1871). WAMAN RANCHANDRA v. 60. ——— and s. 49—Letters of one partner to another transferring to the latter the share of the former in the assets of the firm, including the mortgages, but not mentioning them—Necessity of registering such letters—The words "document" and "instrument" in the Registration Act. By two mortgage-bonds, dated respectively 25th July 1866 and 19th September 1870, certain lands were mortgaged to a firm of money-lenders at Khadkala, carrying on business under the style of G and M. There were four partners in the firm, viz., G, M, P, and S. In 1874 G retired from the firm, and wrote three letters the effect of which was to transfer his share in the partnership to P and S. In 1878 the shop was closed, and the partners divided the assets of the firm. The two mortgages fell to the share of S. Subsequently S died, and the plaintiff, his son, inherited his property and took possession of the mortgaged lands. These lands were afterwards attached in execution of a money decree against one of the mortgagors (defendant 1). The plaintiff objected to the attachment, but his objection was disallowed, and the property was sold in execution and purchased by defendants 2 and 3. The plaintiff then filed this suit to establish his rights under the two mortgage-bonds. The defendants contended that the plaintiff had no interest in the mortgages, and was not entitled to sue. The plaintiff relied (inter alia) in support of his title upon the letters (A, B, and C) whereby G had transferred his share in the assets of the firm to his (the plaintiff's) father S. These letters were objected to as inadmissible in evidence, not having been registered. Held, that, independently of the letters, there was evidence to show that the plaintiff's father S was a partner in the firm, and that as such partner the mortgages in question fell to his share at the final division of assets. The position of S as a partner being once established, his right to the property followed by operation of law, and no other proof of title was required. Per JARDINE, J.—"To lay down that the three letters in question, which deal generally with the assets, moveable and immovable, without specifying any particular mortgage or other interest in real property, require registration, would, I incline to think, in the present state of the authorities, go too far. It may be argued that such letters are not 'instruments of gift of immovable property,' but rather disposals of a share in a partnership of which the business is money-lending and the mortgage securities merely incidental thereto." Per TELANG, J.—"Although a partner's share does not include any specific part of any specific item of the partnership property, still where the partnership is entitled to immovable property, such share does include an interest in immovable property, and therefore every instrument operating to create or transfer a right to such share requires to be registered under the Registration Act (III of 1877). It is true that the authorities referred to apply, in terms, only to immovable property owned by a partnership. But I am, on the whole, disposed to hold that the principle of those authorities applies to cases where immovable property is held by a firm not in full proprietorship, but only by right of mortgage. . . . Upon the whole I should, if necessary, have been disposed to hold that the letters in question, not being registered, were rightly treated by the Court below as being inadmissible in evidence to prove directly a transfer of the share of G in the partnership to S." Per TELANG, J.—A perusal of various sections of the Registration Act seems to show that the Legislature has used the words "document" and "instrument" interchangeably. *JOHARMAL v. 64. ———— and cl. (c) and s. 49—Unregistered document—Document to contradict witness—Meaning of word "declare" in s. 17 of Act III of 1877—Acknowledgment, necessity for registration of. S and R sued their brothers M and V in 1880 for partition of the family property. The defendants pleaded that the property had been partitioned in 1870, and that the various members of the family had been ever since in possession and enjoyment of their respective shares. At the hearing a document was produced by the defendant M, dated the 13th January 1877, which was proved to have been signed by his three brothers, S, R, and V, on the occasion of M's effecting a mortgage of part of the property. This document contained the following words: "Our eldest brother M has built houses and is building new houses on property appertaining to his share . . . . To the same we three persons and our heirs and representatives have no interest of any kind whatever. If we or they should prefer any claim, then the same is to be null. This release paper we have duly passed in writing jointly and severally and in sound mind. This document had not been registered, and was therefore inadmissible as evidence of the alleged partition. In cross-examination of the plaintiff R, he was interrogated as to the circumstances under which the mortgage was made by M on the 13th January 1877. He said: "I was present when the mortgage was made, but I was ill in bed.

. . . . This was on the 13th January 1877. . . . I did not say on that day that I had no claim to the property." He was then shown the above document, and admitted his signature. The document was then tendered in evidence, not as a release, but to contradict the witness. Held, that the document was admissible for that purpose, as it was not a document which itself declared a right in immovable property in the sense intended by s. 17 of the Registration Act (III of 1877). It was an acknowledgment that there had, in time past, been a partition between the brothers who signed it and the defendant M, but it was not itself the instrument of partition. That an acknowledgment of a partition is distinct from the instrument of partition, is to be gathered from cl. (c) of s. 17 of the Registration Act (III of 1877). Had the terms of cl. (b) of that section been satisfied by a mere acknowledgment, cl. (c) would have been superfluous. Its operation is to require an acknowledgment in the form of a receipt to be registered, but not an acknowledgment in any other shape as distinguished from the instrument of the transaction. The word "declare" in s. 17 of the Registration Act (III of 1877) is to be taken in the same sense as the words "create, assign, etc.," used in the same section, viz., as implying a definite change of legal relation to the property by an expression of will embodied in the document referred to. It implies a declaration of will, not a mere statement of a fact, and thus a deed of partition which causes a change of legal relation to the property divided amongst all the parties to it is a declaration in the intended sense; but a letter containing an admission, direct or inferential, that a partition once took place, does not "declare" a right within the meaning of the section. It is not the expression or declaration of will by which the right is constituted. Quære: Whether, if the above document were itself a release operating or intended to operate as a declared volition constituting or severing ownership, it could be received even for the purpose of contradicting a witness who had denied that he had previously made a statement inconsistent with his evidence. SAKHARAM KRISHNAJI v. He subsequently sold such village to A, concealing the fact that it had been mortgaged to S. On this fact coming to the knowledge of A, he threatened L with a criminal prosecution, whereupon L proposed to S in writing that the security of a share in a village called Kelsa, which he alleged was his property, should be substituted for the security of Chand Khera. S accepted this proposal by a letter in which he referred to L's proposal in terms. It subsequently appeared that the share in Kelsa did not belong to L, but to another person. S having sued upon his bond, claiming to enforce thereunder a lien upon Chand Khera, A set up as a defence to the suit that S had agreed to substitute Kelsa for Chand Khera in the bond producing S's letter as evidence of the agreement. Held, that such letter operated as a release, and should therefore have been stamped and registered. SAFAR ALI KHAN v. 67. — Widow's right to maintenance, release of—Release affecting property.* A widow's right to maintenance constitutes no interest, vested or contingent, in the immoveable property of an undivided Hindu family within the meaning of the Registration Act, XX of 1866, and a release thereof did not require to be registered under cl. 2, s. 17 of that Act. Semble: Under Act XX of 1866, s. 17, cls. 2 and 3, releases affecting immoveable property above R100 in value had to be registered, and the releases mentioned in cl. 7 of s. 18 are releases relating to moveables. 68. — Deed of release by adopted son—Document registered under the Dekkan Agriculturists' Relief Act (XVII of 1879), ss. 56 and 60.* The plaintiff was adopted in 1880 by K, the widow of one G. In June 1885 he executed a document which recited that he and K had not been on amicable terms, and that his adoption had consequently been cancelled, and that she had adopted another son (defendant No. 1) to whom she had given all rights of heirship and declared that in consideration of R200 paid by K he delivered back to her the right which he had obtained by virtue of his adoption and heirship. This document was not registered under the General Registration Act (III of 1877), but was registered under s. 56 of the Dekkan Agriculturists' Relief Act (XVII of 1879), which section applied to the district in which the transaction took place. K died in October 1885, and the plaintiff brought this suit, as adopted son, to recover the property of G. The first defendant, who had been adopted by K subsequently to the plaintiff's adoption, contended that he had been validly adopted, and that he was entitled to the property. He relied (inter alia) upon the release executed by plaintiff in June 1885. It was contended that the release in question was not admissible in evidence, not having been registered under the General Registration Act (III of 1877). Held, that the document was admissible. It was a conveyance within s. 56 of the Dekkan Agriculturists' Relief Act (XVII of 1879), and the law in force as to its registration was contained in ss. 56 and 60 of that Act. MAHADU GANU v. Certain immoveable property having been attached in the execution of a decree held by S, B and L objected to the attachment. An arrangement was subsequently effected between the objectors and the parties to the decree, which resulted in all parties jointly filing a "sulehnamah" in Court, in which B and L, who had purchased the rights of the judgment-debtor in the attached property, agreed to pay the amount of the decree, which exceeded one hundred rupees, within one year, and hypothecated such property as security for the payment of such amount. S having sued upon the document claiming to recover the amount of the decree by the sale of such property:—Held, that the document required to be registered, and, not being registered, the suit thereon was not maintainable. Cases decided by the High Court in which the "sulehnamah" having been relied on, not as containing the hypothecation itself, but as evidence only of a separate parol agreement, or in which a decree, having been made in accordance with the terms of the document, was held not to require registration, remarked upon and distinguished by SPANKIE, J. *SURJU PRASHAD v. The writing further acknowledged the receipt by J T from V of R100 as earnest-money for the purchase of the bungalow, and concluded with certain penalties in the event of a default by either party. In a suit in the nature of a suit for specific performance brought by V to compel J T to execute the deed of sale to V and to register the same as promised in the writing of 28th April 1874:—Held, that the writing required registration under Act VIII of 1871, s. 17, cls. 2 and 3, as it distinctly acknowledged the receipt of R100 as part of the consideration for the sale of the house to the plaintiff for the sum of R4,300, and operated to create an interest in the house of the value of R100 and upwards. *Mahad v. the plaintiff had agreed to purchase the property. Instead of completing the contract of sale with the plaintiff and putting him in possession the defendant sold it to other persons. In a suit to set aside the sale to them and to compel the defendant to execute a conveyance to the plaintiff:—Held, that the receipt for R1,000 earnest-money (exhibit No. 5) fell within cl. (3) of s. 17 of the Registration Act (VIII of 1871) as being an acknowledgment of the receipt or payment of consideration on account of the creation of a right, title, or interest in immoveable property of the value of upwards of R100, and was therefore inadmissible in evidence, not having been registered; but that under s. 91 of the Evidence Act (I of 1872) oral evidence was admissible to prove the payment, notwithstanding the existence of the written receipt. I will cause the aforesaid two fields to be entered in your name. Nothing remains due by or to either of us in respect of the produce of these fields." The document was stamped as a receipt with a stamp of one anna. Held, that, for the purpose of establishing satisfaction of all claims which the plaintiff and the defendant had upon one another, the document was admissible in evidence; but that, if used as evidence of title, it came within the provisions of s. 17 of the Registration Act (XX of 1866) and the corresponding provisions of the Registration Act (III of 1877), and was inadmissible unless duly registered. *FAKI v. 85. — and cl. (b)—Receipts by mortgagee. Receipts passed by a mortgagee for sums paid on account of the mortgage-debt, and exceeding R100 each, are not inadmissible in evidence for want of registration under Act III of 1877, s. 17. The technical term "consideration" implies that the person to whom the money is paid himself limits or extinguishes his interest in the land in consideration of such payment. Such limitation or extinction (if there can be said to be any) as results from the payment on account of the mortgage-debt is the legal consequence of such payment, and not the act of the mortgagee. The payment reduces the sum due at the time on the mortgage, and thus modifies the account between the mortgagor and mortgagee. But it does not operate to limit or confine within narrower limits the right or interest of the mortgagee in the land, which is simply to have the payment of the principal and interest secured on the mortgaged premises by some one or other of the remedies available for that purpose. Money paid on account of a mortgage-debt is not the consideration for the limitation or extinction of so much of the interest in the land created by the mortgage, and a receipt for such a payment need not therefore be registered under s. 17, cl. (b), of the Registration Act, III of 1877. Dalip Singh v. Durga Prasad, I. L. R. 1 All. 442, dissented from. SHIDLINGAPA v. CHENBASAPA.

86. — Receipts given by mortgagee for payments on account of the mortgage-debt. 87. — receipt for payment of mortgage-money. The payment of money by a mortgagor to a mortgagee in satisfaction of the mortgage-debt is a payment of consideration on account of the extinction of the mortgagee's right within the meaning of cl. A receipt for such payment is therefore a document of which the registration is compulsory, and which, if unregistered, is inadmissible in evidence under s. 49. Dalip Singh v. Durga Prasad, I. L. 88. — Receipt by mortgagee setting forth a settlement of mortgage accounts—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 92, cl. 4. In 1875 certain lands were mortgaged for R675. The mortgage-bond provided that the mortgagee was to enjoy the rents and profits in lieu of interest on R475, and that the remaining R200 were to carry interest at 6 per cent. per annum. In 1880 a receipt was passed by the mortgagee to the mortgagor reciting that on taking accounts R525 was due on account of the mortgage, that R100 was paid on the day of the receipt, that a further sum of R100 was to be paid in a month and-a-half, and that the rents and profits of the property were in future to be taken for the interest on the balance of R325 only. In 1896 the mortgagor sued for redemption, and relied on the receipt in support of his case. Held, that the receipt did not require registration. It purported to be a mere settlement of accounts, and was not intended to modify or supersede the original mortgage contract. Cl. 4, s. 92, of the Evidence Act (I of 1872) had therefore no application to the case. LAKSHMAN v. DAMODAR. I. L. R. 24 Bom. 609

89. — and s. 49—Mortgage-bond—Indorsement of part-payment—Receipt. The strictest construction should be placed on the prohibitory and penal sections of the Registration Act, which impose serious disqualifications for non-observance of registration. An instrument to come within s. 17 (b) of the Registration Act (III of 1877) must in itself purport or operate to create, declare, assign, limit, or extinguish some right, title, or interest of the value of R100 or upwards in immoveable property. To come within s. 17 (c) it must be on the face of it an acknowledgment of the receipt of payment of some consideration on account of the creation, declaration, assignment, limitation, or extinguishment of such a right, title or interest. In a suit by a mortgagee for the sale of immoveable property mortgaged in certain simple mortgage-bonds for amounts severally exceeding R100, the defendant pleaded that he had made certain payments in respect of the bonds, and in support of his plea relied on indorsements of payment upon them, one of which was as follows: "Paid on the 21st December R300." The other indorsements were in similar terms. Held, by the Full Bench (STRAIGHT, J., doubting), that the indorsements even if assumed to be receipts, did not fall within s. 17 (b) of the Registration Act, inasmuch as a receipt, unless so framed and worded as to purport expressly to limit or extinguish an interest in immoveable property (which the indorsements did not), could not come within the section, and what ordinarily operated to limit or extinguish a mortgagee's interest in the mortgaged property was not the paper receipt, but the actual part-payment of the mortgage-debt. Held, also, that the indorsements did not fall within s. 17 (c) of the Act, inasmuch as, taken by themselves, they were merely memoranda made by the mortgagee, and could not be treated as acknowledgments, nor even if assumed to be such, did they show, upon their face, that they were acknowledgments, of the receipt or payment of any consideration for the limitation or extinguishment of any interest of the mortgagee in the mortgaged property. Held, therefore, that the indorsements did not require to be registered in order to make them admissible in evidence of the payments to which they related. *Mahadaji v. Plaintiff, alleging that defendants had failed to pay him the balance, now filed this suit to recover possession of the land. Defendants contended that the balance had been duly paid, and in support of that contention produced a receipt which, however, was held to be inadmissible in evidence for want of registration. Oral evidence of the alleged payment was also excluded. Held, that the receipt had been wrongly excluded. It did not purport to extinguish the mortgage right, and, even if it did so, it was receivable as evidence of the payment, oral

102. Lease—Usufructuary mortgage—Act XVI of 1864, ss. 13, 14. B sued for possession of certain lands on a contract embodied in a document which purported to grant B possession of these lands for a period of six years on payment of R99. Held, that the document in question was not a lease; but a usufructuary mortgage, and that the consideration-money being less than R100, its registration under Act XVI of 1864 was merely optional. ISHAN CHANDRA v. SUJAN BIBI.

103. Lease—Agreement to lease—Contract of special nature. Held, that certain letters forming a correspondence which had passed between the parties did not require registration, for they did not amount to a lease or an agreement for a lease, but were evidence of a contract of a special character not coming within any of the definitions in the Registration Act. 104. Lease at an annual rent. A lease for no definite time, but fixing an annual rent (sone-bosone) falls within cl. 4 of s. 17 of Act XX of 1866, and must be registered in order to be admissible in evidence. RAMKUMAR MANDAL v. BRAJAHARI MRIDHA.

105. Lease for more than a year—Condition which may shorten term. A lease for more than a year is not the less a lease because a condition is attached to the consideration, and because its term may be lessened on the payment of a sum of money by the lessor. Such a lease cannot be used in evidence unless it is registered. BUKSH ALI BOOHEAN v. NUBOTARA.

107. Lease with agreement for renewal on expiration. A kabuliati in which a raiyat agreed to hold under a pottah for a specified year, the agreement between the parties being that at the close of that period a fresh settlement would be made, was held to be a lease for one year, and not to need registration under Act XX of 1866 as being a lease for more than a year, although a clause intervened between the above clauses to the effect that year by year the raiyat would pay rent at the above rate. JUGDESH CHUNDER BISWAS v. ABEDOLLAH MUNDUL . 14 W. R. 68

108. ————— Lease for more than a year—Lease with option of renewal. Where a lease is only for one year with option to the lessor to allow the lessee to continue his tenure on the old conditions after expiration of the year:—Held, that the absolute right of the lessee is restricted to one year, and that the lease is therefore one year's lease, the registration of which is not necessary. SOUTH PERSAD DASS v. 109. ————— Lease for so long as tenant continues to pay. A lease for so long as the lessee or tenant continues to pay the stipulated rent is a lease not limited to a year, and must be registered under s. 17 of the Registration Act of 1866, and, not being registered, cannot be received in evidence under s. 49 of that Act. SHEOGHOLAM v. BUDDREE NATH . 4 N. W. 36

110. ————— Zur-i-peshgi lease—"Leases not exceeding one year," Meaning of. Leases which were exempted from the operation of s. 17, cl. 2, Act XX of 1866, were leases the term of which was one year certain. Where a zur-i-peshgi lease was granted for one year, but with a stipulation that unless the loan were repaid within that time it should continue in force:—Held, that such a lease came within the words of s. 17, cl. 4, Act XX of 1866, "leases of immoveable property for any term exceeding one year" of which registration was compulsory. BHOBANI MAHTO v. SHIBNATH PARA . I. L. R. 13 Calc. 113

111. ————— Lease for one year—Lease exceeding one year—Option of renewal. A lease for one year, containing an option of renewal for a further period of one year, is not a lease for a term exceeding one year within the meaning of cl. (d), s. 17 of the Registration Act, so as to render registration thereof compulsory. Certain correspondence passed between the plaintiff and the defendant relating to a lease of a flat in premises in occupation of the plaintiff which admittedly contained an agreement for a lease for one year with an option of renewal for another year. The terms in which the option was given were as follows: The defendant in one letter wrote, "So I expect you will give me the option of renewal for another year, respectively five months, on same terms." To which the plaintiff replied, "You may have the option of retaining it (the flat) for another year on the same terms, but not for a shorter period." In pursuance of an arrangement, the defendant had a draft lease prepared embodying the terms agreed on, which he sent to the plaintiff for approval, and which was in due course returned by him "approved." The defendant then had the lease engrossed and properly stamped, but the plaintiff eventually refused to execute it, and it was never signed by the defendant. The option of renewal was given in the unexecuted lease in the following terms: "Also with option to renew for another twelve months certain." The defendant having entered into possession and disputes having arisen, the plaintiff gave him notice to quit and sued to eject him, alleging that at the most he was a mere monthly tenant. The defendant pleaded that under the lease he was entitled to hold for a year. The year expired before the suit came on to be heard, and the defendant, not having exercised the option to renew, vacated the premises. At the hearing the defendant in support of his case, tendered the correspondence and the stamped unexecuted lease. It was objected that the correspondence was inadmissible in evidence, because the option to renew made the period for which the lease was to run exceed one year, and therefore rendered registration compulsory. On behalf of the defendant it was urged that registration was unnecessary, as the option did not make the lease one for a longer period than one year, and that the stamped unexecuted lease must be treated as part of the correspondence. Held, following Hand v. Hall, L. R. 2 Ex. D. 355, that the existence of the option did not create a lease for a term exceeding one year within the meaning of cl. (d), s. 17 of the Registration Act, and that consequently the correspondence did not require registration. Bhobani Mahto v. Shibnath Para, I. L. R. 13 Calc. 113, dissented from. BOYD v. KREIG I. L. R. 17 Calc. 548

112. ————— Lease reserving annual rent—Tenancy-at-will. The defendant executed to the plaintiff a rent note under which he rented two houses from the plaintiff at a rent of Rs 18 per annum. The document provided that the defendant was to live in the said houses so long as the plaintiff permitted him to do so, and so long as he should pay the rent. He was to vacate when asked to do so by the plaintiff. Held, that the lease created a tenancy-at-will, and did not require registration, although an annual rent was reserved thereby. JIVRAJ GOPAL v. ATMARAM DAYARAM I. L. R. 14 Bom. 319

113. ————— Settlement papers given by raiyats. Settlement papers prepared at the beginning of each year and signed by the raiyats setting forth the quantity of nugdee lands to be held and the amount of rent to be paid by each tenant during the year are admissible in evidence, and do not require registration, provided the amount of rent therein agreed to be paid is under Rs 100, and the term is for only one year. NUSRUN v. RAM DEBUL SINGH . 17 W. R. 273

114. ————— Lease—Lease for one year at a rental of more than Rs 100—Evidence—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), ss. 4 and 107. The owner of certain land exchanged it for certain other land, but took a lease for one year of the former land and paid the rent thereof, and received and retained the rents of the land he had acquired by the exchange. Held, in a suit for recovery of possession on the expiry of the lease, that the fact that such a lease recites the fact of the exchange of the lands does not evidence the exchange, and as such create a title in land. Nor does the fact that the rent reserved under the lease is more than R200 create an interest in land of R100 and more in value, so as to necessitate registration of the lease under s. 17 of the Registration Act. Such a lease falls under s. 107 of the Transfer of Property Act. The provisions of which sections are, by s. 4 of the Act, supplemental to the Registration Act.

118. — Lease—Compulsory registration. Where a lease deed contained a clause whereby the tenancy thereunder was absolutely determinable at any moment at the option of the lessor, it was held that such deed was not compulsorily registrable under s. 17 of the Registration Act, notwithstanding that it also contained provisions for an "annual rental" and for payment of "rent in advance each year," provisions which had they stood alone, would have raised a presumption that a tenancy exceeding a year was contemplated.

not extend the term for which the lease was granted, as to the conclusion of that term the lessee would be only monthly tenant of the lessor, and therefore it did not require registration under s. 17 of Act XX of 1866.

120. — and s. 49—Lease—Lease from year to year. In a suit for possession of a piece of land, and for rent of the same, the plaintiff produced in support of his claim two sarkhats or kabuliats purporting to be executed in his favour by the defendants, and dated respectively in January 1875 and June 1876. These documents were not registered. The first, after reciting that the executant had taken the land from the plaintiff on a specified yearly rent and promised to pay the same yearly, proceeded as follows: "If the owner of the land wishes to have it vacated, he shall give me fifteen days' notice and I will vacate without making objection; if I delay in vacating the land, the owner can realize by recourse to law, rent from me at the rate of RS per annum." The second sarkhat, after reciting that the executants had taken the land from the plaintiff on a yearly rent specified for six years and promised to pay the same year by year, proceeded thus: "And if the said Shaikh wishes to have the land vacated within the said term, he shall first give us fifteen days' notice, and we will vacate it without objection." The lower Courts held that the sarkhats were not admissible in evidence, as they required registration under s. 17 (4) of the Registration Act VIII of 1871, being leases of immoveable property from year to year or reserving a yearly rent. Held, that the two sarkhats created no rights except those of tenants-at-will, inasmuch as the clause common to both to the effect that at any time, at the will of the lessor, the lessees were to give up the land at fifteen days' notice, governed all the previous clauses, and the defendants could be asked to quit at any time before the lapse of the term at fifteen days' notice. Held, therefore, that the leases did not fall under s. 17 (4) of Act VIII of 1871; that their registration was not compulsory; and that they could not be excluded from evidence under s. 49 of Act III of 1877, which governed the question of admissibility, while Act VIII of 1871 governed the question whether registration was or was not compulsory.

121. — Lease—Exemption from registration by Government. Leases for a term not exceeding five years, with a rent reserved not exceeding R50 being exempted by the local Government from registration:—Held, that a potta for one Fasli to remain in force until another pottah is granted, with a rent reserved of R110 did not fall within the exemption. Held, also, that such a pottah was a lease for a term exceeding one year and not a lease for a year, and therefore subject to the general provision of cl. (d), s. 17 of

122. ————— Exemption from registration—Lease for one year and till another lease is executed. A muchalka executed for one Fasli to remain in force until the execution of a fresh muchalka, for a rent less than R50, is exempted from registration by virtue of the notification of the Local Government under s. 17 of the Registration Act, which exempts from registration leases the terms granted by which do not exceed five years, and the annual rents reserved by which do not exceed R50. 123. ————— Interest in immoveable property—Registration Act, s. 3—Document giving right to "cut and enjoy trees"—Lease—Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 36—Injunction. The plaintiff (who held on lease a share in a village and in the trees standing in the village tank), in consideration of R200 and a promissory note for R3,200, executed in favour of the defendant a document by which he assigned to the latter the right "to cut and enjoy the trees, etc.," for a period of four years from its date. The instrument was not registered. The defendants felled the trees which were mature at the date of the instrument, and subsequently felled others since matured. The plaintiff now sued for a declaration of his title to the remaining trees and for an injunction to restrain the defendant from intermeddling therewith, alleging that he had sold to the defendant orally the right to fell only such trees as were then matured. Held, that the unregistered instrument purported to convey an interest in immoveable property, and was not a lease and was inadmissible in evidence; and that the plaintiff was not entitled to relief by way of injunction or otherwise. admission—Effect of admission in pleading of execution of contract—Evidence to prove an admitted document not necessary—Evidence. By an agreement, dated 2nd August 1880, the defendant agreed to sell to the plaintiff a certain piece of land with a dwelling house for R1,900. At the time of the execution of this agreement the plaintiff paid the defendant R100 earnest-money, and the agreement provided that the remaining R1,800 should be paid within a month from the date of the agreement when the deed of conveyance of the property should be executed. The material part of the agreement was as follows: "I have received from you R100, namely, rupees one hundred, as earnest (i.e.) at time of the execution of this bargain-paper. And as to the remaining R1,800, namely, one thousand and eight hundred, the same are duly to be paid to me within one month from this day, when you will get the deed (or) document made in your favour. And all the expenditure in respect of the deed (or) documents and transferring (the property) to your name you are duly to make on your account . . . on these terms this informal bargain-paper, having been written, is agreed to and delivered." The plaintiff sued for specific performance, and tendered the agreement in evidence, although unregistered. Held, that the document, although unregistered, was admissible in evidence under cl. (h) of s. 17 of the Registration Act III of 1877. Being unregistered, it could not create or assign the interest intended by the parties to be transferred, and being thus incapable of carrying out the primary intention of the parties, the agreement became one "merely creating a right to obtain another document which would, when executed," effect the desired purpose if the execution were accompanied with registration. 157. ———— Certificate of sale—Property sold in lots—Single sale-certificate for lots each under R100. In compliance with an application for the sale of land to satisfy a decree, the Civil Court put up certain land to auction in four lots. One lot was purchased by the plaintiff for R88, and each of the other three were bought by him for less than R100, the price for the whole amounting to R111-8-0, for which amount the Court granted a single certificate of sale dated 10th February 1874. This certificate was never registered. The plaintiff applied to be put in possession, but, the defendant resisting him, his application was rejected. On the 16th of November 1879, the plaintiff brought this suit to have his right declared to the piece bought for R88 and to recover its possession. Along with the plaint the plaintiff produced the unregistered certificate of sale of the 10th February 1874. On the application of the plaintiff, another certificate for the same property was issued by the Court to the plaintiff on the 31st of October 1877, that is, three years after the confirmation of sale. This was registered on the 20th of December 1877, and was produced by the plaintiff in the proceedings which gave rise to the present suit. It was obtained by the plaintiff on the 23rd of February 1880, and tendered in evidence, but was rejected under s. 63 of the Code of Civil Procedure (XIV of 1882). Held, that, although the four lots purchased by the plaintiff at the auction-sale were included in one certificate of sale, such certificate, although one instrument in form, should, for the purpose of registration, be regarded as four separate certificates of the four several lots, each of which did not require registration. *DEVIDAS JAGJIVAN v. "Be it explicitly expressed that after taking out the Letters of Administration I, Gyanoda Sundari Dassi, shall amicably take 10-anna share, and I, Iswhar Chandra Sarkar, shall take 6-anna share of the movable and immovable properties, after dividing the shares by demarcation." The instrument was not registered. Rent having fallen into arrears, plaintiff sued to recover the same, when it was pleaded in defence that the instrument of lease was inadmissible in evidence for want of registration. The Munsif dismissed the suit on the grounds (1) that the lease was not for agricultural purposes, and that therefore its registration was compulsory under s. 107 of the Transfer of Property Act, and (2) that, assuming it to be an agricultural lease, its registration was compulsory under s. 17, cl. (d), of the Indian Registration Act, inasmuch as it was not a lease for a term not exceeding five years. On a petition being filed to revise the Munsif's decree: Held, (i) that a lease of land for the cultivation of betel is an agricultural lease, Kunhayen Haji v. Mayan, I. L. R. 17 Mad. 98, not followed; (ii) that, although the lease might continue beyond five years in the event of neither party determining it in the meanwhile, it was not a lease for a term exceeding five years as either party might determine it before the expiration of that period. Virammal v. Rungayyengar, I. L. R. 4 Mad. 381, followed. Inasmuch as the annual rent was under Rs 50, registration was optional, and plaintiff was not precluded from proving the letting by oral evidence or by proof of the unregistered instrument. *MURUGESA CHETTI v. 163. — Agreement to lease—Darkhast application—Endorsement sanctioning application—Communication to applicant—Document not expressed to be for over five years nor for rent exceeding Rs 50 per annum—Necessity for registration. Application was made to a devasthanam for some waste land on darkhast. The manager of the devasthanam sanctioned the grant by endorsement on the darkhast application, and this was communicated to the applicant. The document did not in terms purport to be for a period exceeding five years, nor did the rent reserved by it exceed Rs 50 per annum. Held, that it must be taken to be an agreement to lease and in consequence subject to the provisions of the Registration Act as if it were a lease. But, treating it as a lease, it did not require registration under s. 17 of the Registration Act. It did not in terms purport to be for a period exceeding five years nor did the rent reserved by it exceed Rs 50 per annum. It was therefore exempted from registration by the notification of Government published under that section. The criterion for purposes of registration is what is expressed on the face of the document, not what incidents may be annexed by custom to a grant of the kind. Even though one such incident may be that the grantee is entitled to hold permanently, another would be that the tenant may relinquish the holding at the end of any fasli, and therefore before the expiration of five years. *RAMASWAMY AYYAR v. in embarrassed circumstances, with his creditors with the object of paying the latter a composition upon their claims. The deed must in substance be of the nature of a composition, not a conveyance. Hence, where a debtor transfers his property to a creditor or creditors in consideration of his debts, i.e., when he parts with his rights absolutely, the transaction may partake of the nature of a composition, but it is in reality a conveyance. It is otherwise where with the consent of his creditors he parts with his property in favour of a trustee for the purpose of paying the composition upon the claims, and the trustee is authorized to deal with the property for that purpose. A composition deed for the benefit of all the creditors, not comprising the whole of the property of the judgment-debtor, is not void, if the transaction is fair and bona fide and in the ordinary course of business or upon the pressure of the creditors. It does not become void by the circumstance that it is signed by some only of the creditors, and that among them are some whose debts are barred by limitation. *MALUKCHAND AMARCHAND v. Subsequently one of the original donors purported to sell the share so assigned to a person, who had notice of the terms upon which it was held by the original donee. Held, that this sale, even though carried out by means of a registered instrument, was ineffectual as against the rights of the original donee, inasmuch as both the vendor knew that in equity he could not have a title to convey, and the vendee also was aware that the vendor could not convey without committing a fraud on the original donee. *Benham v. (d) and (f), 21, 24 and 77—Document relinquishing right of inheritance—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), ss. 6, 19 and 21—Succession Act (X of 1865), s. 107—Document whereby a Mahomedan daughter relinquished her right of inheritance to her father's property—Refusal to register on the ground that the document did not contain sufficient description of property—Discretion of Registrar—Vested or contingent interest—"Spes Successionis"—Alteration not affecting the legal effect of the contract. A Mahomedan daughter executed in favour of her father a document under which, in consideration of her receiving R9,000, she relinquished her right of inheritance to the father's property and also to certain ornaments directed to be given to her by her mother. The document was presented for registration to the Sub-Registrar, who accepted the registration fee, which was endorsed on the document and subsequently refused to register the document on the ground that its execution was denied and that it did not contain sufficient description of the immoveable property to which it related—ss. 35 and 21 of the Registration Act (III of 1877). On appeal to the Registrar, he held that the execution of the document was proved, but refused registration on the ground that the provisions of s. 21 had not been complied with. Thereupon a suit having been filed under s. 77 of the Registration Act (III of 1877) for a decree directing registration of the document:—Held, allowing the claim, that s. 21 of the Registration Act (III of 1877) did not apply. The document could not be treated as relating to property because it related to mere heirship; much less could it relate to immoveable property capable of being described and identified. Supposing that s. 21 was applicable and that the document related to

immoveable property, then the conditions of the section were satisfied, because under the document the executant gave up her right of inheritance to such of her father's immoveable property as he might leave on his death and that this is not only a sufficient, but the only description that could be given of the property. Held, further, that document did not fall within the category of any of the documents mentioned in s. 17 of the Registration Act (III of 1877). It fell within cls. (d) and (f) of s. 18 of the Act. It fell within cl. (d) of s. 18, because there was a release by the executant of her right to certain ornaments to which she had a present right. It fell within cl. (f) because it was a document under which the executant agreed to release her right as heir to her father and that belonged to a class of documents not mentioned in s. 17 and not falling within the preceding clauses of s. 18. Where a Sub-Registrar or Registrar receives a document and the registration fee, and endorses the payment on the document and issues a commission for taking evidence, he must be regarded as having exercised his discretion under s. 21 of the Registration Act (III of 1877) and accepted the document for registration. But even if there was at first no acceptance under that section, that being a matter in his discretion, the Court cannot, under s. 77 of the Act, question the subsequent exercise of such discretion. The discretion under s. 21 arises where a non-testamentary document "relates to immoveable property." Where it does not so relate, the section cannot apply and the discretion cannot arise. It is open for a Civil Court to enquire into such question in a suit under s. 77 of the Act. The right of a son or daughter or other heir of a person to inherit his property is not an estate in remainder or in reversion in immoveable property or an estate otherwise deferred in enjoyment. It is neither a vested nor a contingent right. It does not come within the definitions of "a vested interest" in s. 19 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), or of "a contingent interest" in s. 21 of the Act and s. 107 of the Indian Succession Act (X of 1865). So far from being a vested or a contingent right, or a right in present or in future, it is, in the language of cl. (a) of s. 6 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), "the chance of an heir-apparent succeeding to an estate" or "a mere possibility of succession" which cannot be transferred. A mere spes successionis is unknown to, and not recognised by, Mahomedan law. An alteration to be material for the purpose of registration must affect the legal effect of the contract so as to make it cease to be the same instrument. ABDOOL HOOSEIN v. GOOLAM HOOSEIN (1905) . certain lands to plaintiff for R1,300, of which R775 were in respect of past debts and R525 were to be advanced in cash. This latter sum the defendant No. 1 did not attempt to receive. The deed was written on a plain paper bearing one anna receipt stamp, and it was attested by two witnesses. The deed itself contained a recital that the mortgagor (defendant No. 1) was, within 15 days from its date, to execute a mortgage on a stamped paper and get it registered. This he failed to do. The plaintiff thereupon presented the original deed for registration on the 30th July 1900, and it was duly registered at a subsequent date on the payment of stamp duty and penalty. In the meantime, on the 4th June 1900, the defendant No. 1 sold five survey numbers from out of the above lands to the defendant No. 2; this sale-deed was registered on the 4th July 1900. On this latter date the defendant No. 1 mortgaged 4 more survey numbers out of the same property to defendant No. 3; and the deed was registered on the same day. The plaintiff then brought this suit to recover his money by sale of the property mortgaged to him. Held, that it was clear from the terms of the plaintiff's deed that legally the mortgage therein contained began to operate from the date of the document, that is, in other words, it was not a document, which merely created a right to demand another document, but created as between the parties a charge in the nature of a mortgage. Purmanandas Jiwandas v. Dharsey Virji, I. L. R. 10 Bom. 101, followed. Held, further, that the non-payment of R525 by the plaintiff could not affect the nature of the document itself or vary its terms: the defendant No. 1 could sue to recover the unpaid remainder or for damages. Held, also, that the plaintiff's document, though registered later than the deeds of defendants Nos. 2 and 3, was by virtue of its prior execution, entitled to priority over them under s. 47 of the Registration Act (III of 1877). *MOTICHAND v. alleged adoption, authorised the wife to adopt, and further authorised her to put into the possession of the adopted son all the properties which the deceased got under a certain decree, and all his immoveable properties, etc. Held, that the document was not a testamentary disposition of property within the meaning of s. 3 of Act V of 1881. It was an authority to adopt and nothing else, and the direction therein to put the adopted son into possession of the property could not be construed as a device of the property. It was simply a statement of the consequences that should legally follow on the adoption. Bhoobun Moyee Debia v. Ram Kishore Acharj Chowdhry, 10 Moo. I. A. 279, 312, referred to. A kabuliati dated the 6th May 1880, and executed by the lessee of a house in favour of the lessors, set forth that the house was let to the former at an annual rent of R3 for a term of one year. It also contained this stipulation: "I (the lessee) do declare that I shall continue to pay the annual rent every year, and that, if I should fail to pay the rent in any year, the owners of the house shall be at liberty to recover the rent through the Court." The lease was not registered. In a suit by the lessors against the lessee for possession of the house and for R7-8 arrears of rent, the defendant pleaded that, according to the right construction of the lease, he was entitled to occupy the house and the lessors were not entitled to eject him therefrom, so long as he paid the annual rent of R3; that he had duly paid rent at the agreed rate from the 6th May 1880 to the 6th May 1884; and that, under these circumstances, the plaintiffs were not entitled to either of the reliefs claimed. Held, that the lease was for one year only, and thus falling under s. 18 of the Registration Act (III of 1877), it was admissible in evidence without registration; that the defendant had been a mere tenant-at-will since the expiry of the year 1880-81; and that the plaintiffs were therefore entitled to possession of the house. *Hand v. In a suit subsequently brought by the lessor against the lessee for arrears of rent, the lessee did not deny that he was a tenant of the lessor, but disputed the extent of his holding and the rate of rent. Held, that the entry in the book of the lessor did not, although signed by the lessee, amount to a lease or to an agreement for a lease, but to an admission only, and could therefore be used as evidence against the lessee, although neither stamped nor registered. *NARAIN COOMARY v. At the date of the transfer of debt amounted with interest to R137. The plaintiff now sued to recover R129, being the principal and interest due on the hypothecation bond at the date of suit. Held, that registration of the deed of transfer was not compulsory, and the plaintiff was not precluded from proving the instrument of transfer and establishing his rights thereunder to a personal decree and to a charge on the land by reason of its not having been registered. *Satra Kumaji v. In May 1889 he agreed in writing to allow the defendants an abatement of rent to the extent of R100 per annum. This agreement was not registered, but was stated in the plaint in a previous suit brought by the plaintiff. He subsequently brought a suit against the defendants for the recovery of the entire amount of the original rent. Held, that the agreement did not operate as a lease, but was merely a variation of the lease, and that therefore registration was not necessary. Held, therefore, varying the order of the District Judge, that the decree for the entire amount of the original rent must be set aside, and a decree made for the amount of rent due at the reduced rate. *SATYESH CHUNDER SIRCAR v. map, a copy or copies of the map shall accompany the instrument when presented for registration. The other provisions of s. 21 are directory only. The circumstance therefore that the description of the parcels in the instrument does not specify the registration district, or sub-district, or division, or village, in which the property is situate, or the former occupancy, is not alone sufficient to disentitle a party getting an instrument registered, if the description in the instrument is sufficient to identify the property. In the matter of the petition of NARAINASAMI PILLAI . . . . . 4 Mad. 91

This description was so far erroneous in that the property was in reality situated in thana Amarapur, sub-district Banka, and bore a sudder jama of R919-15. Banka was, however, within the area of the district of Bhagulpur. The mortgage-bond was registered by the Sub-Registrar of Bhagulpur who was, under s. 7 of the Registration Act, authorized, in addition to his own duties, to exercise and perform the duties and powers of the Registrar of Bhagulpur. Held, by PIGOT, O'KINEALY, MACPHERSON, and GHOSE, JJ. (PETHERAM, C.J., dissenting), that the provisions of s. 21 of the Act had not been complied with, that the description of the property was misleading and insufficient for the purposes of identification, and that therefore no registration of the document had been effected within the provisions of the Registration Act. Held, by PETHERAM, C.J., that the description was sufficient to identify the property, and that, the Sub-Registrar having been authorized to exercise the powers and duties of the Registrar of Bhagulpur and the property being situate in sub-district Banka, the Sub-Registrar of which sub-district was subordinate to the Registrar of the district of Bhagulpur, the provisions of s. 28 of the Act being directory only, registration of the document was valid. *BAIJ NATH TEWARI v. The deed, being tendered in evidence, was objected to on the ground that it ought to be treated as unregistered, since it had been improperly accepted for registration. Held, that the error in accepting it, if error there was, did not invalidate the registration: see *Sah Mukhun Lal Panday v. The agreement was registered in book No. 4 under the Registration Act, 1877, and it contained no such description of the property as to satisfy the requirements of s. 21. Subsequently M transferred the decree to other persons, and the co-transferees applied, under s. 232 of the Civil Procedure Code, to have their names substituted for those of the original decree-holders. The judgment-debtor opposed the application on the grounds that M’s name had not been substituted for the names of the original decree-holders, who had transferred to him, and that the transfer by M were inoperative as the instruments of transfer had not been registered at the place where the substantial portion of the mortgaged property was situate in accordance with s. 28 of the Registration Act (III of 1877). The application was allowed by the Courts below. Held, that the objection in reference to s. 28 of the Registration Act could only properly be raised between the transferor and the transferee, and not by the judgment-debtor, and moreover had no force. *GULZARI LAL v. The words “some portion of the property” are not to be read as meaning some substantial portion of the property. The Sub-Registrar of Sealdah registered a mortgage-deed, dated October 10, 1896, purporting to hypothecate immoveable property within the area of the Sealdah Registration Office. In the suit brought on August 31, 1901, for the enforcement of the mortgage-bond, the defendant contended, inter alia, that no such property as described in the deed ever existed; and no satisfactory evidence having been given as to its existence:—Held, that the document could not take effect as a mortgage-bond; but, it being registered, the plaintiff’s claim was not barred though the suit was brought more than three years after the date of execution of the deed; and the plaintiff was entitled to a money-decree for the whole amount secured by the deed, with interest at the contract rate. *Baij Nath Tewari v. ————— s. 31 (1871, s. 31) and s. 85—Presentation—Residence of executant—Intending to register—Special cause—Registration Act, VIII of 1871, ss. 31 and 85. The words “any person intending to register any document” in s. 31 of the Registration Act, VIII of 1871, include not only the person or persons in whose favour a document is executed, but also any person or persons executing the same. Under the provisions of that section, therefore, the presentation of a document for registration on special cause shown, at the residence of a party executing it, is valid. The registering officer is the judge of the sufficiency of the special cause; and, if he is satisfied, the Civil Court has no power to question his decision on that point. Assuming the presentation at the residence of one of the executants of a document for registration to be an irregularity, it is one which, if committed in good faith, is covered by the provision of s. 85 of Act VIII of 1871. *ISAK MAHAMAD v. 1900, to the defendant. The latter sale-deed was duly registered on the 13th August 1900, and on the same day the sale-deed of the 6th August 1900 was presented for registration by a pleader acting under a power-of-attorney from Musammam Ram Bai. The power-of-attorney admittedly was not executed or authenticated in accordance with the provisions of s. 33 of the Registration Act. The registering officer, however, took no notice of the defect and after summoning Daulat Ram, who admitted execution, registered the sale-deed of the 6th August on the 17th November 1900. Held, that the document of the 6th August had not been legally registered. The terms of ss. 32 and 33 of the Registration Act are imperative and proper presentation by an authorized agent is an indispensable foundation of the registering officer's jurisdiction; nor was the error of the Sub-Registrar a mere defect in procedure that could be cured by s. 57 of the Registration Act or by the fact that the executant, when summoned by the registering officer, consented to the registration of the sale-deed of the 6th August. *Mujib-un-nissa v. The third person did not appear before the registering officer and did not admit or deny the execution of the deed on her part, but the other two persons stated that it had been executed without her knowledge or authority. It was held, that, under the provisions of ss. 34 and 35 of Act VIII of 1871, the registering officer was not warranted in registering the deed. The deed of sale, which the suit was brought to enforce, not having been registered according to law, could not be received in evidence of the sale, and the suit to enforce the sale was unmaintainable. *BAIJANATH v. 6. ——— Refusal to register—Disability of executants from minority, idiocy, or lunacy. The words of s. 35 of the Registration Act, VIII of 1871, which provide that "If all or any of the persons by whom the document [i.e., the document presented for registration] purports to be executed deny its execution, or if any such person appears to be a minor, an idiot, or a lunatic, or if any person by whom the document purports to be executed is dead, and his representative or assign denies its execution, the registering officer shall refuse to register the document," taken literally, seem to require the registering officer to refuse registration of a deed which purports to be executed by several persons if any one of them deny execution, or appear to be a minor, an idiot, or a lunatic. Since such a construction would cause great difficulty and injustice, and would be inconsistent with the language and tenor of the rest of the Act, the words in question must be read distributively, and construed to mean that the registering officer shall refuse to register the document quoad the persons who deny the execution of the deed and quoad such

10. and ss. 74 and 77—Denial of execution, what is—Non-appearance—Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 45. A, by an indenture of mortgage, dated 15th March 1887, mortgaged certain property to S to secure the repayment of Rs. 18,500 within two months. The deed was duly lodged for registration; but A (the mortgagor) neglected to appear at the registration office to admit execution. A summons was accordingly issued against him under s. 36 of the Registration Act III of 1877 to enforce his attendance, and was duly served upon him as required by s. 39. He, however, did not obey the summons, and neglected to attend the Sub-Registrar's office on the day appointed. He subsequently went away to Arabia without admitting execution, and was not expected to return to Bombay. S (the mortgagee) then applied to the Sub-Registrar to treat A's neglect to attend and admit execution as equivalent to a denial of execution and to "refuse to register" the deed under the provisions of s. 35 (last clause), in order that an application might be made to the Registrar, under s. 73, for the purpose of establishing the right of S (the mortgagee) to have the deed registered. The Sub-Registrar, however, considered that he could not treat A's non-appearance as a denial of execution. On application to the High Court under s. 45 of the Specific Relief Act, I of 1877:—Held, following Radhakrishnan Rowrea Dakna v. Choonilal, I. L. R. 5 Cal. 445, that the non-appearance of A in pursuance of the summons was equivalent to a denial of execution within the meaning of s. 35 of the Registration Act; and that, under the provisions of that section, the Sub-Registrar was bound to "refuse to register" the deed. defendant No. 2 in respect of the same property on the 17th November 1898, and got it registered on the 18th November 1898. On the 5th December 1898, the defendant No. 1 mortgaged the same property to the defendant No. 2; this deed of mortgage was registered on the 9th December, 1898. Defendant No. 2 obtained possession of the property. The plaintiff then sued to establish his mutgeni lease and to recover possession of the lands. Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover possession of the lands; for though his deed was registered after the defendant No. 2's deeds, yet the moment it was registered it had operation from the date of its execution by virtue of s. 47 of the Registration Act (III of 1877). Held, further, that it was immaterial whether the defendant No. 2's deeds were or were not accompanied by possession. Kali Das Mullick v. Kanhya Lal Pandit, L. R. 11 I. A. 218, and Bai Suraj v. Dattatram Dayashankar, I. L. R. 6 Bom. 380, followed and applied. NARAYAN v. LAXMAN (1905) . . . . . I. L. R. 29 Bom. 42

1. — s. 48 (1871, s. 48; 1866, s. 48) —Verbal contract between Hindus—Subsequent registered deed. Where a lien by verbal contract and deposit of title-deeds of immovable property in the Island of Bombay by a Hindu in favour of a Hindu was created before the 1st of January, 1865, when the first general Registration Act (XVI of 1864) came into force, and a Gujrati document (unregistered) was subsequently (on the 13th of June 1865) executed by the giver of the lien which set out its particulars, and acknowledged the receipt of the loan on account of which the lien was given, it was held, that the original oral contract of lien, being in itself a perfected transaction, was not merged in or invalidated by the subsequent document, and that therefore the fact of the latter not being registered did not affect the validity of the prior transaction. S. 48 of Act XX of 1866, which enacted that all instruments duly registered under that Act and relating to moveable or immovable property should take effect against any oral agreement relating to the same property, did not apply to oral agreements completed before Act XVI of 1864 came into force. JIVANDAS KESHAVJI v. FRAMJI NANABHAI . . . . . 7 Bom. O. C. 45

2. — Registration of illegal or fraudulent document—Priority—Oral agreement accompanied by possession—English principles of equity. Persons claiming under a registered document which has been given, accepted, and registered in fraud of a third party, and in collusion with the grantor, are not entitled to the benefit of s. 48 of the Registration Act (VIII of 1871), and therefore the registration of a document of title which has been procured in fraud of a party possessing a prior equitable title, or with actual notice of his prior equitable title, does not deprive such party of his priority. Registration cannot confer validity upon an instrument which is ultra vires, or illegal, or fraudulent. The reason for the exception made by s. 48 of the Regulation Act, VII of 1871, in favour of an oral agreement accompanied by possession is that by such possession the parties who rely on a subsequent registered deed had, or might, if they had been reasonably vigilant, have had, previously to their entering into their contract with the vendor and to their taking a conveyance, notice, by the fact of such possession, that there was some prior claim to the property. Therefore, where there is actual notice of a prior oral agreement, although unaccompanied by possession, the object of the Legislature is fully attained. *Hicks v. 5. — Priority—Verbal sale with possession—Registered deed. Held, that a deed of sale of immovable property, duly registered under Act XX of 1866, was to be preferred to a prior verbal sale of the same property accompanied by possession, where it appeared that it was the intention of the parties to the verbal sale to complete the transaction by a deed. Semle: That the effect would have been the same if there had been no such intention. BHANDU VALAD RAJRAM v. DAMAJI VALAD JIVAJI . . . . . 6 Bom. A. C. 59

6. — Priority—Possession under unregistered lease. Where possession of immovable property has been given under an unregistered lease, a subsequent grantee of a registered lease cannot maintain a suit to evict the lessee in possession, on the ground of the priority of his deed under s. 48, Act XX of 1866. *NARSING PORKEAT v. Subsequently on the 3rd January 1896 S executed a registered bainanamah in respect of the same property in favour of R and H, which was followed by a registered deed of conveyance in their favour, dated the 9th January 1896, and delivery of possession, although R and H had notice of the previous contract with J before the registration of the bainanamah and execution of the deed of conveyance in their favour. Held, that, having regard to s. 54 of the Transfer of Property Act and s. 27 (b) of the Specific Relief Act, in a suit for the specific performance of contract brought by J neither the bainanamah nor the deed of conveyance in favour of R and H could prevail against the prior unregistered contract of J. Held, further, that the unregistered document of the 27th December 1895 came under s. 17, cl. (h), of Act III of 1887, and was not inadmissible in evidence for want of registration; and that the registered bainanamah of the 3rd January 1896 did not take effect against it, under s. 50 of that Act. HURNANDUN SINGH v. The deed of sale was not registered. Afterwards, by a registered deed of sale, A conveyed all his right, title, and interest in the same decree to B. Held, that the right to execute the decree as a mortgage-decree did not pass to B, the deed of sale not affecting immoveable property without registration. *KOOB LALL CHOWDHRY v. 11. ————— and s. 17—Admissibility of unregistered sale-deed—Suit for specific performance of contract to sell land. The defendant executed a sale-deed of certain land to the plaintiff. The instrument bore R1 stamp only. The plaintiff alleged that the defendant had improperly refused to register the sale-deed and prayed for a decree compelling its registration and for the possession of the land in question. Held, that the unregistered instrument was admissible in evidence, and that, in any case, secondary evidence of its contents was admissible, the document having remained unregistered through no fault of the plaintiff. *NAGAPPA v. 15. ————— Suit for money-decree on mortgage-deed of immoveable property—Admissibility of document in evidence. A sued in the Small Cause Court on the covenant of a mortgage-deed for a money-decree. The deed, being unregistered, was held inadmissible in evidence. Held, on reference to the High Court, that the unregistered mortgage-deed, being in its terms indivisible and disclosing one transaction only which it would be imperative on the plaintiff to prove for the purpose of making out his case, was, under s. 49 of Act VIII of 1871, inadmissible in evidence to prove a fact for which registration was unnecessary. MATTOXGENEY DOSSEE v. RAMNARAIN SADKHA

I. L. R. 4 Calc. 83 : 2 C. L. R. 428

16. ————— Admissibility of document requiring registration—Divisible transaction. When a transaction is indivisible, and the registration of the document evidencing it is by law compulsory, the document will not be admissible in evidence if not duly registered ; but when the transaction is divisible,—as when upon a loan of money it is agreed (i) that the loan shall be secured by a bond containing a covenant for repayment of the sum advanced with interest within a certain time, and also (ii) that certain designated property shall be hypothecated as collateral security for the repayment of the loan,—the same rule does not apply, and an unregistered bond for the amount advanced, with interest, containing a further provision that as collateral security for the amount advanced certain property should remain hypothecated, may be used as evidence of the loan, although inadmissible to prove the hypothecation. *KRISHTO LALL GHOSE v. 17. ————— Admissibility of unregistered bond in evidence to prove money-debt—Collateral security. In order to secure a loan of R120, the defendant executed a bond to repay the loan with interest, which provided that by way of collateral security certain immoveable property should be hypothecated. The bond was not registered. In a suit upon the bond praying for a money-decree against the defendant and for a declaration of a lien upon the property hypothecated, it was objected that the bond was inadmissible in evidence by reason of its not being registered. Held, that the bond might be taken as divisible in its nature, as being a money-bond with a provision that certain property should be hypothecated as collateral security, and that it was therefore admis-

18. ————— Unregistered mortgage-bond pledging land—Consent of parties—Power of Court. Where land of the value of R100 or upwards was mortgaged on a bond which was not registered, as it ought to have been, under the Registration Act in force at the time:—Held, that the bond could only be sued upon as a money-bond, and though the suit might be brought in a Court within whose jurisdiction the land was not situated, the Judge would have no right, even with the consent of the parties, to deal with it as a mortgage, or to make any decree affecting the land in dispute. SHIBO SOONDUREE DEBIA v. SOWDAMINEE DEBIA

25 W. R. 78

19. ————— Admissibility in evidence of unregistered deed in suit to recover debt. Where an instrument purports to create an interest in immoveable property only as a collateral security for the payment of money, and is also a simple contract or bond for the payment of a debt, and where effect is sought to be given to the instrument only as a simple contract, it is admissible in evidence in a suit to recover the debt, though it has not been registered. So far as it is a contract for the payment of money, it is an instrument the registration of which is made optional by s. 18 of Act XX of 1866. VELLAYA PADYACHY v. MOORTHY PADYACHY . . . . . 4 Mad. 174

20. ————— Instrument creating interest in immoveable property—Suit for money-debt. The plaintiff sued, as the assignee of a mortgagee of immoveable property, to recover the amount of the debt from the mortgagor in pursuance of an express contract to pay the debt contained in the mortgage. The mortgage was executed before the Registration Act (XVI of 1864) came into operation. The assignment to the plaintiff was executed after the Registration Act (XX of 1866) became law. Held, per BITTLESTON, INNES, and COLLETT, JJ., that the assignment, being an instrument operating to create an interest in immoveable property, and as such requiring to be registered under s. 17 of Act XX of 1866, was not admissible in evidence in a suit to enforce the personal obligation only. Per SCOTLAND, C.J.—That an instrument which has the two-fold operation of a simple contract or bond to pay a debt and a collateral mortgage security for the debt is admissible in evidence for the purpose of proving the simple contract debt. *ACHOO BAYAHAM v. 22. ————— Admissibility in evidence of document inadmissible under Act XX of 1866 as not being registered—Suit for money-debt on document. A suit was brought to recover money secured by a mortgage in writing of immoveable property made in 1870 whilst the Registration Act (XX of 1866) was in force. By Act XX of 1866 the document was not admissible in evidence even to enforce the demand for money, the document not having been registered. By Act VIII of 1871 (the Registration Act) the document was rendered admissible when the suit was brought. Held, that the document was admissible in evidence. *GUDURI JAGANNADHAM v. 27. ————— Admissibility in evidence of unregistered bond—Suit for money due on bond. An unregistered bond containing the condition that the lender will get possession of certain land in default of payment by the borrower within a specified time is admissible in evidence in case the lender sues, not to enforce any charge or lien against the land, but seeks for personal relief in the shape of a decree against the defendant for the payment of the bond-debt. *ESHREE RAI v. In such conveyance G acknowledged his liability for the debt, but he died before it was registered and it did not operate. mortgaged, by way of conditional sale, certain immoveable property as security for the loan, and in which it was provided that they should pay certain interest on such sum annually, and should pay such sum on the expiration of five years from the date of such instrument, and in the event of failure in these respects that the plaintiffs might apply for foreclosure. On the 18th January 1879 the plaintiffs sued the defendants for the balance of such sum and interest, waiving their claim on such property and suing for such balance as a simple debt, as such instrument was not registered. Held, following Sheo Dial v. Prag Dat Misr, 1 L. R. 3 All. 229, that inasmuch as such instrument involved a personal obligation of the defendants distinct and severable from the obligation in respect of such property, such instrument, notwithstanding it was not registered, was admissible as evidence in support of the claim to enforce that money-obligation; and it was also admissible in proof of the fact that the debt was not exigible from the defendants until on and after the expiration of five years from the date of the loan. *LACHMAN SINGH v. The unregistered deed could not be admitted in evidence, nor parol evidence of the contract be given under which A alleged that he acquired his title. A ought to have proceeded under s. 83 of Act XX of 1866. *RAHMA-TULLA v. S having failed to deliver a portion of such land, M sued him for damages in respect of such portion according to the terms of the lease, not seeking to enforce the hypothecation, as the lease was not registered, but seeking only a money-decree. Held, that the lease, being unregistered, could not be received as evidence even of S's personal liability thereunder. Sheo Dial v. Prag Dat Misr, I. L. R. 3 All. 229, distinguished. *MARTIN v. 37. ———— Admissibility in evidence—Suit for damages for breach of covenants in unregistered deed—Document containing covenants for title—Act III of 1877, s. 17—Estoppel. S L, by a deed of gift of 16th February 1847, granted and assured to S, his daughter, certain immoveable property. By a subsequent unregistered deed of gift of 15th July 1865, S L purported, in consideration of natural love and affection, to grant and convey the same property, the value of which exceeded R100, to B R, the husband of S, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns. The last-mentioned deed contained covenants on the part of S L, his heirs, executors, and administrators with B R, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns for title to "the hereditaments and premises hereinbefore expressed to be hereby granted and assured unto and to the use of the said B R, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns." S died in the lifetime of B R, who in 1867 mortgaged the premises comprised in the deed of 15th July 1865, and died in 1868. In 1870 the mortgagee sold the premises by auction, under the power of sale contained in the mortgage-deed; the plaintiff became the purchaser; and the mortgagee, on 24th March 1871, executed to him a conveyance of the premises, which were then in the possession of the surviving members of the family of B R and S. The plaintiff, having failed in a suit for ejectment against the parties in possession, who relied on the prior gift to S, sued the representatives of S L for damages for breach of the covenants for title contained in the unregistered deed of the 15th July 1865. Held, that though, as in Tukaram v. Khandoji, 6 Bom. O. C. 134, and Sangappa v. Basappa, 7 Bom. A. C. 1, an unregistered document requiring registration may be admitted in evidence for certain purposes, yet it cannot be looked at so far as it affects the immoveable property comprised therein, nor so far as it is evidence of any transaction affecting such property, and that, excluding the part of the document of 15th July 1865 which purported to be the conveyance to B R, the covenant for title sued on in the present suit was itself ambiguous and uncertain; and there being nothing to connect the premises, to which the covenant related, with the premises conveyed to the plaintiff, no breach of the covenant sued upon had been proved. The Court being precluded by the operation of the Registration Act (III of 1877) from looking at the deed of 15th July 1865 so far as it was a conveyance, the defendants were not estopped from contending that, nothing having passed under it to B R, nothing had passed to the plaintiff under the subsequent deeds, and that consequently the plaintiff was not entitled to maintain this suit. *RAJU BALU v. 38. ———— and s. 17—Covenant in unregistered lease—Suit for specific performance. The plaintiff leased a house to the defendant for three years by an unregistered instrument which contained a covenant by the lessee that he would purchase the house at a certain price on an event which took place. The plaintiff now sued for specific performance of the covenant. Held, that the unregistered instrument was not admissible in evidence. The covenant sought to be enforced depended on the lease, and the latter being invalid for want of registration, the former must also fail: the suit therefore should be dismissed. *SAMBAYYA v. 42. ——— Inadmissibility of evidence where registrable document is not registered. The plaintiff sued the defendant to recover rent due upon a muchilka executed by the defendant. The defendant admitted that he occupied the land under the express contract contained in the muchilka. The muchilka was a document the registration of which was compulsory under the Registration Acts, but was not registered. Held, that the plaintiff could not establish his case without putting the muchilka in evidence, and it was inadmissible, not having been registered. MORRIS v. 43. ——— Evidence where contract is unregistered and therefore inadmissible. Where defendant, after executing a bill of sale in respect of certain lands and receiving the full amount of purchase-money agreed upon, had repudiated the contract and refused to make over possession, it was held, that, though the fact of the deed of sale not being registered precluded it, under s. 13, Act XVI of 1864, from being admitted as evidence, yet plaintiff was not excluded from showing by other evidence that he performed his part of the contract. There is nothing in that section which says that no contract purporting to create or transfer any right, title, or interest in land shall be recognised by the Civil Court unless reduced to writing. Held, also, that there was no reason why plaintiff should not be permitted to show that non-registration was owing, not to any fault of his own, but to the fraudulent conduct of his

The bill of sale had been duly registered and was not disputed by B, but B produced an unregistered ikrarnamah, executed by A, to prove that the sale was not absolute, but only by way of mortgage. B alleged that the terms of the bill of sale were qualified and explained by the ikrarnamah. Held, that the ikrarnamah was inadmissible in evidence, as it had not been registered under s. 13 of Act XVI of 1864, but that the Court might look at other and independent evidence, viz., the acts and conduct of the parties, to throw a light upon their intention. PARABDI SAHANI v. over—Proof of terms of lease. The plaintiff sued in 1881 to recover certain land and arrears of rent from the defendant, alleging that the defendant's ancestor entered on the land as a tenant in 1865 under a lease for five years, which was not registered. The defendant denied the lease of 1865, admitted that she was the tenant of the land, but denied that she could be ejected, and claimed to deduct from the rent certain emoluments. Held, that the plaintiff could not prove the tenancy alleged in the plaint, inasmuch as the lease of 1865 was not registered, and therefore could not eject the defendant. NANGALI v. (b), of Act III of 1877], being unregistered, was ineffectual to affect the title of the purchaser. Some years after, the parties executed a deed of conveyance, making the same assignment confirming the former instrument, and setting it forth in a schedule. The latter instrument was registered. In a suit in which the ownership of the property was contested:—Held, that the fact of the prior deed not having affected the property, being unregistered, was no reason why the deed afterwards registered should not be admitted as evidence of title. In this there had been nothing contravening the object of the Registration Act. MITCHELL v. MATHURA DAS I. L. R. 8 All. 6 L. R. 12 I. A. 150

The second, third and fourth defendants pleaded a sale to them by the same party, the first defendant, on the 23rd March 1867; and that the first defendant after receiving consideration in full, had improperly refused to have their deed of sale registered. The provisions of s. 49 of the Registration Act of 1866 precluded the reception in evidence of the prior unregistered instrument of conveyance, but the lower Courts held that certain admissions made by first defendant in an inquiry held before the registration officer were admissible in evidence to prove the sale to third and fourth defendants. The suit was therefore dismissed with costs. Upon special appeal:—Held, by INNES and KINDERSLEY, JJ., that the admissions made by first defendant were evidence against plaintiff, as made by one from whom plaintiff derived his title, but that the provisions of the Registration Act precluded any effect being given to the sale evidenced by such admissions; there being a writing, the sale could not be proved by mere oral evidence. By INNES, J.—The term "instrument," in s. 49 of Act XX of 1866, is used on the understanding that the writing is not merely evidence of the transaction, but is the transaction itself. SOMU GURUKHAL v. RANGAMMAL 7 Mad. 13

54. ————— *Suit to compel registration—Evidence of contract—Document being unregistered held inadmissible to prove the contract sought to be registered. The defendants agreed to let certain premises to the plaintiff for a term of three years from the 1st of November 1883 at a monthly rent of R200. Subsequently to the making of the agreement, viz., on the 17th January 1884, the plaintiff caused a writing to be prepared, which, as he alleged, contained the terms of the lease agreed on, and, having signed it, handed it over to the defendants. The defendants did not sign it, and the document remained with them. The plaintiff alleged that he did not ask the defendants to sign it, as the defendants told him they would get a copy of it prepared, which they would sign and send to him. The defendants alleged that, at the time the document was given to them by the plaintiff, they objected to it on the ground that it was incomplete, inasmuch as it did not contain two of the terms agreed on which prohibited the plaintiff from sub-letting or altering the premises, and required him to maintain them in their then existing condition. The plaintiff denied these allegations of the defendants. In May 1884 the plaintiff, through his attorneys, called upon the defendants to lodge the document for registration. The defendants refused, and the plaintiff filed the present suit, praying—(i) that the defendants might be ordered to lodge the said document for registration and do all such acts as might be necessary to obtain registration thereof; (ii) that, if necessary, another similar document might be prepared and registered; (iii) that, in the alternative, the defendants should pay R4,000 damages. At the trial the plaintiff raised (inter alia) an issue as to the truth of the defendants' allegation that the agreement of lease comprised terms forbidding the plaintiff to sub-let or alter, etc. The defendants objected to the proposed issue. In the course of the hearing the plaintiff tendered the document of the 17th January 1884 in evidence. The defendants objected, on the ground that it was unregistered. The Court held that it was admissible as a mere writing, with reference to which, irrespective of its contents, the other evidence in the case was given. At the close of the plaintiff's case the defendants declined to call evidence, and judgment was given on all the issues in favour of the plaintiff. The defendants appealed, and contended that they were not bound to produce the document for registration, and that the Court was wrong in permitting the above issue to be raised and determined in this suit, and that, the document being inadmissible as evidence of the contract, no oral evidence of the contract was receivable. The plaintiff contended that there was an implied obligation upon the defendants to register the document arising from the fact that the document contained the true contract between the parties, and that the object of the suit being to compel registration, the document, although not registered, could be given in evidence to prove the contract between the parties. Held (reversing the decree of the Court below), that there was no obligation upon the defendants to produce the document for registration, and that they could not be compelled to do so. Held, also, that the object of giving the document in evidence being to establish the contract of lease for the purpose of drawing an inference from it, the document was for that purpose inadmissible, being unregistered, and that the Court below, although admitting it originally as merely a piece of paper, was wrong in using it as evidence of the contract between the parties.

The plaintiff delivered the kabuliati to the defendant, and was put into possession of the property. The defendant did not execute the cowlie and did not register the kabuliati, and subsequently improperly deprived the plaintiff of his possession. Plaintiff brought a suit for damages for breach of contract. Held, on a question as to whether the kabuliati was admissible in evidence, having regard to s. 49 of Act III of 1877, since it had not been registered, that, since the plaintiff's action was not founded on an alleged title under a lease granted by the defendant, but was an action for damages for breach of the contract to execute the lease, the kabuliati was admissible in evidence to prove the contract. *Hurjivan Virji v. Admissibility of evidence of endorsement to show payment. The plaintiff hypothecated certain land to the defendant by a duly registered instrument, and subsequently paid off the debt and received back the instrument. At the time of payment the defendant made an endorsement on the bond to the following effect: "25th Kartik of Sukla. Rupees two hundred and sixty-three, principal including interest, was received on account of this bond, and there is therefore no lien whatever." Some time afterwards plaintiff discovered that what he had paid in redemption of the mortgage-claim was in excess of what was due, and he brought a small cause suit to recover the amount overpaid, tendering in evidence the endorsement on the bond. The objection was taken that the endorsement, not being registered, was not receivable in evidence under s. 49 of the Registration Act of 1866. The District Munsif dismissed the suit upon the ground that the endorsement was not signed by the defendant, and was therefore not admissible in evidence, but referred to the High Court the question whether the evidence was rightly excluded. Held, by SCOTLAND, C.J., and INNES, J., that the fact of there being no signature to the endorsement was no objection to its reception as confirmatory evidence of the sum received by the defendant. By SCOTLAND, C.J.—That the endorsement was admissible evidence for the purpose for which it was offered, although not registered, the endorsement not being used as evidence of the creation or discharge of an obligation, but merely as confirmatory proof of a fact provable by oral evidence, although stated in writing. 61. ———— Unregistered contract for sale of land subsequently attached in execution—Evidence of transfer of ownership in property. In execution of a decree against S and P, property was attached on the 11th February 1891 and sold by auction to the plaintiff in July 1892. The defendants, however, alleged that at the date of attachment the property did not belong to S and P, as they had sold it to them (the defendants) on the 22nd January 1891, under a contract of sale of that date. Their contract had not been registered. Held, that by cl. (b) of s. 17 of the Indian Registration Act (III of 1877) the contract needed registration if it was intended that it should affect the land (s. 49). Not being registered, it did not operate to transfer the ownership, and could not be received in evidence of any transaction affecting the land, ie., it could not be used to show that the ownership had passed from the vendor to the purchaser. The property in question was therefore, at the date of attachment, the property of S and P, and under the attachment and sale in execution it passed to

62. ———— Lease—Agreement to indemnify contained in lease—Suit for indemnity. A lease of land for nine years contained a clause by which the lessor agreed to indemnify the lessee in case he should incur any loss in consequence of disputes which might arise as to the land between the lessor and his kinsmen. The lease was not registered. After the lessee had held the land under the lease for two years, a suit for possession was brought against him, and the lessor and he were dispossessed and obliged to pay mense profits. He then brought this suit against the lessor under the above clause in the lease. Held, that the lease, being unregistered, was not admissible in evidence, and could not be looked at. The clause on which the plaintiff sued could not be separated from the lease itself, and the plaintiff's claim must therefore be rejected. GURUNATH SHRINIVAS DESAI v. CHENBASAPPA . . . I. L. In a suit to enforce the mortgage the one made by the widow was held to be invalid. Notes promising to pay interest, additional to that contracted for in the mortgages, had been signed by the husband, which, it was held, could not affect the right to redeem, being unregistered. TIKA RAM v. being raised that the deed of assignment had not been registered, he subsequently applied for the return of the deed that it might be registered, and it was returned accordingly. The deed was afterwards duly registered. Held, (i) that the deed of assignment was not a document which comprised immoveable property within the meaning of s. 49 of the Registration Act (III of 1877), a decree for sale not being immoveable property as defined in s. 3; (ii) that consequently, although the assignee might not, under the latter portion of s. 49, use the deed for the purpose of proving his title, there was no provision in the Act saying that he should not take title under the deed; (iii) that the position of the assignee when he made his application on the 13th November 1886 was that he was unable to prove that there was a title by assignment in himself; (iv) that the subsequent registration cured the absence of registration on the 13th November 1886, and, under s. 47 of the Registration Act, the document thereupon had full effect, and related back to its execution. ABDUL MAJID v. It was further found that the plaintiff had taken his assignment with notice of the above agreement and tender. The agreement was in writing, but not registered. Held, that, though the agreement was not admissible in evidence as creating an interest in land, still it might be used for the purpose of obtaining specific performance, and the plaintiff, having purchased the equity of redemption with notice as above, was not entitled to redeem. ADAKKALAM v. S. 49, read with s. 60, only means that a document to be admissible in evidence for the purposes of the former section, must be registered, i.e., the officer must, under s. 60, have put upon it the certificate required by that provision. If he has done so, the document bearing such certificate becomes admissible in evidence: if he has not, or there has been no registration of the document, then such document is inadmissible. Where the document bears such a certificate, it is registered within the meaning of s. 60, and becomes under the second paragraph thereof admissible in evidence, and the operation of the second paragraph is not interfered with by s. 49. Where, therefore, the lower Appellate Court rejected as inadmissible in evidence under s. 49 a deed-of-gift of immoveable property upon which was endorsed a certificate under s. 60, on the ground that the person presenting it for registration and admitting execution was not qualified to do so under ss. 32 and 35, and the registration was consequently void and the document not registered under s. 17 (a):—Held, that the Court was wrong in so doing, and ought to have looked at and dealt with the document. Har Sahai v. ——— ss. 49 and 50—Registration—Priority—Unregistered deed accompanied with possession—Subsequent sale by registered deed—Effect of possession—Possession, for purposes of notice, equivalent to registration—Duty of purchaser to inquire as to nature of possession. On the 16th June 1876 Revapuri mortgaged the lands in suit to the first defendant, with possession, and the latter on the 26th June 1876 leased them to the second defendant for one year. The second defendant remained in possession as tenant after the year had expired. On the 3rd December 1878, while defendant 2 was in possession of the lands as tenant, Revapuri sold to him (defendant 2) her equity of redemption for R95. The deed of sale was not compulsorily registrable under the Act then in force, and, owing to the death of Revapuri, it was not registered. On the 8th December 1895 the heir of Revapuri sold the equity of redemption in the mortgage of 1876, by a registered deed, to the plaintiff. At the date of this sale to the plaintiff the second defendant was still in actual possession. The plaintiff brought this suit to redeem the lands from the mortgagee (defendant 1), and added defendant 2 as a party, alleging that he was in possession as a tenant of the first defendant. The lower Courts passed a decree for the plaintiff holding that his registered deed gave him priority over the second defendant, whose deed was unregistered. On appeal:—Held (reversing the decree of the lower Courts), that the plaintiff's suit should be dismissed. Possession, in certain cases, for the purposes of notice, has the same effect as registration. The plaintiff, at the date of his purchase, had notice of the possession of the second defendant, and, that being so, it was the plaintiff's duty to inquire of the second defendant under what title he held; and, if the plaintiff had done so, instead of assuming that the second defendant was still holding merely as tenant, he would have discovered that the second defendant had purchased the land. *KONDIBA BIN BABAJI v. 1. s. 50 (1871, s. 50; 1866, s. 505; 1864, s. 68; 1843, s. 2)—Priority—Operation of section—Meaning of the words "duly registered" in the section—Registration Act (VIII of 1871), s. 50—Contest between instruments executed before Act III of 1877, which are not both optionally registrable—Vendor and purchaser—Purchaser omitting to take possession—Fraud—Estoppel. S. 50 of the Registration Act (III of 1877) has no retrospective effect. The words "duly registered" under that section mean duly registered under that Act, and not under any prior Act. The section has no application to cases where the contest is between an unregistered instrument whenever executed and a registered instrument executed before the Act came into force. It applies only to cases where the registered instrument is subsequent to the Act. A sold certain land to B by a sale-deed dated 15th July 1871. The deed was optionally registrable, and was not registered. A continued in possession after the date of the sale. A sold the same land to the plaintiff by a deed of sale, dated 1st February 1872. The deed was registered, its registration being compulsory. It was unaccompanied with possession. In 1882 B obtained possession of the land from A's sons, and sold it to the defendant by a sale-deed dated 14th October 1882. This deed was registered and accompanied with possession. In 1883 the plaintiff sued for possession of the land in dispute, relying on his registered deed of sale of 1st February 1872. The defendant relied on his vendor's sale-deed on the 15th July 1871. Held, that under Act VIII of 1871, which governed the present case, there could be no competition between the sale-deeds of 1871 and 1872, the registration of the one being optional, whilst that of the other was compulsory. The registration of the plaintiff's deed therefore did not give it priority over the earlier deed under which the defendant claimed. Held, also, that the defendant's vendor by merely omitting to take possession of the land on his purchase was not guilty of any positive fraud or of any concealment or negligence so gross as to amount to fraud that would entitle the plaintiff to relief against him. *SHIVRAM v. The deed of sale was not registered. On the 14th February 1864 D mortgaged, by a registered mortgage, the same two fields to B, who then knew that H was in possession of the fields as purchaser. Held, that, according to the true construction of Regulation IX of 1827, s. 6, cl. 1, the title of H having been completed by possession, there was no property in the fields left in D to mortgage to B, and that therefore H (the purchaser) had a better title to the fields than B, the mortgagee. Semle: The effect would have been the same under the provisions of Act XVI of 1864 or of Act XX of 1865. 13. Registered and unregistered deeds—Priority—Possession—Fraud. Act XIX of 1843 gave the preference, generally speaking, to a subsequent kobala which was registered over a prior one unregistered. To avoid its operation, a plaintiff had to show that the vendor not only sold and parted with his rights in the property, but actually made over possession to him. 55. ————— Priority—Deed of sale registered under Act VIII of 1871. S. 50 of Act III of 1877 is not retrospective in its application; and therefore a deed of sale registered under Act VIII of 1871, and not having, under that Act, priority over unregistered documents relating to the same property, acquires no new rights of priority by the passing of Act III of 1877, though coming within the larger class of registered documents which, by s. 50 of the later Act, have priority over unregistered documents. *KANITKAR v. 56. ————— Priority between registered and unregistered documents—Optional and compulsory registration—Acts XVI of 1864, XX of 1866, and VIII of 1871—Interpretation of statutes. The registration of documents under Act XVI of 1864, XX of 1866, or VIII of 1871 does not give them effect as against documents which might have been, but were not, registered under one of those Acts. S. 50 of Act III of 1877 has no retrospective operation upon such documents: the preference which it gives to registered over unregistered documents is confined to documents registered under Act III of 1877. According to the registration law as it stood before Act III of 1877 came into force, there was no competition grounded upon registration between documents optionally and documents compulsorily registrable. The Legislature, while possessing the power to divest existing rights, is not (in construing statutes) to be understood as intending to exercise that power retrospectively to any greater extent than the express terms of, or necessary implication from, its language requires. A and B (two brothers) purchased a house on the 19th July 1871, and mortgaged it to the plaintiff for Rs 585, by a mortgage, dated the 21st July 1871, and duly registered. In 1874 the plaintiff sued upon his mortgage and obtained a decree, directing satisfaction of his claim by the sale of the house. The house was accordingly sold by the Court and purchased by the plaintiff for Rs 325. He obtained a certificate of sale, dated the 15th October 1875. The certificate was duly registered. On applying to the Court for possession of the house, the plaintiff was resisted by the defendant, on the ground that he was in possession under two mortgages, dated the 20th July 1871, and executed, the one by A and the other by B. These mortgages were not registered, both of them being for sums less than Rs 100. The plaintiff's application having been rejected by the Court, he brought a suit for possession of the house. Both the lower Courts allowed his claim holding that his mortgage and certificate of sale, being registered, were entitled to priority over the unregistered mortgages of the defendant under s. 50 of Act III of 1877. On appeal to the High Court:—Held, that the case was governed by the law of registration as it stood before Act III of 1877 came into force, and that the registration of the plaintiff's mortgage and certificate of sale, both of which were compulsorily registrable, did not confer upon them

57. ————— Sale under registered and unregistered deeds—Innocent purchasers. Per GARTH, C.J.—The only reasonable construction of s. 50 of Act VIII of 1871 is, that where property under the value of Rs 100 is purchased by two innocent purchasers, the one by a registered and the other by an unregistered deed, and there is no fraud shown, or other circumstances which in equity would protect the unregistered purchaser against the registered, the title of the latter shall prevail. The section contains no such qualification as that a purchaser under an unregistered deed who has obtained possession would have priority as against a subsequent purchaser under a registered deed, and the Courts are not at liberty to import such a qualification into the section. Per PONTIFEX, J.—S. 50 is intended to apply to the case of two innocent purchasers, giving the preference to the one who has taken the greater precaution to secure his title, but is not intended to apply to the case of a subsequent purchaser who registers, but who at the date of his purchase had actual notice of a prior unregistered purchase. *FUZULUDEEN KHAN v. Subsequently, S sold the remaining 6 annas to other persons; and then, on the 27th September 1876, sold another 1 anna share in the same property to B for Rs 140, the bill of sale with respect to this purchase being duly registered under the provisions of Act III of 1877. In a suit by A, who had never obtained possession of the 1 anna share he had purchased, against S, B, and the purchasers of the other 6 annas shares:—Held, that he was not entitled to succeed, as his bill of sale, being unregistered, was not entitled to priority over B's which had been duly registered. *Lachman Das v. 68. ————— Priority—Certificate of sale in execution of decree. A certificate of the sale of land in execution of a decree under the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure does not, by registration, entitle the holder thereof to priority over a purchaser of the land under an optionally registrable deed of sale. NARASAYYA v. JUNGAM . . . . . I. L. R. 7 Mad. 418

69. ————— Registered and unregistered documents—Priority. A vendor sold the same property twice over to different people,—once by an unregistered conveyance (the purchase-money being under R100) giving to his vendee possession, and a second time to another person by a registered conveyance at a time when the first vendee was out of possession. Held by the Court (PRINSEP, J., dissenting), in a suit by the first vendee to recover possession, that the fact of a vendor having given possession to the first and unregistered purchaser, even if such possession continued to the date of the second conveyance, did not necessarily prevent the operation of that part of s. 50 of the Registration Act, 1877, which enacts that “a registered document shall take effect, as regards the property therein comprised, against every unregistered document relating to the same property.” The only case in which the title of the prior unregistered purchaser can prevail against the subsequent registered purchaser for value is when the latter takes with notice of the title of the former. Per PRINSEP, J.—A purchaser under a registered conveyance subsequently executed cannot succeed in a suit to eject one who holds possession under a prior but unregistered conveyance, registration of which is optional. *NARAIN CHUNDER CHUCKERBUTTY v. 72. ————— Priority—Registered and unregistered documents. S. 50 of the Registration Act, 1877, affects alike documents which it is optional, as well as those which it is compulsory, to register, and its effect is not modified by the fact that the subsequent registered purchaser buys with full notice of a prior unregistered encumbrance. *Fuzludeen Khan v. 74. ————— Priority—Registered and unregistered documents. Certain land was hypothecated to T in 1861 to secure repayment of R2,000 and interest. The deed was never registered. In 1873 the land was mortgaged to K, and the mortgage was registered. In 1879, in execution of a decree—to which T was no party—upon this mortgage, the land was sold and bought by D, and the sale certificate registered. T then sued to recover the amount due upon the deed of 1861 by sale of the land. Held, that the claim of T was not defeated by the sale to D. TIMM v. DEVA RAI . . . . . I. L. R. 5 Mad. 265

On the 30th September 1876 A mortgaged the same land to C for R300 by a registered deed. On the 20th December 1877 A sold the same land to B for R70 by an unregistered deed. In 1879 C sued A upon his mortgage-deed, obtained a decree, and attached the land in B's possession. B objected, but his claim was rejected. Held, in a suit by B to set aside the attachment by C, that C's claim, being based on a document registered within the meaning of s. 50 of the Registration Act, 1877, was superior to B's claim, and that the suit must be dismissed) *KOTA MUTHANNA CHETTI v. decree obtained against the mortgagor, and the purchaser registered his certificate of sale and obtained possession of the land:—Held, that no question of priority under s. 50 of the Registration Act, 1877, could arise, inasmuch as the purchaser acquired only the right, title, and interest of the mortgagor subject to the mortgage. Sobhagchand Gulabchand v. Bhaichand, I. L. R. 6 Bom. 893, approved and followed. Semble: A certificate of sale issued by a Court under s. 316 of the Code of Civil Procedure, if duly registered, takes effect, under s. 50 of the Registration Act, 1877, against all unregistered encumbrances. *RAMARAJA v. 77. ————— Priority of mortgages—First and second mortgagees. S and L held mortgage-bonds executed in their favour by the same person. S's bond was dated the 16th June 1882, and was registered, the registration being compulsory. L's bond was of prior date, the 30th December 1880, and was not registered, the registration being optional. Both instituted suits on their bonds against the obligor, and obtained decrees for sale of the property, the decrees being passed on the same day. The property was attached in execution of both decrees on the 14th August 1882. Held, that the registered bond of the plaintiff took effect, as regards the property comprised in it, against the defendant's unregistered bond, under s. 50 of the Registration Act (III of 1877), which gave priority to the incumbrance created by the former bond over the incumbrance created by the latter, and this priority was not affected by the subsequent decrees obtained on the bonds which only gave effect to the respective rights under the bonds. The meaning of s. 295 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882, is that, when immoveable property is sold in execution of decrees ordering its sale for the discharge of incumbrances, the sale-proceeds are to be applied in satisfaction of incumbrances according to their priority. *SHAH RAM v. The registration of both deeds was optional, the former under Act VIII of 1871 and the latter under Act III of 1877. J subsequently satisfied the mortgage under the registered deed of 1880, which was delivered to him. M then brought a suit to recover the money due to him under the mortgage-deed of 1872 by sale of the mortgaged property. Held, by OLDFIELD, J., that, applying the rule laid down by the Privy Council in Gokaldas Gopaldas v. Purnomal Premsukhdas, I. L. 80. ————— Registered and unregistered documents—Mortgagee under registered deed competing with holder of decree on prior unregistered mortgage-deed. The words in s. 50 of the Registration Act (III of 1877), "not being a decree or order, whether such unregistered document be of the same nature as the registered document or not," mean that, if a decree has been obtained to bring property to sale under a hypothecation-bond or under a money-bond, and under that decree the property has been attached, that decree cannot be ousted by a subsequent registered instrument. The section cannot in any way make a decree effect a transfer of more than the interest which the judgment-debtor possessed. Held, that a mortgage-deed registered under Act III of 1877 was entitled to priority over a decree obtained subsequently to the registration of such deed upon a prior unregistered deed of mortgage. Kanhaiya Lal v. Bansidhar, All. Weekly Notes (1882) 15; Shahi Ram v. Shib Lal, I. L. R. 7 All. 378; and Madar v. Subbarayalu, I. L. R. 6 Mad. 88, referred to. HIMALAYA BANK v. SIMLA BANK. I. L. R. 8 All. 23

81. ————— Registered and unregistered documents—Priority—Mortgagee under registered deed competing with auction-purchaser at a sale under a decree on a prior unregistered mortgage-deed. Under s. 50 of the Registration Act, the decree or order which is not to be affected by a registered document must be a decree or order made prior to the execution and registration of the registered document. Therefore where the plaintiffs, who were mortgagees under a registered instrument, sued to set aside a sale to the defendants under a decree on an unregistered mortgage, the plaintiffs' registered mortgage being subsequent to the unregistered mortgage on which the defendants relied, but prior to the decree thereon:—Held, that the defendants, auction-purchasers, must take subject to the right of the plaintiffs as mortgagees. Himalaya Bank v. Simla Bank, I. L. R. 8 All. 23; Madar Saheb v. Subbarayalu Nayudu, I. L. R. 6 Mad. 88; Kanhaiya Lal v. Bansidhar, All. Weekly Notes (1884) 136; and Shahi Ram v. Shib Lal, All. 82. ————— Unregistered mortgage with possession—Subsequent registered mortgage—Notice—Priority. The defendants 1 and 2, in 1877, placed the plaintiff's father (since deceased) in possession of certain land as usufructuary mortgage under an unregistered mortgage-deed for R99, and in 1883 mortgaged the same land to defendant 3 by a mortgage-deed, which was registered. Defendant 3 obtained a decree on his mortgage in 1886, and applied that the mortgaged premises should be sold. The plaintiffs, having opposed his application for an order for sale without success, now sued for a declaration of their title as mortgagees. It was found that defendant 3 took his mortgage with notice of the mortgage of 1877, but had not otherwise acted fraudulently. Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to priority in respect of the mortgage of 1877. Held, by the full Bench, that, when it is proved that a subsequent encumbrancer under a registered conveyance had notice of a valid prior unregistered encumbrance and of possession by such encumbrancer, or of such conveyance without possession, the Courts are not bound to interpret the Registration Act of 1877, s. 50, so as to defeat the title of the prior encumbrancer. KRISHNAMMA v. SURANNA

I. L. R. 16 Mad. 148

83. ————— Registered and unregistered documents—Priority. The provision of the Registration Act, that a registered document shall take effect, as regards the property comprised therein, against every unregistered document relating to the same property, only applies where the two documents are antagonistic, not where effect can be given to each without infringement of the other: e.g., if A mortgages or sells to B, and afterwards C purchases at a Court's sale the then existing right, title, and interest of A, he (C) buys in the first case the equity of redemption and in the second nothing at all. Registration therefore cannot help him, for on the very face of his certificate of sale the property comprised therein is not the property previously conveyed to B, but only the residue of A's estate after such conveyance. SOBHAGCHAND v. BHAICHAND. I. L. R. 6 Bom. 193

85. ————— Priority of registered over unregistered documents. I. L. R. 3 Mad. 46

86. ————— Priority—Registered conveyance—Unregistered conveyance accompanied by possession. One who holds under an unregistered deed of sale, the registration of which is not compulsory, and is in possession of the property conveyed, has a superior title to one who sets up a registered conveyance of a later date unaccompanied by possession. The second purchaser presumably has notice of the title of the first purchaser from the fact of possession having been given. Authorities on the question of priority discussed. DINONATH GHOSE v. AULUCK MONI DABEE

I. L. R. 7 Calc. 753; 10 C. L. R. 129

87. ————— Optional registration—Priority—Possession under unregistered deed—Notice. Although the mere fact of possession having been taken by a purchaser under an unregistered conveyance is insufficient of itself to establish a good title to a property as against a subsequent registered purchaser, and is not conclusive evidence of notice as against him, yet, in the majority of cases, such possession is very cogent evidence of notice. NANI BIBEE v. HAFIZULLAH

I. L. R. 10 Calc. 1073

88. ————— Registered purchaser—Notice of prior contract to sell. The words "former part of this section" used in the second paragraph of s. 50 of the Registration Act, 1877, refer to the whole preceding portion of the section. Held, therefore, that a registered purchaser of land, who bought with notice of a prior unregistered contract by his vendor to convey to the plaintiff, could not resist a suit for specific performance on the plea of registration. *KADAR v. I. L. R. 13 Calc. 70

92. ————— Priority—Registered purchaser competing with holder of decree on prior unregistered deed—Fraud—Notice. A registered purchaser of land who has bought in 1878, with full notice of an unregistered encumbrance of 1872 of which the registration was optional, is entitled to hold the land free of such encumbrance, and the fact that prior to the purchase and to the knowledge of the purchaser a decree has been obtained by the encumbrancer declaring the land liable to be sold in default of payment of the amount of the decree does not affect the title of the purchaser. *MADAR SAHEB v. 93. ————— Priority of deeds—Purchaser under an unregistered deed—Lease of the land by purchaser to the vendor—Decree for rent obtained by the purchaser against the vendor—Effect of such decree on purchaser's title in competition with the title of subsequent purchaser under a registered deed. On the 7th August 1876 the defendant purchased the property in dispute under an unregistered sale-deed. On the same day he leased it to his vendor. In 1878 he obtained a decree for rent against his vendor. On the 23rd May 1881 the plaintiff purchased the same property from the same vendor under a registered deed of sale. In 1888 the plaintiff sued the defendant to establish his right to the property and to recover possession. Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to a decree, his registered deed taking priority to the prior unregistered deed of the defendant. S. 50 of the Registration Act (III of 1877) did not give the defendant priority in virtue of the decree which he obtained in the rent suit, for in that suit the defendant's ownership was not in dispute, and the decree

94. ————— Notice—Fraud—Optionally registrable sale-deed, unregistered, competing with similar deed registered. R sold land to S in 1878 for R54 and put S in possession. In 1879 R sold the same land to N for R24-8-0. N registered his sale-deed. The sale-deed of S was not registered. In 1879 S sued N to have N's sale-deed cancelled on the ground of fraud. The lower Courts held that N's sale-deed was executed exclusively and fraudulently, and decreed the claim. Held, on second appeal, that as there were grounds, apart from notice and knowledge of possession, for holding N's sale-deed to have been executed exclusively, the decision was correct. *NARASIMULU v. 95. ————— Conflict between an unregistered hypothecation-bond and subsequently registered conveyance—Notice—Decree on hypothecation-bond. Land was hypothecated to plaintiff by an unregistered bond, dated 29th May 1878, and afterwards sold to the defendant by a registered conveyance, dated 29th June 1879, which recited the previous hypothecation. In a suit brought by the plaintiff to enforce his charge:—Held, that there was no conflict between the instruments and the hypothecation-bond was enforceable, though unregistered. *RAMACHANDRA v. I. L. R. 9 Mad. 495

96. ————— Registered and unregistered mortgages—Possession—Priority—Notice. On the 10th December 1866 M mortgaged certain immovable property to the defendant for R95. The mortgage was neither registered nor accompanied with possession. On the 12th September 1869 M executed a mortgage of the same property to K for R200. That mortgage was registered, but not accompanied with possession. In 1876 K sued M on his mortgage of 1866. The defendant was not a party to that suit. While the suit was pending, M, on the 23rd February 1876, executed another mortgage of the property to the defendant for R200, including the amount then due to him (defendant) on his mortgage of 1866. That mortgage was registered and accompanied with possession. On the 3rd March 1876 K obtained a decree against M, directing satisfaction of the mortgage-debt out of the mortgaged property. The property was sold under that decree, and purchased by K himself for R50. He obtained a certificate of sale, dated the 8th March 1877, which was not registered. On the 25th July 1877 K sold the property to the plaintiff for R75-4-0. The deed of sale was not registered. In 1878 the plaintiff sued for possession of the property. The defendant relied upon his mortgages of 1866 and 1876. Held, that the defendant's unregistered mortgage of 1866, which was optionally registrable, was not over-ridden by K's mortgage of 1869, which was compulsorily registrable, and that therefore the plaintiff, whose title was derived from K, was not entitled to recover the property from the defendant without redeeming the mortgage of 1866, on which he (defendant) was entitled to rely. The registration of K's mortgage in 1869 could not have operated as notice to the defendant when he was taking his mortgage in 1866, and therefore was not such a registration in relation to the defendant's earlier mortgage as to fall within the scope of the rule that registration is equivalent to possession. LAKSHMANDAS SRUPCHAND v. DASRAT

I. L. R. 6 Bom. 168

97. — Acts XX of 1866 and VIII of 1871—Priority—Registered and unregistered documents. On the 14th February 1869 S and M mortgaged a house and site to the plaintiff for R50. The mortgage was not registered. On the 15th June 1870 S (M being then dead) mortgaged the same property to the father of the defendant for R200. That mortgage was registered. On the 24th June 1871 S further mortgaged the property to the plaintiff for R96, including the amount due on the previous mortgage. This second mortgage was not registered. Possession was not given under any of the mortgages. In 1873 the defendant obtained a decree on his mortgage against S, and in execution of it purchased the property for R20 at a Court sale. The certificate of sale, dated the 9th July 1874, was registered, and the defendant was put in possession of the property under it. The plaintiff sued S on his second mortgage, and obtained a decree upon it in 1875. The defendant was no party to that suit. The plaintiff attached the property in execution of his decree, but the attachment was removed on the application of the defendant. In 1879 the plaintiff sued the defendant on his two mortgages, seeking to enforce them and his decree on the second mortgage against the property. The defendant contended that s. 50 of the Registration Act, III of 1877, operated retrospectively and conferred priority on his mortgage of 1870, in virtue of its registration, even over the plaintiff's earlier mortgage of 1869. Held, that the plaintiff's unregistered mortgages, being each for a sum under R100, were, under the Registration Acts of 1866 and 1871, optionally, and not compulsorily, registrable; and that the Registration Act of 1866, under which the defendant's intermediate mortgage of 1870 had been registered, did not bestow any priority on it. Held, also, that s. 50 of the Registration Act (III of 1877) was not retrospective in its application, and that, as registered purchaser at a Court sale, the defendant took subject to existing lines. Held, further, that the plaintiff's decree did not operate against the defendant, as he was not made a party to the suit in which that decree was obtained, although the plaintiff had constructive notice of the defendant's mortgage through registration. RUPCHAND DAGDUSA v. DAVLATRAM VITHALRAV . I. L. R. 6 Bom. 495

98. — Act XX of 1866, s. 50—Priority—Notice of prior unregistered mortgage—Possession—Right to redeem—Parties. On the 24th September 1869 G mortgaged certain land to H. Subsequently, on the 14th June 1870, he mortgaged the same land to P. Both the mortgages were for sums less than R100. The mortgage to H was unregistered, but the subsequent mortgage to P was registered. On the 21st June 1873, in a suit to which P was not a party, H obtained a decree on his mortgage, and at the execution sale he himself became the purchaser, and was put into possession of the land under his certificate of sale. On the 21st September 1874, P assigned his mortgage to the plaintiff. The deed of assignment was not registered; neither P nor his assignee, the plaintiff, ever had possession under the mortgage of 1870. The plaintiff brought this suit to obtain possession of the land. Both the lower Courts dismissed the plaintiff's claim. On special appeal to the High Court:—Held, that, if P, at the time of taking his registered mortgage in 1870, had notice of the prior unregistered mortgage to H, he had that which it is the object of the registration law to give, and consequently the non-registration of H's mortgage could not, under Act XX of 1866, avail either P or the plaintiff who claimed under him by an assignment executed subsequently to the decree in H's mortgage-suit. A subsequent registered purchaser or mortgagee cannot avail himself of the registration of his deed against a prior unregistered purchase or mortgage of which he had notice. The High Court reversed the decrees of the Courts below, and remanded the case to the District Judge, to ascertain whether P, at or before the time of the execution of his registered mortgage, had notice of the prior unregistered mortgage to H. SHIVRAM v. GENU . I. L. R. 6 Bom. 515

99. — Acts XX of 1866 and VIII of 1871—Priority—Effect of possession under earlier unregistered document—Notice. The plaintiff and the defendant claimed certain land, the latter under an unregistered deed of sale dated the 1st April 1877, the former under a registered deed of mortgage of later date, viz., the 19th September 1877. The defendant alleged that immediately after his purchase he was put into possession of the field, and had been in possession ever since. Both the lower Courts held that the plaintiff was entitled to the land. On appeal to the High Court:—Held, that, assuming that the defendant had been in possession when the mortgage-deed was executed to the plaintiff, or that the plaintiff had otherwise notice of the defendant's prior purchase, the plaintiff could derive no advantage from the registration of his mortgage,—possession by, or registration of the

100. — Priority of unregistered mortgage over subsequent registered sale—Notice of prior conveyance. It is only where notice of a prior conveyance, of which registration is not compulsory, is so clearly proved as to make it fraudulent on the part of a subsequent purchaser to take and register a conveyance in prejudice to the known title of another, that the Courts will suffer the registered deed to be affected. Where therefore a defendant holding an unregistered mortgage of certain property, dated the 23rd March 1867, which was not compulsorily registrable, had obtained a decree thereon on the 4th January 1881, and the plaintiff holding an absolute deed of sale of the same property duly registered and dated the 22nd June 1880, and, having had notice of the mortgage, claimed absolute possession of the property, irrespective of the mortgage:—Held, that the plaintiff's purchase was subject to the mortgage of which he had had notice, and that the plaintiff's suit to declare his absolute title to the property must be dismissed. BHALU ROY v. 101. — Priority—Possession of mortgagor as tenant to mortgage, effect of—Notice. By an unregistered deed of sale, dated the 1st June 1881, the first defendants sold to the plaintiff, for R90, certain land which had been previously mortgaged with possession by him to the plaintiff. The first defendant had remained in possession subsequently to the mortgage as the tenant of the plaintiff under a lease which was not registered. On the 16th April 1883 the first defendant sold the property to defendant No. 2, who registered his deed, took actual possession of the land, and got it transferred to his name in the revenue books. The plaintiff now sued to recover possession from defendant No. 2, who contended (inter alia) that his deed, being registered, was preferable to the plaintiff's prior, but unregistered, deed of sale. The Court of first instance awarded the plaintiff's claim. The defendants appealed to the District Judge, who reversed the lower Court's decree. On appeal by the plaintiff to the High Court:—Held, confirming the decree of the lower Appellate Court, that defendant No. 2, having registered his deed of the 16th April 1883, was entitled, under s. 50 of Act III of 1877, in priority to the plaintiff, whose deeds were not registered, although earlier in date. It was contended for the plaintiff that the possession of the defendant No. 1 as tenant to the plaintiff subsequently to the mortgage and sale of the land to the plaintiff was the possession of the plaintiff, and that such possession operated as constructive notice of the plaintiff's title to defendant No. 2. Held, that the possession by defendant No. 1 as mortgagor was not notice to

102. — Bombay Regulation IX of 1827, s. 6—Registration Act (XIX of 1843), s. 2—Priority of deeds—Unregistered mortgage with possession and without notice—Mortgage earlier in date, but subsequently registered—Possession—Hindu law. The plaintiff sued to enforce a mortgage, dated the 8th June 1863, which was registered on the 15th September 1864, but was unaccompanied with possession. The defendant relied on a mortgage of the same property, dated the 9th May 1864. This mortgage was unregistered, but was accompanied with possession. Held, that, apart from any special peculiarities of Hindu law, the plaintiff's mortgage of the 8th June 1863, which was registered on the 15th September 1864, was entitled to priority over the unregistered mortgage of the 9th May 1864, although the latter was without notice of the earlier mortgage and was accompanied with possession. Held, also, that plaintiff's mortgage was not invalid under Hindu law owing to its not being accompanied with possession. TRIKAM MADHAV SETH v. A subsequently got back the title-deeds and handed them to C, to whom he mortgaged the same property. B sued C (the second mortgagee) for a declaration of priority. The lower Court found that B had not been guilty of fraud or negligence in parting with the title-deed. Held, that B, as first mortgagee, was entitled to priority. The registration of his mortgage was noticed to C, and there was no misrepresentation by B which would relieve C, as subsequent mortgagee, of the duty of inquiry, or destroy the effect of such constructive notice. BALMAKUNDAS ATMARAM v. 106. — Priority of registered over unregistered mortgage—San-mortgage optionally registrable, but not registered—Subsequent mortgage registered—Delivery of possession—Purchaser at sale in execution of decree—Notice. In 1875 the land in dispute was mortgaged to defendant No. 2 under two san-mortgage bonds, which were optionally registrable, but were not registered. In 1885 the land was mortgaged to plaintiff by a registered mortgage accompanied with possession. In 1886 the defendant No. 2 obtained a decree upon his san-mortgage bond, in execution of which the mortgaged property was brought to sale and purchased by defendant No. 3. Defendant No. 3 was afterwards put in possession by the Court. Thereupon the plaintiff sued to enforce his mortgage-lien against the property in the hands of defendant No. 3, who pleaded that the san-mortgages of 1875 were entitled to priority over the plaintiff's mortgage of 1885, and that he as purchaser at a sale under a decree obtained upon the san-mortgages held the property free from the plaintiff's claim. Held, that the plaintiff's mortgage, having been executed and registered after Act III of 1877 had come into force, was entitled to priority, over the unregistered san-mortgage bonds under s. 50 of the Act. A san-mortgage is not within the exceptions mentioned in s. 50 of the Act. Held, also, that, under s. 47 of the Registration Act (III of 1877), the plaintiff's registered mortgage began to operate from the date of its registration and was not affected by the decree subsequently obtained upon the earlier mortgages. By the custom of Gujarat transfer of possession, which is necessary under general Hindu law, is not essential to validate san-mortgages, and such mortgages have always been held valid charges as between mortgagor and mortgagee, but they are liable to be defeated in case of the transfer of interest to third parties under registered instruments. Apart from the doctrine of equitable notice registration under Act XVI of 1864 and Act VIII of 1871 conferred no priority on a registered document as against a document the registration of which was optional. Since Act III of 1877, however, the competition obtains in a more general form, and confers priority on all documents required to be registered, and registered since Act III of 1877 was passed over all prior unregistered deeds of an antagonistic character. JETHABHAI DAYALJI v. 109. — Unregistered san-mortgage—Sale—Subsequent unregistered mortgage of same property—Decree on latter mortgage and sale in execution—Sale certificate registered—Priority. One Harilal and his sons Baji and Chhagan executed a san-mortgage of certain ancestral property in plaintiff's favour in 1885. The mortgage was unregistered. In 1886 the same property was mortgaged by Chhagan alone by a deed which was also unregistered. In 1889 Chhagan's mortgagee obtained a decree on his mortgage for sale of the mortgaged property, and in execution put up the property to auction in 1892, when defendant purchased it. Defendant got his sale-certificate registered. In 1894 the plaintiff brought this suit to enforce his mortgage-lien by sale of the mortgaged property. The defendant contended that, as to Chhagan's share, his certificate of sale having been registered, his claim had priority to the plaintiff's unregistered mortgage. Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to a decree. His claim superior to the defendant's. The defendant had purchased the interest which Chhagan had mortgaged in 1889. But that mortgage was unregistered, and was therefore subject to the plaintiff's mortgage, which, although also unregistered, was earlier in date. The defendant, by registering his certificate of sale, could not enlarge the estate which the certificate conveyed to him. MAGANLAL v. SHAKRA GIRDHAR I. L. R. 22 Bom. 945

110. Notice—Unregistered document under which holder of registered document derives title—Priority. The plaintiff sued to recover possession from the defendants of certain land which they had purchased from one R by a registered deed of sale dated the 22nd August 1882. R had been given the land by one H by a registered deed of gift dated 15th November 1881. H, however, had purchased the land from one V on the 22nd March 1876, and the deed of conveyance to him of that date was not registered. On the 2nd April 1894, the sons of V (defendants Nos. 1 and 2) sold the land to the third defendant by a deed of that date which was duly registered. The third defendant contended that the plaintiff's title depended on the unregistered deed of the 23rd March 1876, executed by V (father of his vendors), and that his (defendant's) purchase by registered deed dated 2nd April 1894 had priority. Held, that the plaintiff's claim must be dismissed. They were mere strangers to the land, unless they could rely on the unregistered conveyance by V to Harichand of the 23rd March 1876, but this conveyance had no effect when brought into competition with the registered conveyance to the third defendant of the 2nd April 1894. Though registration is notice of registered documents, it is not notice of unregistered documents under which holders of registered documents derive title. CHUNILAL v. PREMJI, MARWADI v. RAMCHANDRA I. L. R. 22 Bom. 213

111. Unregistered sale of land valued under R100—Subsequent registered hypothecation—Possession of first purchaser for over twelve years—Registered hypothecation defeated by such possession. The owner of land, having in 1876 sold and given possession of it for R95 to the plaintiff under an instrument which was not registered, hypothecated it in 1878 to a third party, under a bond that was registered. The land was wrongly represented in the hypothecation-bond as being in the original owner's possession. The third party in 1882 sued the original owner on the hypothecation-bond without making plaintiff a party, and obtained a decree, which in 1893 he assigned to defendant, who purchased the land in the course of execution. On plaintiff suing for a declaration of his right to the land:—Held, that the hypothecation had been defeated by plaintiff's possession for a period exceeding twelve years prior to the institution of the suit. A hypothecation right so created is liable to be affected not only by lapse of time as between creditor and debtor, but also by possession of the hypothecated property for the requisite period by a third person on a claim inconsistent with the rights of both the creditor and the debtor. Nor does s. 50 of the Registration Act interfere with the operation and effect of limitation and prescription governing such a case as this. NALLTAMUTTU PILLAI v. BETHA NAICKAN I. L. R. 23 Mad. 37

112. Registered and unregistered documents—Transfer of Property Act, s. 52. B held a decree for sale of the property which had been mortgaged to him by an instrument which was not compulsorily registrable, and was not registered. N purchased the same property pendente lite by a registered deed of sale. Held, that there was no competition here between a registered and unregistered document to which s. 50 of the Registration Act would apply, and that N's purchase was, by s. 52 of the Transfer of Property Act, subject to the decree passed in B's favour. BHAGWAN DAS v. NATHU SINGH I. L. R. 6 All. 444

113. Mortgage—First and second mortgages—Registered and unregistered documents—Fraudulent transfer—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 53. Apart from any question of equitable estoppel, such as described by LORD CAIRNS in the Agra Bank v. Barry, where one person takes a possessory mortgage of property with full knowledge and notice that another is already in possession of such property under an earlier instrument of a similar kind, he cannot be said to be acting in good faith, and the principle of s. 53 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) is applicable to such a transaction. In such a condition of circumstances, quoad the prior title, though created by an unregistered instrument, the status of the second mortgagee under his registered document is affected by his own mala fides; and as, on the one hand, the first mortgagee might avoid it on the ground that it was executed in fraud of him, so, on the other, the second mortgagee cannot, on the strength of his own fraud, pray in aid the provisions of the registration law to give preference to an instrument which records a transaction that, in its inception, being fraudulent was a nudum pactum. Such document would not be a "document" in the sense of s. 50 of the Registration Act, 1877, which terms, as therein used, means a document legally enforceable. Rahmatulla v. Sariatulla, 1 B. L. R. F. B. 58, referred to. In a suit for possession of immoveable property by virtue of registered instrument of mortgage executed in 1883, against a defendant in possession of the same property under an unregistered mortgage-deed of 1881 (both deeds being instruments the registration of which was not compulsory), it was found as a fact that at the time of the execution and registration of his mortgage-deed the plaintiff was aware that the defendant was in possession under his mortgage. Held, that, under these circumstances, the fact that the plaintiff's deed was registered did not entitle him to dispossess the defendant by virtue of the provisions of s. 50 of the Registration Act (III of 1877). RAM AUTAR v. DHANAURI . I. L. R. 8 All. 540

The document witnessing the mortgage was never registered. The land was subsequently purchased by them. At a date later than the purchase, plaintiff obtained a mortgage over the land, which was duly registered. Plaintiff now sued to recover possession of the land : Held, that he was not entitled to recover. Defendant had been in possession as usufructuary mortgagee though under an unregistered document, since 1877; and s. 50 of the Registration Act does not affect the operation of the law of limitation in favour of a person who claims under an unregistered document. *Nallamuttu Pillai v. Possession amounts to notice of such title as the person in possession may have, and any other person who takes a mortgage or other charge upon, or purchases, immoveable property, without ascertaining the nature of the claim of the person in possession, does so at his own risk. The general consensus of opinion of all the High Courts in India is that possession is at least very cogent evidence of notice which a purchaser cannot with safety disregard, and that s. 50 of the Registration Act (III of 1877) does not do away with the effect of notice in favour of the registration to which, ceteris paribus, it gives preference. *SHARFUDIN VALAD TAJUDIN v. At this time he was possessed of a one-third share in a certain partnership business. As S was unable to appear at the registration office by reason of sickness, N, his adopted son, on the same day presented such instrument for registration, and applied for the issue of a commission for his examination, which the registering officer issued. The commissioner went to S's house on the next day, but before he arrived S had died. He examined the attesting witnesses to such instrument, who stated that it had been executed by S, and he was informed by N that it had been so executed. On the next day N and the attesting witnesses and the writer of such instrument appeared before the registering officer, and the witnesses and writer were examined by him. Being satisfied that S had executed such instrument, the registering officer admitted registration, recording that the execution was admitted by N. N's signature was not endorsed on such instrument. The bond, with the deed of sale annexed thereto, was presented for registration. By mistake or for some other reason the particulars to be endorsed on a document admitted to registration, and the certificate showing that a document has been registered, were endorsed on the deed of sale and not on the bond. Held, that, assuming that the bond had been registered, it was doubtful whether such an obvious attempt to defeat the provisions of the registration law should be permitted to succeed; that, whether there had been a mistake and the certificate of registration really applied to the bond or not, the provisions of ss. 58, 59, and 60 of the Registration Act had not been complied with, and the bond was to all intents and purposes unregistered; and that the defect was not a "defect of procedure" within the meaning of s. 87, which could be passed over. MATHURA DAS v. MITCHELL I. L. R. 4 All. 206

In the same case on appeal to the Privy Council it was held, reversing this decision, that the bond was duly registered, and that the fact that the prior deed had not affected the property, being unregistered, was no reason why the deed afterwards registered should not be admitted as evidence of title. In this there had been nothing contravening the objects of the Registration Act. MITCHELL v. MATHURA DAS I. L. R. 8 All. 6

Refusal to register—

Petition by vendor to have document registered—
Person "claiming" under document. A deed of sale executed by the vendor alone, which recited that the vendor had received the purchase-money and that the purchaser had been put into possession was presented for registration by the vendor, the purchaser not being present. The Registrar refused to register the document, on the ground that the deed had not been delivered and no consideration had passed the vendor having stated that he had not received the purchase-money. In refusing to register, the Registrar believed that the deed was of the vendor's own creation. The vendor applied by petition to the High Court to establish his right to have the document registered. The alleged purchaser repudiated the sale. Held (by the majority of the Full Bench), that as it appeared on the face of the document itself that the petitioner was not a person "claiming" under it, the petition could not be entertained under the provisions of s. 73 of the Registration Act. Per STUART, C.J.—That the mere fact that it did not appear on the face of the deed that the petitioner could claim under it did not preclude the Court from entertaining the petition, but under the circumstances of the case, the registration of the deed should not be ordered. Per OLDFIELD, J.—That it was the duty of the Court to order the registration of the deed, as it was executed and the requirements of the law fulfilled, without entering into the question whether or not the petitioner could claim under it. In the matter of the petition of BISH NATH

26. ———— Suit to enforce registration on refusal of party who ought to register—Implied contract to register. Whether an action will lie against the maker of an instrument requiring registration to render it valid, for a refusal to get such instrument registered depends upon the question whether there is a contract, express or implied, on the part of the maker to register it. Such a contract is not to be implied in every case. GIRDHAR DALPAT v. HARIBHAI NARAYAN . 7 Bom. A. C. 3

27. ———— Refusal to register—Suit to enforce contract. A sold certain property to B, and received part of the purchase-money in advance, the rest to be paid after registration of the deed of sale. When the deed was executed and taken to the registry office, A objected to the registration, on the ground that the full price had not been paid, and the Deputy Registrar returned the deed to him, and he sold the property to other parties. Held, that it was a suit to enforce a contract from which the vendor had receded, and notwithstanding the subsequent sale to a third party and registration of such subsequent deed, there was nothing in the registration law to prevent plaintiff from enforcing this contract. BHEEMUL MATHOON v. OLIMUSSA alias BEGUM JAN . 8 W. R. 423

28. ———— Suit for possession, for damages for refusal to register, and for enforcing registration—Effect of execution of deed required by law to be registered. The owner of a share in a talukh granted a se-patni thereof to the plaintiff, but before registration granted a se-patni to the Bengal Coal Company. In a suit against the owner and the Company for possession of the se-patni talukh, for damages caused by the refusal to register, and also for compelling registration of the se-patni pottah :—Held, that the suit was not maintainable in a Civil Court, as the plaintiff's title rested upon an unregistered deed; that there was no cause of action as against the company to enforce registration of the pottah; and that a distinct stipulation is not necessary to bind a person to cause registration of a deed required by law to be registered, but he virtually agrees to do so when he executes a contract, which by the law in force requires registration. But see TRIPURA SUNDARI v. RASIK CHUNDRA KANUNGUI . 6 B. L. R. Ap. 134 : 15 W. R. 189

29. ———— Suit on bond—Failure to register according to agreement—Cause of action. A executed a bond in favour of B, but failed to cause the registration of the same. Before the amount secured by the bond became due, B sued A for recovery thereof, on the ground that, as A had agreed to get the bond registered, but failed to do so, B was entitled to recover the amount advanced by him. Held, that B had no cause of action. GURU PRASAD ROY v. DHANPUT SINGH

30. ———— Refusal to register—Suit to enforce registration. A suit lies against a vendor and another for recovery and registration of a document wrongfully taken back from a Registrar upon such Registrar's refusal to register the same on account of certain false statements made by the parties objecting to the registration. MITTER SEIN v. NARAIN SINGH

1 N. W. 206 : Ed. 1873, 289

31. ———— Suit to enforce deed. Where a deed had been registered, though possibly improperly registered, under s. 36, Act XX of 1866, a suit for enforcement of the deed was maintainable. UNMOLE SINGH v. RAM BHUNJAN MISSEER . . . . . 3 Agra 407

32. ———— Suit to compel registration of document not compulsorily registrable. Under the Registration Act of 1877, a suit lies by a purchaser to compel registration of his kobala in a case in which the value of the property conveyed is under R100, and in which, therefore, the registration of the deed is not compulsory. TOPA BIBI v. ASHANULLAH SARDAR . I. L. R. 16 Calc. 509

33. ———— and ss. 23, 24, 76—Limitation for registration or order of refusal of a document admitted for registration by Registrar—Denial of execution—Refusal to attend—Limitation for suit under s. 77 of the Registration Act. No period is prescribed by Act III of 1877 within which a document which has been admitted for registration may be registered, or within which the order of refusal by the Registrar to register the document must be made. There is nothing in ss. 76 and 77 to compel the Registrar, in cases where there has been no express denial of execution, but where the executant refuses to attend at his office, to make his order of refusal within the time limited for admission of execution by ss. 23 and 24. Limitation in respect of a suit under s. 77 begins to run from the date of such order. Mukhun Lall Panday v. Koodun Lall, 15 B. L. R. 228, L. R. 2 I. A. 210; 24 W. R. 75, and Shamu Churan Das, v. 34. ———— Suit to compel registration—Discretion of Registrar in acceptance of document for registration under s. 24 of the Registration Act—Registrable document with another document annexed, the latter, if presented by itself, being beyond time—Registration Act (III of 1877), ss. 24, 31, and 75. A registrable document, which had been executed by the plaintiff on the one part and by the defendants T and one M on the other part, was accepted for registration by the Sub-Registrar of Bombay

after four months from the date of execution under s. 24 of the Registration Act (III of 1877). M subsequently admitted execution and the document was registered as against him; but the defendant T objected to its registration, and the Registrar refused to register it. The plaintiff then brought this suit under s. 77 of the Registration Act praying for an order directing the registration of the document. The defendant contended that the document ought not to have been accepted for registration without inquiry as to whether the failure to present it within four months had been caused by urgent necessity or unavoidable accident, and at the hearing of the case counsel for the defendants proposed to ask the Registrar's clerk in his examination whether any such inquiry was made. Held (in the original Court by FULTON, J.), following Durga Singh v. Mathura Das, I. L. R. 6 All. 460, that the question should be disallowed, the Court having no jurisdiction to inquire into the exercise of the Registrar's discretion under s. 24 of the Registration Act. Held, on appeal, by FARRAN, C.J., and STRACHEY, J., that when a Registrar has directed under s. 34 that the document shall be accepted for registration, the Court cannot inquire under ss. 77 and 24 into the propriety of that direction. Durga Singh v. Mathura Das, I. L. R. 6 All. 460, approved of and followed. The proviso to s. 34 allows a further period of four months (in addition to the four months allowed by s. 24) within which to appear subject to the conditions set out in the proviso. The defendants executed and delivered two documents, A and B, to the plaintiff, A being an agreement of equitable mortgage, and B an agreement that they would register A and do all things necessary therefor, and, in case they failed to do so, to pay whatever the plaintiff could claim under A if it had been registered. The plaintiff obtained an order for the registration of A, but failed to present it for registration within thirty days after such order as required by s. 75 of the Registration Act, and when he did present it, registration was consequently refused. He subsequently lodged document B for registration with A as an annexure to it, and it was accepted on payment of a penalty under s. 24 of the Registration Act. The Registrar, however, refused to register B on the grounds (i) that without A there would be nothing to show to what property B referred, and (ii) to register A as an annexure to B would be contrary to the provisions of s. 75, which limited the time for registration to thirty days. The plaintiff then brought this suit under s. 77 praying for an order for the registration of B with its accompaniment A within thirty days from the date of decree. Held (in the original Court by FULTON, J.), that B, being a registrable document of which execution had been admitted, and it having been presented within time and accepted under s. 24 of the Registration Act, ought to be registered, the document A being copied out as an annexure. Decree accordingly. Quære: As to the effect such registration might have on A, and whether it would render it efficacious as a registered document. Held, on appeal, by FAR-

RAN, C.J., and STRACHEY, J., that the decree ordering the registration of B was correct. The document was a mere personal covenant to do a particular act with reference to a particular document. There was nothing on the face of it to show that the accompanying document referred to in it related to immoveable property. The registering officer would travel out of his functions if he were to institute an inquiry as to what was the nature of the document referred to. Held, also (varying the decree of the lower Court), that document A should not be copied as an annexure to document B. If document A were in the nature of a schedule or appendix to document B, then the two documents could be registered as one; but as they appeared to be two distinct documents separately stamped and executed for different objects, they could not be so registered. The Registrar had no power to inquire what document was referred to in the document he was asked to register. If he could not register the two documents as one, neither could the Court do so under s. 77. TULLOCKCHAND HARNATH v. GOKULBHOY MULCHAND. I. L. R. 21 Bom. 724

36. — Limitation—Registration—Suit to enforce registration—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), ss. 6, 14—Period of limitation, computation of. An executant of a document not admitting execution, the Sub-Registrar refused to register it. There was an appeal to the Registrar, who also refused to register. Within thirty days of the dismissal of the appeal, an application for review was filed to the Registrar, which was also dismissed. On a suit brought in the Civil Court to enforce the registration of the document, after the dismissal of the said application for review:—Held, that s. 14 of the Limitation Act had no application to the present case; and that, the suit not having been brought within thirty days from the date of the dismissal of the appeal by the Registrar, it was barred by limitation. Nogendra Nath Mullick v. Mathura Mohan Parhi, I. L. R. 18 Calc. 368, followed in principle; Veeramma v. Abbiak, I. L. R. 18 Mad. 99; Girija Nath Roy v. Patani Bibee, I. L. of the order" in s. 77 of the Indian Registration Act, III of 1877, means not merely recording the order of refusal in writing, but communicating it to the party concerned so as to bind him by it. Hence a suit brought under the provisions of s. 77 of the Indian Registration Act (III of 1877) for a decree directing a document to be registered, may be filed within thirty days of the date on which the order of refusal was communicated to the party concerned. ABDUL ALI v. MIRJA KHAN (1904)

38. — Suit to compel registration—Limitation—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), ss. 5 and 6. Held, that s. 5 of the Limitation Act, 1877, applies to a suit brought under s. 77 of the Registration Act, 1877, to compel registration of a document. Beni Prasad Kuari v. Dharaka Rai, I. L. R. 23 All. 277, followed. SURAJ BALI PRASAD v. THOMAS (1905). I. L. R. 28 All. 48

39. — Decree directing registration—Decree not providing for period for registration—Non-presentation of document within thirty days of First Court's decree directing registration—Registration, validity of. S. 77 of the Registration Act does not enact that the documents, of which registration is directed by a decree made under the section, must be presented for registration within thirty days of the passing of the decree. In a suit under s. 77 of the Registration Act the decree of the first Court simply directed the document to be registered and said nothing about its presentation for registration within thirty days from the passing of the decree; after an unsuccessful appeal the document was presented for registration within thirty days from the passing of the decree on appeal and was registered. Held, that the validity of the registration of the document could not be questioned on the ground that the document had not been presented for registration within thirty days of the passing of the first Court's decree, the decree having imposed no condition to that effect. GOPINATH ADHIKARY v. Thereupon A lodged a complaint against the petitioner for cheating under s. 417, which was dismissed under s. 203, on the 26th March 1906. On the 27th April 1906, A appealed to the Special Sub-Registrar, who rejected the appeal for not having been preferred within the prescribed period of 30 days from the Sub-Registrar's refusal to register, but at the same time submitted a report to the District Registrar, which ultimately led to an enquiry with the result that a proceeding was drawn up against the petitioner under s. 82 of the Registration Act (III of 1877). Held, that under the circumstances the petitioner should not be prosecuted under s. 82 of the Registration Act. That the presentation of an appeal to the Special Registrar after the time limited therefore, against the refusal of the Sub-Registrar to register a document on denial of execution, does not give any locus standi for the institution of a proceeding for inquiry as to the execution of the document. SAKANBARI DEBI v. Accretion—Auction-purchaser at a sale for arrears of revenue, right of, to accretion—Res judicata—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 13. An auction-purchaser of an entire estate at a sale for arrears of revenue is entitled to recover all lands included in the taluk at the time of its settlement as well as all lands which had subsequently accreted thereto by alluvion. Where lands had in fact become dry not naturally by accretion through gradual alluvion, but by the dereliction of the river by reason of the diversion of its water through an artificial channel. Held, that the mere fact that an accretion of some lands had commenced before the excavation of the channel would not give the riparian owner a title to the rest of the lands, if it were found that they were not formed by alluvion. KANTA PROSAD HAJARI v. —Change of course of a river within a short space of time. Certain land belonging to village P on the river Gomti was submerged, and after remaining submerged for a not very lengthened period again reappeared. But on its reappearance it was found to be on the opposite side of the river and adjoining village T. Held, that the land thus cut off from village P could not be said to have become part of village T by "gradual accession" within the meaning of s. 4 of Bengal Regulation No. XI of 1825, but was rather land merely separated from the village, of which it formed part, by a sudden change in the course of the river, and this being so, no change of ownership had occurred. "Gradual accession" or "alluvion" means an imperceptible increase; and land is said to be acquired by alluvion, when it is acquired so gradually that it cannot be said how much is added at any particular moment of time. Lopez v. ## 1891—III—

Jhum cultivation in Sylhet—
Regulation extinguishing proprietary rights and giving compensation—Onus of proof as to applicability of Regulation—Question of fact, concurrent decisions of Courts in India on—Proof of reason for taking profits of jhum lands into account in estimating income of settled estate—Long possession and enjoyment as proof of title. Regulation III of 1891 (issued under Statute 33 Vict., C. 3) recited in the preamble that “the officers, who effected the permanent settlement of certain estates in Sylhet included for the purposes of assessment among the assets of those estates, under the designation of jhum, the income then derived by the proprietors of those estates from shifting cultivation carried on by them or their dependents beyond the limits of those estates; that the cultivation shifted from year to year over immense and altogether undefined areas, and the tracts of land, over which they extended, were not specified at the time of the settlement and in consequence of this right of various, and in some cases vague, descriptions are from time to time asserted by the said proprietors over such areas; that it is thus impossible for any person to obtain a safe and clear title to land in those areas, and the extension of cultivation is in consequence impeded, and that it is expedient that the rights, if any, corresponding to the said jhum assets should be commuted.” S. 2 enacted that all such rights should be deemed to have been extinguished; and by s. 3 it was declared that all proprietors of such estates should be entitled to compensation. The Government extended the above Regulation to certain areas under jhum cultivation belonging to the appellants, who and their predecessors in title had held them since 1837. In a suit brought against the Secretary of State for India in Council by the appellants, they alleged that the land in dispute appertained to talukhs, which had been settled with their predecessors in title at the time of the permanent settlement, and prayed for a declaration that it did not come within the operation of Regulation III of 1891. Held, that as the Government were claiming to apply to lands, which had undoubtedly been long in the enjoyment of the predecessors in title of the appellants, a Regulation which would have the effect of confiscating proprietary rights and giving compensation in exchange, it lay upon the Government to show that the facts of the case were such as to bring it within the operation of the jhum lands Regulation. Held, also, that the question whether lay within or without the limits of the settled estates was not a question of fact, on which the concurrent decisions of the Courts in India could be accepted as final. In a sense it was one of fact, but at every point in the process of reasoning considerations of law had to be regarded. It was not disputed that the taluks, held by the appellants had been settled with their predecessors in title at the permanent settlement, and that the profits of the jhum lands in dispute had then been brought into account in estimating the assets of the talukhs, but the parties differed as to the reason why they had been so taken into account. Held, that on the documentary evidence in the case there was, after such a lapse of time, not sufficient to show whether they had been so taken into account, because the jhum lands formed part of the settled estate as contended for by the appellants, or because they had been treated as assets accruing to the owners of the settled estate, but derived from land lying outside it as the Government contended. No confident conclusion, therefore, could be drawn from the evidence as to whether the disputed land was part of the settled estate or was beyond its limits. Held, however, that the possession and enjoyment of the disputed land by the appellants and their predecessors in title taken together with the instances in evidence in 1842, 1843, and 1855, in which it had been confirmed by the Government, was sufficient to prove their title. Since the last named date such possession and enjoyment had been continuous. HAIDAR KHAN v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA (1908)

8. ———— Relief inconsistent with pleadings. A party may have subordinate rights awarded when they arise out of the principal right which he pleads. But when a defendant pleads distinctly a jaghirdar's proprietary right against a malik's proprietary right, a Court cannot award a subordinate right of occupancy in no way arising out of a jaghirdar's proprietary right, but out of a raiyati right never pleaded by the defendant, and in fact incompatible with his case. PANDAY BISHONATH ROY v. (i) that on the evidence as to the usage in the establishment in question the head of the muth is entitled to appoint his successor, but his election is limited to members of the adhinam : and the head of the adhinam is entitled to enforce this rule, though he is bound to invest a disciple properly nominated by the head of the muth ; (ii) that the defendant not being a disciple of the adhinam, his appointment was invalid, and the head of the adhinam was entitled to see that a competent member of the adhinam was appointed in his stead. Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to declarations based on the two last-mentioned findings since they were comprised in the issues framed under ss. 146 and 147 of the Code of Civil Procedure, although the appropriate form in which the decree should be passed was not indicated with precision in the plaint itself. *GIYANA SAMBANDHA PANDARA SAN-NADHI v. Held, that this declaration, which had not been asked for, should not have been made, and that the suit should have been dismissed for want of proof of the title alleged by the plaintiff. *SAMBAYYA v. 20. ———— Inconsistent cases set up in the alternative. Defendant 1 mortgaged certain premises to defendant 2 in 1884 and to the plaintiff in 1885. The mortgage to the plaintiff was a usufructuary mortgage. In 1887 defendant 2 obtained a decree on his mortgage, and in execution brought to sale and himself became the purchaser of the mortgaged premises. The plaintiff, who was in possession under the mortgage of 1885, prayed in this suit that the prior mortgage be declared fraudulent and void, and the sale in execution be set aside, and in the alternative that she be declared entitled to redeem the prior mortgage. The plaint was stamped as in a redemption suit, and the Court of first appeal passed a decree for redemption. Held, that the suit should be dismissed, since after the sale of the mortgaged premises in execution of the decree obtained by defendant 2, the only right which remained to the puisne mortgagee was the right to retain possession until her mortgage should be redeemed. Semble : Per BEST, J.—It is open to a plaintiff who is not a party to the transaction in respect of which allegations are made to come into Court seeking relief in the alternative, dependent upon what may be found by the Court to be the true facts of the case. Quere : Whether the Court can pass a decree for redemption when the plaint seeks only

21. ——— Alternative relief—Suit for possession alleging partition, but failing to prove it—Variance between pleading and proof. The plaintiff sued to recover possession of the northern half of a certain plot of land, alleging that it had fallen to his share at a partition made in 1887, and that he was illegally dispossessed thereof by the defendant in 1890. He also prayed in the alternative that, if the alleged partition were not proved, the land should be partitioned, and his share awarded to him. The suit was dismissed by the lower Courts on the ground that the alleged partition was not proved, and that no order for partition could be made in the face of the plaintiff's distinct allegation that it had already taken place. Held, that the plaintiff's allegation of partition did not preclude him from seeking the alternative relief on the strength of his general title. *NINGAPA v. during worship—Bengal Civil Courts Act (VI of 1871), s. 24—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 57 (1)—Mahomedan Ecclesiastical law—Judicial notice. A masjid was used by the members of a sect of Mahomedans called the Hanifis, according to whose tenets the word "Amin" should be spoken in a low tone of voice. While the Hanifis were at prayers, R, a Mahomedan of another sect, entered the masjid, and in the course of the prayers, according to the tenets of his sect, called out "Amin" in a loud tone of voice. For this act he was convicted of voluntarily disturbing an assembly engaged in religious worship, an offence punishable under s. 296 of the Penal Code. The Full Bench (MAHMOOD, J., dissenting) ordered the case to be re-tried, and that, in re-trying it, the Magistrate should have regard to the following questions, namely:—(i) Was there an assembly lawfully engaged in the performance of religious worship? (ii) Was such assembly, in fact, disturbed by the accused? (iii) Was such disturbance caused by acts and conduct on the part of the accused by which he intended to cause such disturbance, or which acts and conduct, at the time of such acts and conduct, he knew or believed to be likely to cause such disturbance? Held, by MAHMOOD, J., that the discussion occasioned by the act of the accused having presumably taken place during the interval when the prayers were not going on, the assembly was not at that time "engaged in the performance of religious worship," and was not "disturbed" within the meaning of s. 296 of the Penal Code; that in reference to the terms of s. 39 of the Code, the accused did not disturb the assembly "voluntarily;" that he was justified by the Mahomedan ecclesiastical law in entering the mosque, and joining the congregation in saying the word "Amin" loudly if he thought fit, and his conduct fell within the purview of s. 79 of the Penal Code, and was therefore not an offence under s. 296. Beatty v. Gillbanks, L. R. 9 Q. B. D. 308, referred to. Also, per MAHMOOD, J., that having regard to the guarantee given by the Legislature in s. 24 of Act VI of 1871 (Bengal Civil Courts Act) that the Mahomedan law shall be administered in all questions regarding "any religious usage or institution," the Court was bound by s. 57 of Act I of 1872 (Evidence Act) to take judicial notice of the Mahomedan ecclesiastical law, and the rules of that law need not be proved by specific evidence. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. 2. ——— Defiling a place of worship—Penal Code, ss. 295, 297—Trespass on a place of sepulture. R, a Hindu, had sexual intercourse with a woman within an enclosure surrounding the tomb of a Mahomedan fakir. He was convicted under s. 295 of the Penal Code. Held, that in the absence of proof that the place was used for worship or otherwise held sacred, the conviction was bad, and that it should be altered to a conviction under s. 297 of the said Code. In re RATNA MUDALI I. —Killing bulls set at large at sraddha in accordance with Hindu religious usage. The word "object" in s. 295 of the Penal Code does not include animate objects. A bull dedicated and set at large at the sraddha of a Hindu in accordance with religious usage is not an "object" within the meaning of that section. Where such an animal was killed by certain Mahomedans secretly and at night in the presence of none but Mahomedans for the sake of the meat and value of the skin:—Held, that no offence has been committed under s. 295. *Queen-Empress v. 5. —Disturbing a religious assembly—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 296. The worship referred to in s. 296 of the Penal Code must be real worship and not a cloak for doing something else, and the assembly must be lawfully engaged in worship. If the ceremony is commenced by an act which is not lawful, it cannot be said that the persons engaged in it are lawfully engaged from the mere circumstance of their falling into a posture of worship, though such worship may be real. As to whether a worship is real or not, much must depend upon the circumstances under which it is performed. Per BANERJEE, J.—To constitute an offence under s. 296 of the Penal Code (i) there must be a voluntary disturbance caused; (ii) the disturbance must be caused to an assembly engaged in religious worship or religious ceremonies; and (ii) the assembly must be lawfully engaged in such worship or ceremonies, i.e., they must be doing what they have a right to do. JAIPAL GIR v. DHARMAPALA . . . I. L. R. 23 Calc. 60

6. —Trespass on burial ground—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 297—Ploughing up burial ground—Permission of owner. Held, that persons who entered upon a burial place and ploughed up the graves were liable to be convicted of the offence defined by s. 297 of the Penal Code, notwithstanding that their entry on the land was by the consent of the owner thereof. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. SUBHAN . . . I. L. R. 18 All. 395

7. —Disturbing a religious assembly—Religious procession on highway—Indian Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 153, 296—Wantonly giving provocation with intent to cause riot—Legality—Chanting of hymns by ordinary worshippers. By a decree in a civil suit, the Tengalai sect in a certain district were declared entitled to hold certain offices connected with a temple, and as such office-holders it was their duty to recite certain hymns in processions. The rights of the Vadagalai sect as ordinary worshippers were not affected by the decree, but the Vadagalais were ordered not to interfere with the Tengalais in the recital of the hymns otherwise than as ordinary worshippers. Subsequently to this decree, a religious procession was being conducted along a public highway. The Tengalais walked in front, chanting the hymns. In the rear, at such a distance that the Tengalais were not likely to hear them, the Vadagalais followed, also chanting hymns. A complaint was in consequence laid by a member of the Tengalai sect, charging the Vadagalais (i) with wantonly giving provocation with intent to cause riot, and (ii) with voluntarily disturbing an assembly lawfully engaged in religious worship. Held, that neither offence had been committed. Per DAVIES, J. (without deciding whether religious processions in public streets in India are "lawful" or not). The Vadagalais had not exceeded their rights as ordinary worshippers, and had not intended to provoke a breach of the peace, and were consequently not guilty of an offence under s. 153. Moreover, no "disturbance" had been proved, within the meaning of s. 296. Per SUBRAHMANIA AYYAR, J.—The object of s. 296 of the Indian Penal Code presumably is to secure freedom from molestation when people meet for the performance of acts in a quiet spot vested for the time in the assembly exclusively; and not when they engage in worship in an unquiet place open to all the public as a thoroughfare. The user of a highway for religious worship is altogether wanting in lawfulness. There is no peculiar right known to the law as a right of procession. Though the law accords to members of a procession no recognition in their collective capacity, yet the fact that a number of persons use a highway together for some common purpose does not detract in any way from such use being lawful; but, as the circumstances attending a procession may, in consequence of their being inconsistent with the paramount idea of passage, be of such a character as to render the user by the processionists otherwise than lawful, and as carrying on worship on a highway is of that character, it cannot be affirmed that the Tengalais on the occasion in question constituted an assembly engaged in worship lawfully, within the meaning of s. 296 of the Indian Penal Code. Per BENSON, J.—The contention that the Tengalais were not "lawfully" engaged in religious worship because they were engaged in it on a highway, could not be accepted. There is nothing illegal, in India (where highways have from time immemorial been used for the passing of religious processions), in a procession or assembly engaging in worship while passing along a highway. If it were necessary to refer the origin of the use of highways for religious processions to a dedication of the highway to such use, such a dedication could reasonably be presumed, history, literature and tradition showing that such processions have formed a feature of the national life from the earliest times, and it being unreasonable to suppose that a dedicator would make a reservation against religious processions, which would be wholly opposed to the sentiment of the community. A religious procession is entitled to the special protection given by the Penal Code to assemblies engaged in religious worship. In the present case, however, no "disturbance" had been proved, and consequently no offence had been committed. Per BHASHYAM AYYANGAR, J. (at the first hearing, the Chief Justice dissenting).—Inasmuch as the Vadagalais had acted as ordinary worshippers, which they were not prohibited from doing under the decree, the act complained of was not illegal, within the meaning of ss. 153 and 43 of the Indian Penal Code. With regard to the charge under s. 296, the accused had not been shown, on the facts as found, to have voluntarily caused disturbance to an assembly lawfully engaged in the performance of religious worship. No assembly can be so "lawfully engaged" (within the meaning of that section) on a highway, unless it be established or can reasonably be presumed that the dedication of the highway was subject to such user. User of a highway as a place of worship is not the legitimate user of it as a highway. The conviction was wrong on this ground, and on the ground that in fact no disturbance had been proved. VIJAYARAGHAVA CHARIAR v. EMPEROR (F.B. 1903) . . . I. L. R. 28 Mad. 554

— offence relating to—concl'd.

¶ 1. ——— Suit relating to trust among a community—Jurisdiction of High Court in charitable trusts—Khoja Mahomedans—Regulation of rights of dissident parties in a religious community. In a suit by certain members of the Khoja community in Bombay for an account of all property belonging to, or held in trust for, the community, come to the hands of the treasurer and accountant of the community; for a declaration that the treasurer and accountant had ceased to be such officers of the community; for an order directing the treasurer and accountant to deliver all the property of the community in their hands; for a declaration that the property of the community was held and ought to be applied to and for the original charitable, religious and public uses or trusts to or for which they were dedicated and to none other, for the sole benefit of the Khoja sect and none other; and that no person, not being or having ceased to be a member of the same, and in particular no person professing Shia opinions in matters of religion, was entitled to any share or interest therein; for a scheme to carry such declaration into effect, and for an injunction restraining one of the defendants from interfering in the management of the property and affairs of the Khoja community or in the election and appointment of officers, from excommunicating any members of the community, from celebrating marriages, and from demanding or receiving any offering. Held, that the Court had jurisdiction to entertain the suit. When the Court, in exercise of its charitable jurisdiction, is called upon to adjudicate between conflicting claims of dissident parties in a community distinguished by some religious profession, the rights of the litigants will be regulated by reference to the religious tenets held by the community in its origin, and a minority holding those tenets will prevail against a majority which has receded from them. History given of the sects of Sunis, Shias, and Shia Imami Ismailis; of Aga Khan; and of the

Khojas and their relations with the hereditary Imam of the Ismailis. Relations of Aga Khan with the Jumats of the Khojas of Bombay discussed. The tenets of Mahomedanism to which the first Khojas were converted were those of the Shia Imami Ismaili sect. In order to enjoy the full privileges of membership in the Khoja community, a person must be one of that sect whose ancestors were originally Hindus, which was converted to, and has throughout abided in the faith of, the Shia Imami Ismailis, and which has always been and still is bound by ties of spiritual allegiance to the hereditary Imams of the Ismailis. There is no public property impressed with a trust, either express or implied, for the benefit of the whole Khoja community. Aga Khan, as the spiritual head of the Khojas, is entitled to exercise a potential voice in determining who, on religious grounds, shall or shall not remain members of the Khoja community. *ADVOCATE-GENERAL OF BOMBAY, ex relatione DAYA MUHAMMAD v. 2. ——— Jews—Beni-Israelite community in Bombay—Dismissal of officers of the community by resolutions passed at a meeting—Such officers to be given opportunity of defending themselves—Domestic tribunal—Jurisdiction of Court. The plaintiffs and the defendants were members of the Beni-Israelite community worshipping at a certain synagogue in Bombay. The administration of the synagogue and of the funds was vested in a mukadam or headman and four managers, a treasurer, and a crier. The mukadam succeeded to the office by family right according to the custom of the community, but in matters of management he was bound to keep within his powers, which were co-ordinate with those of his colleagues. The first defendant was the mukadam, the second defendant was the hazan or beadle, and the third defendant was the samost or crier. The first defendant had succeeded to the office of mukadam as the nearest lineal descendant of the founder of the synagogue. The second defendant was appointed by the community, and it did not appear on what terms he held office. The third defendant was merely a paid official of a subordinate character. Disputes arose in the community, which became divided into two parties, to one of which the three defendants belonged. At a meeting of the community held on the 28th October 1884, which was attended by a majority of the community, resolutions were passed, dismissing all three defendants from office; and their dismissal was formally communicated to them by a letter, dated the 30th October. It did not appear that they had been given any notice that the question of their dismissal was to be discussed at the meeting. They had received only the ordinary notice that a meeting was to be held. The defendants refused to recognize the authority of the resolutions passed at the meeting of the 28th October, and the plaintiffs accordingly filed this suit, praying for a declaration that the defendants did not occupy any official position in the synagogue and for the recovery of certain property in their hands. Held, that the first defendant had not been duly dismissed. He held the office of mukadam not merely at the will of the community, but as long as he duly performed the duties of his office. He could not be dismissed without an opportunity of making his defence and explaining his conduct, and he had been given no notice that his conduct and his dismissal were to be discussed at the meeting of the 28th October. Held, also, that the second defendant had not been duly dismissed. No evidence was given as to the exact terms on which he held office; but he was entitled to notice, and to an opportunity of defending himself before dismissal. Held, as to the third defendant, that he had been duly dismissed. He was merely a subordinate officer, and the managers had the power of dismissing him. All the managers, save the first and second defendants, concurred in dismissing him, and in doing so they were within their right. Where a domestic tribunal has been appointed for the regulation of the affairs of a community, the Court has no jurisdiction to interfere with its decisions if it acts within the scope of its authority and in a manner consonant with the ordinary principles of justice. ADVOCATE-GENERAL OF BOMBAY v. HAIM DEVAKER. I. L. R. 11 Bom. 185

RELIGIOUS ENDOWMENTS.

See RELIGIOUS ENDOWMENTS ACT.

1. ———— Character of appointment as head of mutt—Hindu law—Lunacy of office-holder—Effect on his position—Practice—Second counsel. Prior to 1896, first defendant in the present suit had presided over a mutt as its "Swami" or head, having been duly appointed to that office. In 1896 he became and was adjudged a lunatic. Prior to his lunacy he had nominated Vidyasamudra as his successor. In 1898 Vidyasamudra died without nominating a successor. In the same year, and after Vidyasamudra's death, a person, who claimed the right to fill the office in such circumstances purported to appoint plaintiff to it. First defendant was then still alive and only died after the institution of the present suit, which was brought by plaintiff for a declaration that he had been validly appointed and for the recovery of the property belonging to the mutt. Held, that plaintiff had not been validly appointed. Assuming that the person, who purported to appoint plaintiff, had the power to do so (which was not decided), there was no vacancy to be filled at the date either of the appointment or of the institution of the suit. The first defendant as head of the mutt was not a mere trustee, and (in the absence of evidence of custom) had not forfeited his position by reason of his having become a lunatic. The appointment relied on by plaintiff in consequence conferred no right on him. The eustodian (or dharmakarta) of a temple is a mere trustee, who is bound to apply the funds at his disposal in carrying out the object of the trust, such as the conduct of daily worship and the performance of ceremonies. The head of a mutt is not a mere trustee, but a "corporation sole" having an estate for life in the permanent endowments of the mutt and an absolute property in the income derived from offerings, subject only to the burden of maintaining the institution. His power to alienate or charge the corpus of the endowment is limited to purposes necessary for the maintenance of the mutt, and alienations or charges will not be binding on the mutt or on his successors merely because they have been made for general religious and charitable purposes appropriate to the head of a mutt. Sammantha Pandara v. Sellappa Chetti, I. L. R. 2 Mad. 175, commented on. Instances of "corporation sole" in India, both ecclesiastical and lay, considered. In course of time one of the villages mentioned in the deed of trust was alienated by a person, who was at the time acting as trustee. Held, on a suit by the trustees to have the sale cancelled and to recover possession of the village, (i) that the trust was not void for uncertainty, and (i) that it was not competent to the Court in the suit as framed to declare that the village in suit was charged with a proportionate part of the total income of the seven endowed villages. *Ranchordas Vandravandas v. A Civil Court has power under that section to appoint a manager only when there is a dispute as to the right of succession. A person electing to proceed under the Religious Endowments Act can be given only such special relief as that special statute says it may give. If he wishes for any relief beyond that, he should proceed under s. 539 of the Civil Procedure Code. S. 32 coupled with s. 582 of the Civil Procedure Code gives an Appellate Court power to add as parties to the appeal persons, who were not parties to the original suit. Even if this be not so, s. 32 is not exhaustive and an Appellate Court has inherent power in a case dealing with a public trust to add in the appeal such new parties as may be necessary for the protection of the public interests, the public being interested in the appeal. In this case a decree was passed by the first Court in a suit brought by a worshipper at a Hindu temple under s. 14 of the Religious Endowments Act directing the removal of the defendant, the mohant of the temple, on account of misfeasance. The mohant appealed to the High Court. Whilst the appeal was pending, the parties sought to effect a compromise, which affected the public interests prejudicially and so was held unlawful; and the High Court, upon application made to it, added as respondents certain other worshippers, who were not parties in the first Court, in order that the appeal might be properly contested. *GYANANANDA ASRAM v. Payment of train fare and carriage expenses by a candidate to voters, who had undertaken to vote for him, will constitute such payment and such candidate will be disqualified from being elected under the rule. It will be otherwise where the provision for payment is a unilateral act, which might be accepted and acted upon or ignored by the other party. The burden lies on the candidate so paying of proving that the payments were otherwise than in return for votes. Cooper v. Slade, 6 H. L. C. 746, referred to. The Bolton Election Petition, 31 L. 1. Splitting cause of action—Accidental or involuntary omission—Mistake—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 7. The words "if a plaintiff relinquish or omit to sue for any portion of his claim, a suit for the portion so relinquished or omitted shall not afterwards be entertained." in s. 7, Act VIII of 1859, plainly include accidental or involuntary omission, as well as acts of deliberate relinquishment. The correct test when a second suit is brought for something omitted to be sued for in a previous suit is whether the claim in the new suit is in fact founded on a cause of action distinct from that which was the foundation of the former suit. Where a suit was brought for a large amount of property, consisting partly of Government paper which it was alleged, had been fraudulently appropriated by the defendant and the plaintiff obtained a decree:—Held (reversing the decision of the High Court), that the plaintiff was precluded by s. 7 of Act VIII of 1859 from afterwards bringing a fresh suit on a piece of Government paper which might have been, but by mistake was not, included in the previous suit. 2. ————— Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 7—Statement of intention not to relinquish. The words of s. 7 of the Civil Procedure Code were imperative against the splitting of a claim into parts. The consequences of an infringement of that direction were not that the suit which does not include the whole claim shall for this reason be barred. The words "in bar of suit" referred to any subsequent suit brought for the portion of the claim omitted in the previous suit, and not to such previous suit itself. A plaintiff who omits to sue for a portion of his claim stating that he does not relinquish it, but means to sue again for it, can gain nothing by such a statement. Neither can such a statement furnish a reason for holding the first suit to be barred. SOONDER BEBEE v. KHILLOO MULL alias RAM LALL . . . . . 2 N. W. 90

3. ————— Suit for arrears of rent for successive years—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 7. S. 7, Act VIII of 1859, did not require a plaintiff having several distinct causes of action against one defendant to comprise them all in one suit subject to the hazard of forfeiting all those not included in the first suit. The object of the clause was only to provide against splitting a cause of action. SUTTO CHURN GHOSAL v. OBHOY NUND DOSS . . . . . 2 W. R., Act X, 31

DYARAM v. GOUREE SHUNKER . . . . . 3 N. W. 20

4. ————— Negligent omission of part of claim—Obligation as to enforcing all available remedies. The 7th section of the Civil Procedure Code, 1859, prohibits the splitting of a claim, but does not require that all remedies by suit on all the securities which a creditor may hold be enforced together. If a plaintiff, from negligence or other cause, omits to prefer a portion of his claim which seeks to charge the land, or, having preferred it, is content to accept an imperfect adjudication, or one which awards him only a portion of the relief claimed, he cannot afterwards bring forward in a fresh suit matter which might well have been then disposed of. MULUK FUQUEER BUKSH v. LALLER MANOHUR DOSS . . . . . 2 N. W. 29

5. ————— Fresh suit in respect of same subject-matter—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 7. A party is bound to bring forward his whole case in respect of the matter in litigation and open to him upon the points for decision in the suit. He cannot abstain from relying upon nor abandon a ground of claim which is in question and proper for consideration and decision in the suit and afterwards make it a cause of fresh suit in respect of the same subject-matter. UDAIYA TEVAR v. KATAMA NACHIYAR . . . . . 2 Mad. 131

6. ————— Omission to include all grounds on which suit is based—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 7. A plaintiff is bound to include in his plaint all the grounds upon which his suit is based. A second suit upon a different ground which existed before the commencement of the first suit would not be alleged, as it would be split-

7. ————— Omission to sue for all rights under the same or similar titles—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 7. S. 7, Act VIII of 1859, required that, if all rights arising out of the same cause of action were not sued for together, the portion abandoned could not be separately sued for afterwards; but it did not enact a similar penalty for all rights under the same or similar titles, the right to sue for which may require different issues to be tried and may arise under different dates and different causes of action, and the defendants as to which different properties may be either only one party or different parties altogether. *MOTHOOR MOHUN MUNDUL v. 8. ————— Omission to put forward case in full—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 7. A plaintiff suing for the recovery of land is bound to put forward his whole case at once, and cannot be allowed to maintain a second suit for the same cause of action, merely by alleging that the Collector's order sought to be set aside is of a different date and description from that which was sought to be set aside in the former suit. *LUCHMUN DOSS v. 9. ————— Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 7—Title resting on different and distinct transactions. The fact that a defendant's title rests upon different and distinct transactions, supported by distinct and separate evidence does not necessarily imply that to a party contesting their title, there are different causes of action warranting separate suits. RAM SOONDUR SHAHA v. DELANEY . . . . . 20 W. R. 103

10. ————— Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 7—Distinct causes of action. S. 7 of Act VIII of 1859 applied, whether the omission to sue had been the result of knowledge and intention or not. The test as to whether a suit was barred by s. 7 of Act VIII of 1859 was whether the claim in the new suit was in fact founded on a cause of action distinct from that which was the foundation of the former suit. *BULWUNT SINGH v. 15. — Civil Procedure Code, ss. 43, 58, 278, 280, and 283—Intervenor claiming attached property by two separate titles—Single order raising attachment—Two suits by judgment-creditors for declaration of their right to attach—Order of filing of suits. A plaintiff's cause of action consists of every fact which it would be necessary for the plaintiff to prove, if traversed, in order to support his right to the judgment of the Court. It does not comprise every piece of evidence which is necessary to prove such fact, but every fact which is necessary to be proved. Read v. Brown, L. R. 22 Q. B. D. 128, referred to. The plaintiffs, holding a simple money decree against two persons, B R and M R, attached in execution thereof (a) their judgment-debtors' mortgagee interest in a certain mortgage; and (b) a house said to belong to their judgment-debtors. Against this attachment one M filed objections under s. 278 of the Code of Civil Procedure, in consequence of which the property was released from attachment. The plaintiffs thereupon brought two suits under s. 283 of the Code of Civil Procedure, one in respect of the mortgagee interest and the other in respect of the house. Held by the Full Bench (AIKMAN, J., dissentiente), that the first essential of the plaintiffs' cause of action was the order made under s. 280 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and that, until that order was made, they had no cause of action. The cause of action was the order under s. 280, which had been obtained by M, and the right and title of the plaintiffs to bring the subjects of attachment to sale in execution of their decree. The title or titles which the defendant might prove formed no part of the plaintiffs' cause of action, nor would the defendant's allegation of different titles in herself to different portions of the property split up the plaintiffs' cause of action into different and distinct causes of action. Similarly the fact that the plaintiffs' judgment-debtors held or were alleged to hold portions of the property under different titles would not split up the plaintiffs' cause of action into different causes of action. S. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure has nothing to do with the evidence which may be necessary or may be produced to support or defend a cause of action or with the desire of a plaintiff to bring more suit than one or with the devolution of title where the cause of action relates to land or other kind of property. In the above case consequently s. 43 of the Code barred the later of the plaintiffs' two suits. Held, also, that, where two suits are filed on the same day, it must be presumed, until the contrary is proved, that they were presented and admitted in the order in which their numbers appear in the register of civil suits prescribed by s. 58 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Kaleshar Prasad v. Jagan Nath, I. L. R. 1 All. 650; Appasami v. Ramasami, I. L. R. 9 Mad. 279; and Duncan Brothers & Co. v. Jeetmull Greedharee Lall, I. L. R. 19 Calc. 372, referred to. Zahur Husain v. Muhammad Haszin, All. Weekly Notes (1888) 147, and Muhammad Ibrahim Khan v. Habib-ullah Khan, All. Weekly Notes (1886) 113, overruled. Per AIKMAN, J. Although it was the single order in the execution department which necessitated the plaintiffs' bringing their suits, the plaintiffs' real causes of action were the separate transactions entered into by the judgment-debtors with the objector under s. 278 of the Code, and they were therefore entitled to bring separate suits. *MURTI v. 16. — Simultaneous suits for balance of account after settlement—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 43. Upon a settlement of accounts between plaintiff and defendants, R3,985-6-9 was found due by the defendants, who agreed to pay the same. They gave to plaintiff an order on their agents to pay R2,500 from the profits of certain land, and promised to pay the balance within a month. Plaintiff filed two suits, one for

R2,500 and the other for the balance of the debt. Defendants pleaded that both suits should be dismissed, as brought in contravention of the requirements of s. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure. 19. ————— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 43—Suit to cancel release, obtained by duress, of all claims against defendants, and to recover amount of one such claim no bar to subsequent suits upon other causes of action so released. On the 1st July 1878 there was a settlement of accounts between the plaintiff and defendants, and a debt was acknowledged due by the latter to the former, and on the same day the plaintiff and defendants entered into a trading partnership which was carried on till August. On the 30th September the defendants extorted a release from the plaintiff whereby the plaintiff's claims against them arising out of the two transactions mentioned and all other transactions between them were released. On the 23rd November the plaintiff brought a suit against the defendants, and, in the plaint after stating the fact of the settlement of 1st July 1878, the balance found due therein to the plaintiff, the extortion of the release, and the misappropriation of the sums due to the plaintiff by the defendants as the cause of action, prayed for cancellation of the release and for recovery of the amount due to the plaintiff by the defendants under the settlement of 1st July 1878. Held, in a suit to wind up the partnership of July and August 1878, that the plaintiff was not bound by s. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure to have included in his former suit his claim arising out of that partnership and that the former suit being in substance a suit upon the account stated on 1st July 1878, and not for damages for extorting the release, was no bar to the present suit. SUBBAYYA v. On measurement, however, it was found there was more land within those boundaries than the plaintiff claimed. He obtained only a decree for what he claimed though he had claimed all the land up to the boundary (the river) on one side: the excess was deducted on that side. Held, reversing the decision of the High Court, that a subsequent suit in which he claimed land which had accreted to the excess portion which was not decreed to him in the former suit was not barred by s. 7, Act VIII of 1859. PAHALWAN SINGH v. 21. ————— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 43—Breaches of one term in a contract, how sued upon—Cause of action—Contract. Per GARTH, C.J.—A claim for the price of goods sold is a cause of action of a different nature from a claim for damages for non-acceptance of goods pursuant to a contract. Such claims, therefore, although arising under one and the same contract, may be sued upon separately, s. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure notwithstanding. Per WILSON, J.—Where there is one contract for the purchase of goods and the purchaser takes some of the goods, but breaks his contract in part by not paying for the goods he takes, and in part by not taking and paying for the remainder, and both breaches occur before any suit is brought, the claim of the person suing is one arising out of one cause of action; and the whole claim must be included in one suit. ANDERSON WRIGHT v. purchaser, his claim being one arising out of one cause of action and based on one and the same contract. The view taken by WILSON, J., in Anderson, Wright & Co. v. Kalagarla Surjinarain, I. L. R. 12 Calc. 329, approved. PETHERAM, C.J.—“The whole of the claim which the plaintiff is entitled to make in respect of the cause of action” in s. 43 means, in the above case, the entire claim which the plaintiff has against the defendant at the time the action is brought in respect of any failure or failures to accept and pay for goods purchased of him by the defendant under one contract, and the whole of such claim must be included in one action. PRINSEP, J.—The expression “cause of action” is to be construed with reference to the substance rather than the form of the action. The claim in both the above cases being for damages on account of breaches of the same contract, s. 43 read with the illustration debars the plaintiff from bringing two suits. *DUNCAN BROTHERS & Co. v. Two suits were accordingly brought for the two months next succeeding the date of the first suit, and decrees were obtained. The High Court upon an application made by the defendant, set aside these decrees on the ground that after the first suit no further suits could lie. SIMPSON v. CLEGHORN . . . 6 C. L. R. 91

ages for tort—Trespass on land—Conversion of moveables lying on land—Grounds of attack. Defendants having forcibly taken possession of plaintiff's land upon which was (1) standing timber, and (2) logs of timber lying stored on the ground, plaintiff had, in a prior suit, recovered possession and damages. Subsequently to the institution of such prior suit, defendants (1) cut and removed certain standing trees, and (2) removed the logs which lay stored on the ground. Upon plaintiff bringing a second suit to recover damages on both grounds, objection was raised, (1) as to the standing timber, that plaintiff's remedy was under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, and (2) as to the logs, that a claim for their value might have been included in the former suit, since their conversion was effected when the plaintiff was dispossessed of the land upon which they lay, and that, under s. 43, no claim could now be made in respect of them. Held, (i) that the proceeds obtained from cutting and removing saleable timber on the land were in the nature of mesne profits, and these having been taken since the institution of the previous suit, plaintiff could recover; (ii) that a trespass on a piece of land is by itself no proof of any conversion of moveables lying upon the land at the time that the trespass takes place; that, notwithstanding plaintiff's eviction from the land, possession of the timber lying stored upon it should be presumed to have continued in him in the absence of proof of any act on the part of the defendant with special reference to such timber and showing unequivocally that the plaintiff was entirely deprived of the use of them; and that conversion of the logs was not effected by the trespass, but only by their removal subsequently to the institution of the previous suit; and (iii) that the causes of action now relied on were therefore different from those relied on before, and the previous suit did not operate as a bar to the present claim under s. 43 of the Civil Procedure Code. *MOYI v. (2nd June 1879) the plaintiff brought a suit to recover damages for the breach of a contract on the part of the defendant for not having made over possession to him of certain leasehold properties, the damages claimed being for the profits accrued due for the year 1283 F.S. (1875-76). In this suit he obtained a decree. On the 21st Joist 1287 F.S. (14th June 1880) the plaintiff brought another suit against the defendant to recover damages for the profits accrued for the years 1284, 1285, and 1286 F. S. (1876-77 to 1878-79). Held, that the plaintiff should have included the damages for the years 1284 and 1285 (1876-77 and 1877-78) in his former suit, and that he was debarred by s. 43 of Act X of 1877 from including in his second suit any portion of his claim for damages which had accrued due at the time of the institution of his first suit, and for which he had omitted to sue; but that he was entitled to recover damages for the

30. ————— Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 13, 43—Damages. In September 1886 the plaintiff sued in a Munsif's Court certain defendants for possession of one bigha of land, and for damages for the cutting and carrying of certain paddy from such land on the 23rd December 1885. This suit was dismissed on the ground that no dispossession had taken place, the plaintiff being referred to a Small Cause Court for his damages. No appeal was made against this decision. In March 1887 the plaintiff sued these defendants in the Munsif's Court for possession of 5 bighas 6 cottahs of land and for mesne profits, and obtained a decree for possession of 3 bighas 6 cottahs of land with mesne profits; possession of the 1 bigha, the subject of the suit of 1886, being included in the 3 bighas 6 cottahs decreed. He subsequently sued the same defendants in a Small Cause Court for damages for the paddy cut and carried on the 23rd December 1885. Held, that such suit was not barred by either s. 13 or s. 43 of the Civil Procedure Code. *MAHABEER SING v. certain patni talukh. B, whose patni right had been sold, sued for and obtained a decree for reversal of the sale on the ground of irregularity. In the meantime A had committed default and the patni was again sold for arrears of rent. The zamindar drew out from the Collectorate the amount due to him. C, who had bought B's right, title, and interest in his decree, now sued A for recovery of the surplus proceeds of sale in the hands of the Collector, and obtained a decree. He afterwards sued A for mesne profits for the time during which he was in possession of the patni talukh. This was a suit by C against A for recovery of the amount drawn out by the zamindar, on the ground that, in consequence of A having collected the rents from the talukh, which were to go towards payment of the rent due to the zamindar, and having fraudulently withheld such payment, he had sustained damage to the extent of the amount taken by the zamindar. Held, that the suit was barred by s. 7, Act VIII of 1859. *TARINI PRASAD GHOSE v. B continued to hold over and refused to accept a fresh lease from A. A sued B in 1882 for mesne profits for three years, but did not claim possession of the land. The suit was dismissed on a preliminary point. A then sued B to recover possession of the land and mesne profits. It was argued that A's claim to the land was barred by s. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure, because he omitted to claim the land in the former suit for mesne profits. Held, that the suit was not barred. *TIRUPATI V. 40. Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 7—Suit for mesne profits. The plaintiffs, having been dispossessed of a tank and of land on its banks, recovered possession by a suit under Act XIV of 1859, s. 15. The defendants then instituted a civil suit for determination of title, in which the plaintiffs were successful. The plaintiffs on the 22nd Cheyt 1277 (3rd April 1871) instituted a suit for the recovery of the value of fish taken by the defendants on the 27th Bysack 1276 (8th May 1869), the day of dispossession; but the suit was compromised. The plaintiffs now claimed mesne profits with reference to fish and grass appropriated by the defendants from 1st Bysack 1277 to 7th Bhadro 1278 (12th April 1870 to 22nd August 1871). Held, that the present claim for the period preceding 22nd Cheyt 1277 (the date of the former suit) was barred by Act VIII of 1859, s. 7; that the previous suit as well as the present were really suits for damages; and that the previous suit and compromise ought to have included all claims of the plaintiffs arising out of the dispossession. *SAEM SIRDAR v. The plaintiffs subsequently sued the defendants for the value of the fruit upon such trees, alleging that on the 19th June 1879, the defendants had wrongfully taken such fruit. Held, that, as the cause of action—i.e., the taking of such fruit—was in both suits identical, and the plaintiffs not having claimed the value of such fruit as mesne profits in the first suit, the second suit was barred by the provisions of s. 43 of Act X of 1877. *DEBI DIAL SINGH v. ants, S and D sued them to recover it and also for mesne profits, and obtained a decree. The defendants appealed, whereupon S filed a solehnamah. The decree was upheld, however, by the lower Appellate Court. In special appeal the Sudder Court refused to give the renouncing plaintiff any decree for mesne profits of a share. The plaintiff, who had then come of age, was not represented in the litigation in the Court. Shortly afterwards he sued S and M to set aside the sale to M and obtained a decree. On D's death, M obtained possession of the land which had been the subject of the suit by S and D. The plaintiff now sued to recover a half share of the land sued for by S and D, and of the mesne profits recovered or recoverable by M under the decrees of the Sudder Court and the lower Courts, and to set aside the solehnamah. Held, that as to M the suit was not barred by s. 7, Act VIII of 1859. RAMLOCHUN LALL v. The mortgagor refused to deliver possession of the property and the mortgagee sued him to enforce specific performance of the contract to deliver possession, and obtained a decree. At the time this suit was brought, the mortgagee had been kept out of possession of the property for two years, during which time the mortgagor had taken the mesne profits. The mortgagee subsequently sued the mortgagor to recover the mesne profits of the mortgaged property for those two years. Held, that, as the mortgagee might in the former suit, in addition to seeking the specific performance of the mortgage-contract, have asked for such mesne profits by way of compensation for the breach of it; and as the claim for possession and mesne profits were in respect of the same cause of action,—viz., the breach of the contract to give possession,—the second suit was barred by the provisions of s. 43 of Act X of 1877. LALJI MAL v. where a plaintiff had sued to obtain his share of an estate in land, in consequence of having been wrongfully dispossessed by the defendant, whom he afterwards in the present suit sued for his share of personal property, being entitled to both under a will, it was held that the subsequent suit was not barred by reason of the non-claim in the prior one. The present claim which was for a share in the rents of certain inam lands, also joint family property, was not included in the suit of 1860. At the date of the former suit the land in respect to which the present suit was brought was subject to the provisions of Regulation IV of 1831, and the Civil Courts had no jurisdiction to try the suit in respect to such land without the permission of the Government. It did not appear that the plaintiff had applied to the Government for permission to sue. Held, that the plaintiff was not precluded by s. 7 of the Civil Procedure Code from maintaining the present suit. 65. Suits by heir to cancel alienations made at various times. A widow of a deceased Mahomedan alienated her husband's property by two deeds to different persons at different times. A suit was brought by the heirs of the deceased, first to set aside the second alienation, and then a second suit to cancel the first alienation.

RELINQUISHMENT OF, OR OMIS- SION TO SUE FOR, PORTION OF CLAIM—contd.

Held, that s. 7, Act VIII of 1859, did not bar the second suit. The heir's cause of action against different alienees, who have acquired possession under alienations made at different times and under different circumstances, was not one and the same, the question of right of succession to the deceased and widow's competency to alienate arising equally in both the cases notwithstanding. It was not obligatory on the heirs to make all the alienees parties to the first suit upon pain of forfeiting all future right of suit against them by reason of such omission. JEHAN BEBEE v. SAIVUK RAM

66. Suit to set aside alienations of portions of estate. A Hindu, whose share in an ancestral estate had been alienated by a co-proprietor, instituted simultaneously three different actions against the co-proprietor, and the persons to whom the alienations had respectively been made, to recover several distinct parcels of land which constituted his share. Held, that, as the plaintiff had but one single cause of action against the co-proprietor, he ought to have brought but one suit against him, and either included all the alienees in this suit or brought separate actions against the alienees for the several pieces of land in their possession, and caused the proceedings in these suits to be stayed till the suit against the co-proprietor was determined. The course of procedure last indicated is the more correct course. VITHU v. NARAYAN DABHULKAR. 5 Bom. A. C. 30

67. Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 43—Act VIII of 1859, s. 7.—Suit for partition of portion of property. If a person intentionally omit to sue for any portion of his claim, the provisions of s. 43 of Act X of 1877, as well as the provisions of s. 7 of Act VIII of 1859, bar the institution of a second suit for the portion so omitted, so that, where a family property consisted of lands as well as debts, and the plaintiff at first sued for a partition of debts only, and then compromised and withdrew the suit without the permission of the Court, it was held that his second suit to demand a partition of the whole property was not maintainable. UKHA v. DAGA. I. L. R. 7 Bom. 182

68. Different cause of action—Suit for share of undivided property—Subsequent suit for partition of whole of the property. In applying the provisions of s. 7 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1859, the first thing to be considered is whether the cause of action in the second suit is the same as the cause of action in the first. If the cause of action be the same, the second suit is barred in respect of any portion of the claim omitted from the first suit, but not otherwise. Accordingly where the plaintiff as a member of an undivided Hindu family, sued for a share of a particular portion of the family property leaving the rest undivided, and his suit was rejected, as it had not been brought for his whole share, it was held that the suit was no bar to a second suit to have the whole property divided, as the causes of action in the two suits were entirely distinct. KAKAJI BIN RANOJI v. BAPUJI BIN MADHAVRAY

69. ————— Suit for partition between co-owners—Former suits for partition of parts of property—Different causes of action. The plaintiff was the Zamorin of Calicut, and he sued in 1887 for a moiety of certain property in Malabar alleged to belong in equal undivided shares to his stanom and that of the defendant and to be in the occupation of tenants. The cause of action was stated to have arisen in 1881 when partition was demanded by the Zamorin and refused by the defendant. In some instances the tenants in occupation represented the family, a member of which was at one time admitted by the Zamorin under a demise or kanom, and had attorned to the defendant; in other instances they were shown to have been admitted by the defendant on paying off the former tenant who had been admitted by the Zamorin. It appeared that the Zamorin had previously brought suits and obtained decrees for partition of certain parcels of land as belonging equally to the two stanoms, the defendant in each suit being the present defendant and the tenant in occupation of the land then in question. And on these facts a defence was raised under the Civil Procedure Code, s. 43. Held, that the suit was not barred by s. 43 by reason of the previous suits. ITTAPPAN v. MANAVIKRAMA . . . I. L. 71. ————— Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 7—Suit for partition omitting mortgaged lands—Subsequent suit for share of mortgaged lands. The plaintiffs in 1863 sued the defendants for the plaintiffs' share in certain undivided family property, and did not include in their claim certain lands then in the possession of mortgages which lands had been mortgaged by one of the defendants as manager of the family. The defendants subsequently redeemed the mortgaged lands. The plaintiffs then filed a suit to recover their share of the lands so redeemed. Held, that they were entitled to maintain such suit, as the mortgaged lands had not been available for an actual partition at the time of the former suit. BALKRISHNA VITHAL v. suit (No. 1363) to recover his share of the family property in the possession of the first defendants, and did not include in that claim a field then in the possession of a mortgagee. The field was subsequently redeemed by the first defendant, who again mortgaged it to the second defendant. The plaintiff then filed the present suit to recover his share in the field. The first Court allowed the plaintiff's claim, but the District Judge on appeal threw it out, on the ground that it was barred both by s. 7 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1859, and by the "law of limitation." The Judge based the latter finding on certain allegations made by the plaintiff in suit No. 1363, and in another suit brought by him against the first defendant and the then mortgagee of the field, from which allegations the Judge inferred a separation between the plaintiff and the first defendant. Held, in special appeal, that the claim was not barred by s. 7 of the Civil Procedure Code, because the mortgaged field was not available for an actual partition at the time of the former suit No. 1363 of 1861. The true question for consideration in cases of this kind is whether the former suit was one in which the plaintiff might have recovered precisely that which he seeks to recover in the second, and where the former suit is one for an actual division of property, the plaintiff is not bound in it to ask for a declaration defining his right in property not then capable of division. Balkrishna Vithal v. On the 19th September 1872 A mortgaged a 1 anna 4 pies share of E to H. On the 20th September 1872 A, B, C, and D mortgaged their shares in E and F, together with property in the district of Tirhoot, to the plaintiff. On the 24th March 1873 A mortgaged his share in E and F to J. On the 13th November 1874 A and B mortgaged their shares in E to K. On the 25th March 1874 J obtained a decree on his mortgage, and the interest of A and B were purchased on the 5th January 1875 by L. L objected that he had already purchased the interest of A, and, on the objection being allowed, M instituted a suit against L for a declaration of priority and obtained a decree on the 9th August 1876. In execution of this decree, the property first mortgaged was sold on the 4th March 1878, and after satisfying the mortgage a surplus of R7,664 remained. The heirs, after obtaining a decree against B for possession of the mouzahs, on the 13th September 1875 instituted a fresh suit against him to recover the compensation-money wrongfully drawn out by him from the Collectorate. Held, that the suit was not barred by s. 7 of Act VIII of 1859. Held, further, that the claim of the heirs was a proper subject for a regular suit, and could not have been heard and determined in the course of the proceedings in execution of the decree which they had obtained against B for possession of the mouzahs. *NUND LALL BOSE v. 96. — Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 43—Suit for money paid under Land Acquisition Act. In 1876 K sued M on a bond, dated 25th December 1869, for R5,000, by which certain land in the district of South Tanjore was hypothecated as security for the debt, and obtained a decree on the 6th of April 1876 for the sale of the lands which he purchased on the 17th August 1876 for R6,000. K then discovered that part of the land hypothecated, situated within the jurisdiction of the Subordinate Court at Kumbakonam, had been acquired by a railway company under the Land Acquisition Act in 1874, and that the compensation R460 (claimed by M's mother, who sold the land to the company) was lodged in the treasury of Kumbakonam in the name of M's mother, K having applied to the Subordinate Court for an order, for payment out of this sum, the Court, by order, dated 28th February 1880, directed that the question of title to the money should be decided by suit. K then sued M, as the sole heir of his deceased mother, in the District Munsif's Court of Tiruvadi (where M resided), for a declaration of right to and to recover the said sum of R460. The suit was filed on the 4th September 1880. On the 16th April 1880 M assigned his interest in the money sued for to V, who was made defendant in the suit on his own application, and pleaded that the land having been acquired by the railway company in 1874, before the suit upon the bond was filed, this suit was barred by s. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held, that K not having known, at the date of his suit on the bond, of the acquisition of the land by the railway company, the suit was not so barred. *VENKATA VIRARAGAVAYYANGAR v. 97. — Suit not brought for whole claim—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 43. On the 5th September 1874 R, a Hindu, and his sons borrowed R5,000 from V and mortgaged to him certain lands, items 1, 2, and 3. On the 7th September 1874 V borrowed R5,000 from R N and mortgaged his rights in items 1 and 2 and land of his own to R N. In 1877 R N bought at a sale in execution of a decree against R the share of R in the said items 1 and 2 subject to the mortgage created by R on 5th September 1874, and to another mortgage created by R dated 11th January 1875. In 1889 R N sued V and the sons of R for arrears of interest due under his mortgage-bond, but their suit was withdrawn with liberty to bring a fresh suit for the principal and interest due on the bond. In 1885 R N sued V and the sons of R to recover principal and interest due under his mortgage-bond. Held, that the claim of R N was not barred by s. 43 of the Civil Procedure Code. *VENKATA SHETTI v. A plaintiff therefore who has obtained an order under s. 373 of the Code, will not be debarred by s. 43 from claiming in a subsequent suit a relief which he might have included, but did not in the suit which he was permitted to withdraw. *Venkata Shetti v. 99. — Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 43—Bond with alternative conditions for repayment of loan—Decree for interest—Second suit for further interest. A bond provided for the repayment of a loan with interest by a stated time. In default of payment by that time, it was provided that the loan might be added to an existing mortgage for a term of years, and repaid at the end of the term, together with the mortgage-debt. After the expiration of the time fixed for the repayment of the loan, the obligee sued and obtained a decree for the interest which had accrued due at the date of the suit. He now sued for the further interest which had since become due. Held, that the second suit was not barred by s. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure, for that the first suit being for interest merely, and not for principal and interest, which were then both due, the plaintiff must be taken to have elected, under the bond, to add the principal sum to the previously existing mortgage-debt, in which case he forfeited nothing by suing merely for arrears of interest as they became due. *SHRI SHAILATA v. 100. ————— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 43—Multiplicity of suits. When money is due on two or more bonds at the time of the institution of a suit, and the bonds appear to have been originally passed in respect of one claim, it is not incumbent upon the plaintiff to sue upon both bonds in one action. There is nothing in s. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure which would justify this Court in going behind the bonds to consider the circumstances out of which they sprung, albeit those circumstances might themselves at the time have constituted a cause of action. UMED DHOLCHAND v. 103. ————— Suit on instalment-bond—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 7. Plaintiff sued upon an instalment-bond as each successive instalment fell due, and the whole of his claim on each instalment was included in his suit. He recovered the full amount of the first instalment under the first decree and a portion of the second instalment in execution of his second decree. B sued D upon such instrument for the balance of the first instalment. The Court trying this suit refused to receive such instrument in evidence, on the ground that it was a promissory note, and as such was improperly stamped. Thereupon B applied for and obtained permission to withdraw from the suit, with liberty to bring a fresh one for the original debt. In October 1879 B again sued D, claiming the balance of the first and second instalments, basing his claim upon the note made by him in his account book. He obtained a decree in that suit for the amount claimed by him. In 1880 B again sued D, claiming the amount of the third instalment, again basing his claim upon such note. Held, by SPANKIE, J., that the suit last mentioned was barred by the provisions of s. 43 of Act X of 1877, inasmuch as B should in the second suit brought by him against D have claimed the balance of the money found due from D to him upon the accounts stated between them, instead of claiming the balance of the instalments due. Held by OLDFIELD, J., that such suit was not so barred, the causes of action therein and in the former suit being different. BANARSI DAS v. 105. ————— Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 7—Suit to enforce claim against representatives of deceased. Held, that s. 7 of Act VIII of 1859, which barred all future suits for the portion omitted or relinquished, had not the effect of prohibiting more than one suit to enforce satisfaction of a claim against the representatives of a deceased person. The creditor had a right to make all the property of the deceased debtor in the hands of the several persons who might have succeeded to it liable for the payment of his debt, but he was not bound to bring his suit in such a shape as to include the whole of the representatives and the whole of the property at the risk of being precluded from all future suits. PUTRUMSOOKH v. fulfil other conditions of the lease, and gave security in Rs. 3,000 by mortgage of landed property. In 1874 the plaintiff obtained decrees in the Revenue Court for arrears of rent, and the decrees were partially satisfied and then became barred by limitation. In 1884 the plaintiff brought a suit to recover the balance due by enforcement of the mortgage security against the purchasers of the mortgaged property. Held, that the plaintiff had two separate rights of action, one on the contract to pay rent and the other on the mortgage security; that he could only enforce the first by a suit in the Revenue Court for arrears of rent, and the second by suit in the Civil Court; and consequently there could be no bar to the latter suit by reason of the suit instituted in the Revenue Court with reference to s. 43 of the Civil Procedure Code. CHUNI LAL v. Rent for the third year was also due. No claim for it was included in the suit, but the landlord attached the land by summary process under the Rent Recovery Act to recover it. The tenants sued in the Revenue Court under the Rent Recovery Act to have the attachment set aside as illegal. Held, that the zamindar was not precluded by Civil Procedure Code, s. 43, from pursuing his remedies under the Rent Recovery Act, and that the attachment was not illegal. *ESWARA DOSS v. 121. Joint owners—Mortgage of joint property by two co-owners—Subsequent mortgage of part of same property to same mortgagee by one co-owner—Suit by mortgagee on second mortgage and sale in execution—Purchase by mortgagee—Effect of such purchase on first mortgage—Subsequent suit by mortgagee on first mortgage. By a mortgage-deed, dated the 24th January 1878, S and V, two of three brothers constituting an undivided family, jointly mortgaged to the plaintiff B a part of the family property. On the 28th July 1878 S alone further mortgaged to the plaintiff for a fresh advance a portion of the property already mortgaged. Subsequently the three brothers effected a partition among themselves of all the undivided property, and the property jointly mortgaged by S and V fell, along with other property, to the share of V and the third brother N. In 1881 the plaintiff B sued S on the second of the above mortgages, viz., that of the 28th July 1878. He obtained a decree, and at a sale held in execution of that decree himself purchased the property comprised in that mortgage. In the meantime, on the 27th January 1882 and on the 6th December 1883, V and N respectively mortgaged with possession to the defendant M portions of the land comprised in the first mortgage of the 24th January 1878. In 1883 the plaintiff filed the present suit upon his first mortgage of the 24th January 1878, claiming to recover Rs. 16-14-0 from S and V personally. He also prayed that the defendant M, who had been in possession of the property in dispute, should be prevented from obstructing him in selling the property. S and V did not appear. The third defendant M alone appeared and contended, inter alia, that the plaintiff, having sued upon his second mortgage without including the earlier one, was now barred from suing on the latter by ss. 13 and 43 of the Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882). He also contended that the plaintiff, having purchased part of the lands comprised in the mortgage now sued upon in execution of the decree obtained by him upon his second mortgage, could not now seek to burden the remaining lands included in the mortgage with the whole of the mortgage-debt, but that a proportionate part of that debt must be satisfied. Held, that the plaintiff's suit was not barred by his previous suit on the second mortgage under the provisions of ss. 13 and 43 of the Civil Procedure Code. *MORO RAGHUNATH v. 122. Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 43—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 85—Rights inter se of two mortgagees of the same property from the same mortgagor. Two persons each held a mortgage over the same property from the same mortgagor. The mortgagees were both executed on the same day. The mortgagees each instituted a suit for sale on the same day and obtained decrees, in execution of which they had the mortgaged property put up for sale, and each purchased it at the sale under his decree respectively. Neither mortgagee made the other a party to the suit on his mortgage. The representative (S) of one of the mortgagee decree-holders got possession of the mortgaged property and held it as against the other mortgagee decree-holder or his representatives. Thereupon the representatives of the other mortgagee brought their suit for possession of a moiety of the property, or in the alternative for redemption of the other mortgage. Held, that such suit was not barred either by the provisions of s. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure, or by reason of those of s. 85 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882. *BALMAKUND v. 123. Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 13 and 43—Act XII of 1879, s. 6—Act VIII of 1859, s. 7—Inclusion of whole claim in suit. The present suit was preceded by others in which the plaintiff sought to establish a right in the same part of the talukhdari estate that he now claimed to redeem from mortgage. The first suit in which he with another claimed as under-proprietors was dismissed in 1866 on the ground that they had not shown themselves to have held such right under the talukhdars within the period since 1841. Proceedings not to be regarded as judicial, subsequently taken under circular 4 of 1867, resulted in a finding that the dismissal was right upon the merits, the property having been transferred to the talukhdar by a conditional sale which had become absolute. Another suit was then brought to recover the talukhdari right, under the terms of circular 106 of 1869, it being alleged that arrears of revenue paid by the talukhdar had been paid on the plaintiff's account. That suit was also dismissed. Held, that the present suit to redeem the same property under a mortgage was not barred. The claim to redeem did not arise out of the former cause of action within the meaning of the sections of Act VIII of 1859 relating to the inclusion of the whole claim in a suit. He therefore prayed for an account and restoration of the land on payment of the sum that might be found due. The Court found that the alleged mortgage was not proved, and dismissed the suit. Thereupon A filed a suit in ejectment against B. Held, that the ejectment suit was not barred under s. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882). Failure in a redemption suit does not bar a subsequent suit in ejectment, the causes of action in the two suits being essentially different. *Shridhas Vinayak v. tion of R300 provided that the term of the mortgage should be four years certain; that certain interest should be payable; that the mortgagee should have possession; that the profits should be appropriated first in lieu of yearly interest and any balance appropriated in payment of the principal debt; and that the mortgagor should be entitled to redeem if the principal and interest were paid at the expiration of the four years. The mortgagee never obtained possession; and in 1882 he brought a suit against the mortgagor to recover the unpaid interest then due, and obtained a decree, which was satisfied by the sale of property belonging to the judgment-debtor. In 1886 he brought another suit for recovery of the principal, together with the residue of interest up to the date of suit. Held, that the cause of action in the suit of 1882 was the mortgagor's non-delivery of possession of the mortgaged property, by reason of which the mortgagee had been unable to realize his interest from the usufruct, that the cause of action accrued to the mortgagee from the moment the instrument came into operation and possession was not delivered, that the cause of action to recover the principal accrued at the same time and was the same cause of action, that the plaintiff was therefore bound in the suit of 1882 to sue for the principal, and that the present suit was consequently barred by s. 43 of the Civil Procedure Code. HIKMATULLA KHAN v. The hypothecation deed was executed in 1875 and registered, and it contained the following terms with regard to interest and the repayment of the debt. "We (the obligors) shall pay interest at 7 per cent. per annum before the 30th October of each year; we shall pay in full the principal amount on the 30th October 1878, after clearing off the interest, and redeem this deed; should we fail to pay the interest regularly according to the instalments, we shall at once pay the principal together with the amount of interest." Default was made in the payment of interest in 1876, and in 1877 the plaintiff sued in a District Munsif's Court for the interest then due, expressly stating in the plaint that he agreed to accept payment of the principal and the subsequent year's interest at the times fixed in the deed, and he obtained a decree as prayed. The plaintiff in 1888 now sued the executants of the above instrument and their heirs and representatives to recover the principal together with interest up to date. Held, that this suit was not barred by the Civil Procedure Code, s. 43, although the creditor's election not to seek a decree for the full amount in the suit of 1877 had not

The Munsif dismissed that suit on the ground that the land was within the defendant's tenure and his decision was affirmed on appeal. In a suit brought in 1890 against the same defendant for declaration of title to and possession of the two palm-trees and for an injunction restraining the defendant from disturbing his possession of them:—Held, that the claim arose out of the same cause of action as that in the former suit, and that the suit was therefore barred by s. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure. MAKSUD ALI v. The decree provided for payment of the secured debt in various instalments by May 1895. The mortgagor died in 1883, having discharged part of the debt. The decree-holder having attached certain family property in execution, the mortgagor's two younger sons, who had not been born at the date of the above decree, objected that their shares were not liable to attachment. This objection prevailed, the Court expressing the opinion that the matter in controversy should be determined in a regular suit. The other defendants in the suit of 1877 had both died in the interval, one of them leaving infant sons. The plaintiff had claimed the value of standing crops or damages for the same. The Court found that the plaintiff had paid the purchase-money, but had not got possession, and ordered defendant to execute a deed of sale. On failure of the defendant to do so, the Court executed a deed of sale in plaintiff's favour under s. 262 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). The plaintiff thereupon brought the present suit to recover possession on the strength of the deed of sale. Defendants pleaded that this second suit was barred under s. 43 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held, that s. 43 was not applicable and did not bar the present suit, because the alleged cause of action was not the breach of the contract, but a new and distinct one arising from the deed of sale which the defendant had contracted to pass. NATHU PANDU v. the suit failed. At the time of bringing the suit, plaintiff was aware that the defendants in possession had in various documents admitted that they were kanomdars under the plaintiff's predecessor in title. On the plaintiff now bringing a suit based on the admissions referred to:—Held, that plaintiff could and should in the previous suit have based his claim in the alternative on the admissions instead of confining that suit to the specific mortgage which he failed to prove. Having chosen to take the course which he did, he was barred from bringing a fresh suit by s. 43 of the Civil Procedure Code, as it must be taken that he abandoned or relinquished his claim on the basis of the admissions when he brought his first suit on the kanom specifically alleged. *Krishna Pillai v. The agreement was dated 15th June 1895, was put into writing, and was duly registered. The first defendant failed to pay the Rs. 4,000 as agreed, or to execute the mortgage; and the plaintiff, on the 16th September 1899, brought a suit against him to recover the Rs. 4,000, with interest thereon, and obtained a decree on the 29th September 1899. On the 30th September the plaintiff commenced the present suit against defendant No. 1 and against defendant No. 2, who, as judgment-creditor of defendant No. 1, had attached the property specified in the agreement, praying that either the first defendant should be ordered to pass to the plaintiff a mortgage-bond for the balance due, or that a decree should be passed for the recovery of the said balance by sale of the said property and from the first defendant, and that the property be declared liable for the amount claimed. Held, that the suit was barred under s. 43 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). *GOVIND HARI DEV v. certain property belonging to himself and his son to plaintiff as agreed, plaintiff obtained a decree for specific performance, in pursuance of which the price was paid and a conveyance executed. Plaintiff was then obliged to sue for possession, when it was found that the sale did not bind the son's interest, and on grounds of convenience plaintiff was awarded the value of defendant's share instead of a decree for partition. He now sued to recover the balance of the price paid, and it was contended that the suit was, in fact, one for damages for breach of the contract to convey, and as such was barred under s. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure, inasmuch as the damages claimed could have been sued for in the alternative in the previous suit for specific performance. Held, that the suit was not barred; it being in fact for the recovery of money paid on a consideration that had failed, and the cause of action being different from that in the suit for specific performance. Held, also, that the suit was not barred by limitation, inasmuch as the failure of consideration must be taken to have occurred when it was found, in the suit for possession, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover the son's share; which date was less than three years from that upon which the present suit had been instituted. The latter instrument recited the bond for Rs. 10,000 as a prior mortgage. The mortgagees then sued on the mortgage for Rs. 500, and obtained a decree, under which portions of the security were sold, subject to liability under the mortgage for Rs. 10,000. The mortgagees now sued on the mortgage for Rs. 10,000, when it was objected that the suit was not maintainable by reason of s. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held, that this objection was not sustainable, and that, regarding the case as one of a mere personal claim on the instrument of mortgage, s. 43 did not apply. *SESHA AYYAR v. The plaintiff, a mortgagee, came into Court asking for a decree for sale on his mortgage, or “any other relief to which the plaintiff might be entitled.” The mortgage sued upon contained the usual covenant for payment, in addition to the further covenant that in default of payment proceedings might be taken against the mortgaged property. Held, that there was nothing to prevent such plaintiff in the course of the suit relinquishing his claim for sale of the mortgaged property, and asking merely for a simple money-decree. Such an amendment of the pleadings did not amount to a conversion of the suit into a suit of another and inconsistent character. SUKHDEO PRASAD v. LACHMAN SINGH (1902) . I. L. R. 24 All. 456

The landlords had let the right to dig these shells to plaintiff who, in conjunction with the landlords, and while the shells were still on the land, sued for a perpetual injunction restraining defendants from digging shells, and also to restrain them from carrying away those which they had already dug, and which were stored on the land. That case was dismissed, as not being one in which an injunction could be granted. Subsequently to its dismissal defendants removed the shells and converted them to their own use. The widow, who enjoyed all the lands during the remainder of her life, also died. The daughters then attempted to take possession of the lands B from a person who held possession of them, and who wrongfully refused to relinquish that possession. They, as the heirs of their late father, thereupon, namely, in 1887, instituted a suit and obtained a decree against that person for the recovery of lands B. In 1896 the daughters attempted to take possession of the lands A, which were in the possession of another person, who also wrongfully refused to relinquish his possession. They thereupon instituted the present suit against that other person, in which they also claimed as the heirs of their late father, to recover possession of the lands A. The persons who had withheld possession of the lands B and A, respectively, were different, and the High Court found as a fact that there had been no combination or privity between them in respect of the lands which they had severally withheld. Upon the objection being raised that the present suit was barred, under s. 43 of the Code of Civil Procedure, by reason of the fact that the plaintiffs had omitted to include their present claim in the previous suit:—Held, that the suit was maintainable. *DAMPANABOYINA GANGI v. The rule laid down in the case of Binad Lal Pakrashi v. Kalu Pramanik, I. L. R. 20 Calc. 708, is based upon the assumption that the tenant entered upon the land and held under a de facto proprietor, who might not be the real owner, in good faith. That element being wanting in the present case, plaintiffs cannot get any relief. PEARY MOHAN MONDAL v. RADHIKA MOHAN HAZRA (1904) . I. L. R. 31 Calc. 315

same powers as are vested in a Court of regular appeal by ss. 351, 354, and 355, Act VIII of 1859, in respect to a wrong order passed by a lower Appellate Court. WUZEER ALI v. KALEE COOMAR CHUCKER-

2. ——— Special appeal—
Act VIII of 1859, ss. 351, 354 and 355. In a suit on a bond executed under a mukhtarnamah which was not produced, the Court of first instance admitted secondary evidence of it, and decreed the suit.
In special appeal, the High Court was of opinion that the secondary evidence had been improperly admitted and therefore the decree in the plaintiff's favour could not stand. Upon this it was contended that the suit should be dismissed, as the Court hearing a case in special appeal had no power, under such circumstances, either to remand the case or to call for additional evidence. Held, that, although the powers conferred by ss. 351, 354, and 355 of Act VIII of 1859 on the Court of regular appeal are not directly given to the Court of special appeal, yet the Court, when it found the order of a lower Appel-

s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure:—Held, that the suit between the parties not having been confined by the Deputy Commissioner to the preli-

As a principle of the interpretation of statutes, a distinction must be drawn between cases in which a Court or an official omits to do something which a statute enacts shall be done, and cases in which a Court or an official does something which a statute enacts shall not be done. In the former case, the omission may not amount to more than an irregularity in procedure. Court of first instance to record evidence tendered—Refusal of Appellate Court to record additional evidence. The plaintiffs in the Court of first instance produced both documentary and oral evidence in support of their claim. The Court, being satisfied with the documentary evidence produced by the plaintiffs, declined to record the evidence of the witnesses tendered by them. The defendants appealed and the lower Appellate Court reversed the decree of the Court of first instance, but in its turn declined to allow the plaintiffs, respondents, to produce fresh evidence before it. On appeal by the plaintiffs to the High Court, it was held that, though there was no section of the Code of Civil Procedure strictly applicable to the circumstances of the case, the Court was, notwithstanding s. 554 of the Code, warranted ex debito justitiæ in setting aside all proceedings of both Courts below and in directing the Court of first instance to re-try the case admitting all admissible evidence which had previously been tendered to the Court of first instance and which that Court had refused to record. *DURGA DIHAL DAS v. 19. Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 566—Issue not disposed of by the lower Appellate Court—Procedure. In a suit for money due under a bond, the plaintiff tendered three witnesses in the Court of first instance to prove execution of the bond. That Court, having examined one of such witnesses, declined to examine the others, being satisfied on his evidence of the genuineness of the bond, and passed a decree in favour of the plaintiff. On appeal by the defendant the lower Appellate Court disposed of the sole issue in the appeal, viz., execution or non-execution, in the following words: "I do not think the claim made out by the plaintiff on his own evidence." Held, that, under the circumstances above described, it was competent to the High Court in second appeal to act under s. 566 of the Code of Civil Procedure and refer an issue as to the execution or non-execution of the bond in suit to the lower Appellate Court, that issue having practically not been tried at all by the said Court. *Kanhai Lal v. Procedure that the decree might be set aside, and then appeared to the Subordinate Judge, who reversed the decree and remanded the suit for decision after taking such further evidence as the said defendants or other parties might produce. On its being contended that, under ss. 562 and 564 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the Subordinate Judge had no power to remand the suit for re-trial:—Held, that, notwithstanding ss. 562 and 564, an Appellate Court has inherent power, in such a case, not only to reverse a decree passed on evidence given by the plaintiff only, the defendant being ex parte, but also to direct a re-trial of the case. *PERUMBRA NAYAR v. 21. Order reversing decree of lower Court on account of exclusion of evidence. A trial took place in the Court of the District Munsif who heard evidence, decided issues, and passed a decree. On appeal, the Subordinate Judge reversed the decree and remanded the suit for re-trial, on the ground that certain documentary evidence which had been tendered by a defendant had been excluded, and plaintiff's witnesses who had been cited in the list had not been examined. Held, that s. 562 was not applicable to such a case; that the proper course for the Subordinate Judge to take was to act either under s. 568 or 569 by himself taking the evidence which he considered had been wrongly excluded, or to direct the Munsif to take it. *Perumbra Nayar v. 22. Civil Procedure Code, ss. 562, 564, 566—Appeal—Power of Appellate Court to remand for trial on the merits otherwise than under the provisions of s. 562. S. 564 of the Code of Civil Procedure must be read subject to the other provisions of the Code, for example, those contained in s. 27, s. 32 or s. 53. An Appellate Court has power to make an order under any of those sections; and, in order to give effect to the provisions of the section which is applicable, it is necessary that it should in certain cases send back the case in the Court of first instance. Under such circumstances, s. 564 of the Code will not preclude the Appellate Court from remitting a case to the Court of first instance. *Rameshur Singh v. Sheodin Singh, I. L. Suits were brought by the ryots before the Sub-Collector under s. 8 of the Rent Recovery Act to compel the defendant, the zamindar, to grant them proper pattas for fasli 1312, alleging that the pattas tendered were illegal as they charged the higher garden rate for dry lands cultivated by them with the aid of wells constructed at their own cost. The defendant pleaded that he was entitled to the enhanced rate (i) by custom, (ii) by virtue of a contract to be implied from previous payments. No consideration for such a contract was however alleged. The Sub-Collector framed two issues—one as to the existence of the custom set up by the defendant, and another as to whether the previous payments by the plaintiffs operated as an estoppel or evidenced an implied contract to continue to pay the enhanced rates. The Sub-Collector did not record evidence as to custom, holding that such custom even if proved could not deprive the plaintiffs of the benefits expressly given by the Act. He also held that any such implied contract as that set up by the defendant would be illegal as opposed to the provisions of the Act. He passed a decree, that the defendant should grant pattas as claimed by the plaintiffs. On appeal the District Judge held that the payment of rent at the enhanced rate raised a presumption that there was a contract to pay such rent; and that, if there was no contract, express or implied, the rent must be fixed in accordance with the other provisions of s. 11 of the Rent Recovery Act. He reversed the decrees of the Sub-Collector and remanded the cases for re-trial under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure. On appeal to the High Court:—Held, per SUBRAHMANYA AYYAR, J., that the order remanding the case was not legal as all the questions raised between the parties and on which they went to trial had been decided, and the questions so raised were purely questions of law. A custom can be upheld only so far as it is not in conflict with statute law; and a custom to pay enhanced rent for improvements effected by a tenant at his cost is illegal as opposed to the provisions of the Rent Recovery Act. Fischer v. Kamakshi Pillai, I. L. R. 21 Mad. 136, followed. Gopalasami Chettier v. Fischer, I. L. R. 28 Mad. 328, referred to. It makes no difference whether a tenant constructed wells at his cost prior to or after the passing of Act VIII of 1865. In either case no additional rent can be claimed. Nagasami Kamia Naick

v. Iyodi Rama Goundan, 6 Mad. R. R. 5. Payment for a number of years of enhanced rent may be evidence of an agreement to pay at that rate, but it will not be binding as a contract, unless supported by consideration. Quære: Whether when the enhanced rate had been paid for a large number of years and when the lapse of time is such as to make it unfair to call on the landlord to prove consideration, a lawful origin may not be presumed. Gann v. Free Fisheries of Whitestable, 11 H. L. C. 192, 103, referred to. No such presumption can be made when the payments have been only for a period extending from one to eighteen years. Tenants with permanent rights of occupancy are entitled to construct wells without the permission of the landholder; and a custom requiring such permission may be bad, as unreasonable, and is certainly illegal as opposed to the policy of s. 11 of the Rent Recovery Act. *Venkatanarasimha Naidu v. Dhandamudi Kotayya, I. L. It can be objected to by a party, if he has not given his consent to such a course, and even a party who has not consented may be equitably estopped by subsequent conduct from treating such an order as null and void. Such an order of remand does not necessarily vitiate the decision of the lower Appellate Court on questions properly decided by it, which can be attacked only on grounds legally open to the parties on second appeal. It cannot be treated as void for want of jurisdiction, so as to be incapable of being validated by consent or waiver. *Mohesh Chandra Dass v. Jamiruddin Mollah, I. L. ## 2. GROUNDS FOR REMAND.

1. Error in law—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 372. To justify a remand, it must be shown that the lower Court has committed some error in law, or that the case comes in some other way within the terms of s. 372, Civil Procedure Code. HURISH CHANDER SHAHA v. HURISH CHUNDER PAUL . . . . . 25 W. R. 325

2. Erroneous decision of first Court—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 354. Where a Subordinate Judge's decision in appeal was not a right decision (his orders having been impossible of execution), the District Judge was held to have been empowered, under Act VIII of 1859, s. 354, to send the case back, after fixing an issue, for a finding. UMER ALI v. RUMZAN ALI 23 W. R. 347

3. Decision given when Court was closed. The fact that the decision of the Court of first instance was passed on a day when the Court was closed does not necessitate the lower Appellate Court remanding the case. WARRISH ALLY v. LALLA RAM SHAHAYE . . . 1 Hay 197

4. Undervaluation of suit—Pre-emption suit. Where a pre-emption suit was valued at R31, though the consideration was R2,000, the High Court, in special appeal, refused to remand the case to enable plaintiff to make up the deficient stamp duty. MEWA LALL v. BEHAREE LALL . . . . . 14 W. R. 195

5. Addition of parties—Rejection of application to make intervenor a party—Act X of 1859, s. 77. Where a Deputy Collector rejects an application by a third party to intervene under s. 77, Act X of 1859, a Judge has no jurisdiction on that party's appeal to remand the case to the Deputy Collector for re-trial, with directions to make the intervenor a party. KHONDKAR KEFAE-TOOLLAH v. MAMOHED KABEL . . . 9 W. R. 345

6. Question as to validity of alienation—Improper remand by Appellate Court. M, a Hindu widow, executed a deed of usufructuary mortgage in J's favour, the property hypothecated being the separate property of her husband in which she only had a life-interest. On the latter applying for mutation of names, B objected that she was in proprietary possession under a deed of gift executed by M, and the objection was allowed. In virtue of a clause in the deed of mortgage that, in case any demand was made in respect of the property within the mortgage term, the mortgagee was entitled to sue for the mortgage-money notwithstanding the term had not expired, J sued to recover the money by the sale of the hypothecated property. B, in addition to an objection to the validity of the mortgage based on the deed of gift, pleaded that it was invalid under Hindu law as against him, the next reversioner to the property, there being no legal necessity for the alienation. The lower Appellate Court held that the mortgage was valid as against the deed of gift, but invalid as against the next reversioner. Finding that B was not the next reversioner, it remanded the case to the Court of first instance, with instructions to make certain persons who had applied to that Court to be made parties to the suit, on the ground that they were the nearest heirs to M's deceased husband, but whose application that Court had rejected, defendants in the suit, as also any other persons who might claim to be near heirs, and to determine as between them who was the next reversioner and to further determine whether such next reversioner had relinquished his rights in favour of B, and whether the validity of the mortgage could be questioned on the ground that M, having only a limited interest, had alienated for an indefinite period. It was held that the suit was improperly remanded, and the Court decreed J's claim in respect of the property. BULAKI SINGH v. JAI KISHEN DAS

7. Order of remand—Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882), ss. 562, 564, and 566—Addition of necessary parties not a ground for remand on a first appeal. Where a Court of first appeal remanded a case to the Court of first instance for the addition of all necessary parties, and at the same time decided an issue as to the merits, and it appeared that the Court of first instance had not disposed of the case "on preliminary point, so as to exclude any evidence of fact which appeared to the Appellate Court essential to the determination of the rights of the parties":—Held, first, that on an appeal from the order of remand, the decision on the merits, on which the order of remand was not based, was not before the High Court on appeal; and, further, that the order of remand was unsustainable under ss. 562 and 564 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), which are strictly binding on all Courts of first appeal. The proper course for the lower Appellate Court would have been to join the parties whom it found to be necessary, and then to raise the proper issues as between the plaintiff and those parties, and, if necessary, to refer the issues to the Court of first instance for trial under s. 566. *GANESH BHIKAJI JUVEKAR v. to make order. Where in the first Court the defendant applied for a witness to be examined, but no order was made on the subject, and on the case coming up on appeal, the Appellate Court, on its notice being called to the omission, remanded the case to the lower Court to entertain the application:—Held, that there was nothing illegal in such a remand, though the remand sections of Act VIII of 1859 did not expressly apply to it. BONOMALEE CHURN MYTEE v. The lower Appellate Court directed B to be made a defendant and remanded the suit to have the question of ownership tried between A and B, at the same time agreeing with the Court of first instance that the allegations in the plaint were false. Held, that the lower Appellate Court should have dismissed the case, and was wrong in so remanding it. Per CUNNINGHAM, J.—The right of framing new issues arises where the issues framed are insufficient to dispose of the matters raised in the plaint. Ram Dhun Khan v. 14 W. R. 69

21. Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 562 and 566—Illegal Order of remand—Duty of Appellate Court when fresh parties or addition or amendment of issues is necessary. In a suit by mortgagees to redeem a prior mortgage issues were framed and tried and disposed of in favour of the plaintiffs as to the questions whether the plaintiff's mortgage was valid, whether the mortgage sought to be redeemed had been discharged, and whether the suit was barred by limitation. The Court of first appeal was of opinion that these questions had not been properly considered, and set aside the decree for the plaintiffs, and directed that a fresh trial be held, certain fresh parties being brought on the record. Held, (i) that the order of remand was illegal, there being no proper ground for it under ss. 562 and 566 of the Code of Civil Procedure; (ii) that the lower Appellate Court should have joined the persons necessary for the suit, and should have so altered or added to the issues as to raise all questions properly arising, and should have referred them for trial to the Court of first instance. KELU MULACHERI NAYAR v. 24. Illegal remand—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 354. In a suit for a declaration of plaintiff's title to and possession of a share of certain property, she alleged that her title was derived by purchase from one R, who held under a deed of gift from T, the wife of the original holder. Defendant's case was that their title was derived from the three grandsons of one R K by his daughter C. The first Court dismissed the suit, considering that the defendants' title was proved, and that T was not competent to dispose of the property by gift to plaintiff's vendor. The lower Appellate Court, finding that it was not satisfactorily proved that the defendants' alleged three vendors were really the daughter's sons of R K, remanded the case for a finding on that issue. Held, with reference to s. 354, Act VIII of 1859, that the order of remand was illegal. HUROSOONDUREE DEBIA v. 25. Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 566. The karnavan of a tarwad in Malabar sued to recover property acquired by his sister (deceased) and now in the occupation of the defendants, her children. The parties were Mapillas. The defendants pleaded (i) that the property had been given to them and their mother jointly; (ii) that their mother was not governed by Marumakkatayam law. The Court of first instance found the first mentioned plea to be good, and dismissed the suit, and also found that the family was governed by Marumakkatayam law. The Court of first appeal dissented from the above finding as to the first plea, and, without deciding the second point, remanded the case for the trial of a general issue as to the mode of devolution of self-acquired property in Marumakkatayam Mapilla families in North Malabar, and ultimately it dismissed the suit on that issue. Held, that the order of remand was not one which should have been made under the Civil Procedure Code, s. 566, and the proceedings taken under it were irregular. ILLIKA PAKRAMAR v. 39. — Finding on issues framed. The High Court will not in a special appeal remand the case where there has been a distinct finding by the District Judge on the only issue framed by him, though he may have omitted to find on another issue raised before the Munsif, but not called for by other party on appeal. MOTI BHAGVAN v. HARJIVAN GIRDHURDAS 2 Bom. 34 : 2nd Ed. 32

40. — Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 352. Where the lower Court had decided a case on the merits and the Appellate Court did not find that there had been any omission to try any issue or determine any question essential to the decision of the case on the merits, or that further evidence was necessary to enable it to determine any such issue or question:—Held, that the Appellate Court was in error in remanding the case under s. 352 for a fresh trial. MAHESH CHUNDRA DAS v. MADHAB CHANDRA SIRDAR 2 B. L. R. S. N. 13 : 10 W. R. 388

41. — Insufficiency of evidence for decision of material issue—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, ss. 351, 354. Where there is no sufficient evidence before the Appellate Court for the disposal of an issue which is material to the determination of the suit, the proper course to be followed is to remand the case under s. 354 and not under s. 351. RAM PERSHAD v. KISHNA 3 Agra 146

42. — Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 354. Where an Appellate Court finds that there is no evidence upon the record to enable it to decide a question at issue between the parties, and remands the case under s. 354 of the Code for additional evidence, it ought to require such evidence with the finding of the first Court to be sent up to it for decision. SHUMBOO CHUNDER SURNOKAR v. RUSSICK CHUNDER CHUNG 15 W. R. 346

43. — Absence of evidence on material issue. The lower Appellate Court has no power to remand a case, which has come before it on appeal, to the Court of first instance for a second trial, except where the first Court has decided the case upon a preliminary issue in such a way as to cause an absence of material evidence bearing upon the issues on the merits between the parties. LALLA SHOOBH NARAIN v. NURSINGH NARAIN 20 W. R. 148

44. — Case decided on preliminary point—Hearing on entire evidence. Where all the evidence has been taken and the case decided on a preliminary point, no remand should be made. RAMA KOER v. LALA BHUGWAN LALL 22 W. R. 224

45. — Point not raised in Court below—Sufficiency of evidence for decision. The Appellate Court will not remand a case for re-trial on a point not raised in the Court below if the evidence already recorded is sufficient to enable the Appellate Court itself to decide the point. HARIDAS PERSHOTAM v. GAMBLE 12 Bom. 23

46. — Decision on sufficient evidence—Appellate Court—Improper remand. A case should not be remanded when the Appellate Court is of opinion that the lower Court cannot properly come to a different decision upon the evidence than that to which it has already come. BONOMALEE CHURN MYTEE v. SHORROOP HOOTAIT 14 W. R. 60

47. — Decision on preliminary point—Appellate Court having all the evidence before it. Where a lower Appellate Court has before it all the evidence which the parties wish to adduce and decides upon a preliminary point (e.g., the genuineness of a pottah), it has no authority to remand the case, but should itself try it. RAM JOY SEIN v. NUNDO MOYEE DABEA 10 W. R. 374

48. — Decision on one issue out of many—Decision after hearing all the evidence—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 562, 565, 566—Illegal order of remand. A District Munsif, having taken all the evidence offered on the issue in a suit, disposed of the suit upon his finding on one of the issues without deciding the rest. On appeal the District Judge reversed the decree and remanded the suit for the trial of the issues left untried. Held, that, under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the order of remand was illegal. AMMA v. for possession of property by right of inheritance the Court framed six issues, four of which it tried and decided. With reference to its finding upon the principal of these issues, which related to the plaintiff's legitimacy, the Court dismissed the suit, observing that in the view which it took of the case, the determination of the remaining issues was unnecessary. Some of the defendants had filed a statement of defence upon which no issues were framed, and no evidence taken, apparently in consequence of the attention of the Court being directed almost exclusively to the main issue as to the plaintiff's legitimacy. There was no formal order excluding evidence on any point. On appeal, the High Court reversed the first Court's finding on the issue with reference to which the suit had been dismissed below. Held, by EDGE, C.J., and MAHMOOD, J. (STRAIGHT, J., dissenting), that s. 562 of the Civil Procedure Code applied not only to cases where the first Court had expressly excluded evidence, but also to cases where the parties were or might have been misled by the act of the Court as to the issues or the evidence necessary, and where, in consequence of the Court erroneously considering one issue only, the parties did not tender or bring forward their evidence; and that, as in the present case, evidence had been excluded in this broad sense, s. 562 (the operation of which in such cases should be rather expanded than limited) was applicable, and the case should be remanded for trial of the remaining issues. Held, by STRAIGHT, J., contra, that, with reference to ss. 562, 563, and 564, the case could not be remanded under s. 562, because it had not been disposed of upon a preliminary point, so as to exclude evidence of fact, and the Court should therefore proceed to dispose of it upon the evidence on the record, if any; and that an issue should be remitted to the lower Court under s. 566. MUMAMMAD ALLAHADAD KHAN v. MUHAMMAD ISMAIL KHAN . I.L.R. 10 All. 289

51. Order of execution on insufficient evidence—Duty of Appellate Court. When a lower Court, on insufficient evidence of a decree having been kept in force, orders execution, the Appellate Court should not summarily reverse the order, but should remit the case, that the decree-holder may give further proof of the fact. *NILKUNT CHUCKERBUTTY v. 52. Omission to decide on merits of case—Suit dismissed on preliminary point—Power to decide case if reversed on that point on appeal—Remand. When a Court of first instance, after taking evidence, dismisses a suit upon a preliminary objection without giving a decision upon the merits of the case, and the decree is reversed on appeal, the Court of appeal, if it considers the evidence on record sufficient, may decide the case and is not bound to remand it for trial under s. 562 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1877. BANDI SUBBAYYA v. MADALAPALLI SUBANNA

53. Decision by lower Court of preliminary point—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 351. An Appellate Court is not justified in sending back a case for re-trial under s. 35 of the Code of Civil Procedure, merely because the lower Court has disposed of it upon a preliminary point, unless such point has been so disposed of as to exclude evidence of fact which appears to the Appellate Court essential to the rights of the parties. JOOGMAYA DEBIA v. RAMCHUNDER CHATTERJEE

10 W. R. 378

54. Evidence insufficient for decision on merits—Decision in favour of suit proceeding, reversing lower Court's. The Judge after disposing of the case on the only point on which the Munsif had decided,—viz., whether there was a cause of action,—and having satisfied himself that there was not sufficient evidence on the record to enable him to pass a proper decision upon the merits, was held clearly right in remanding the case to the Munsif. *BROMMO MOYEE DEBIA v. 55. Evidence sufficient, but further inquiry necessary—Reference of issue for trial—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 351. S. 351, Act VIII of 1859, is meant for those cases in which a lower Court has disposed of a case on a purely preliminary point. When abundant evidence has been taken, if the lower Appellate Court think any further inquiry necessary, the proper course is not to remand the case to the lower Court, but to frame an issue and to refer the same to the lower Court for trial under s. 354. *RAM CHUNDER GOOPTA v. 57. — Dismissal of suit as brought in wrong Court—Suit instituted in Revenue instead of Civil Court—Appellate Court, duty of—N.-W. P. Rent Act, 1881, s. 208. Where a suit instituted in the Revenue Court is dismissed by the Court of first instance, on the ground that it should have been instituted in the Civil Court, and the Appellate Court affirms the decision of the first Court, the Appellate Court should, under s. 208 of the N.-W. P. Rent Act, 1881, remand the case to the Civil Court competent to entertain it for disposal on the merits. AHMAD-UD-DIN KHAN v. MAJLIS RAI . . . I. L. R. 5 All. 438

58. — N.-W. P. Rent Act (XII of 1881), s. 208—Jurisdiction, suit dismissed on ground of want of. An Assistant Collector dismissed a suit without considering the merits, on the ground that it was not cognizable by a Revenue Court. On appeal, the District Judge held that it was unnecessary to determine the question of jurisdiction, as he had power in any event, under s. 208 of the N.-W. P. Rent Act, to remand the suit to the Assistant Collector, and he remanded it accordingly. Held, that the Judge had rightly construed s. 208 of the Rent Act, and that the remand was proper. 59. — Suit instituted in Revenue instead of Civil Court—N.-W. P. Rent Act, 1881, ss. 207, 208. In a suit instituted in the Court of an Assistant Collector, an objection was taken that the suit was not maintainable in the Revenue Court. The objection was allowed and the suit dismissed. On appeal by the plaintiff, the Assistant Collector's decision was affirmed. The Appellate Court had not before it the materials necessary for the determination of the suit. Held, reading together ss. 207 and 208 of Act XII of 1881 (N.-W. P. Rent Act), that though the objection to the jurisdiction was taken in the first Court and repeated before the Appellate Court, the latter should only have pro tanto entertained it for the purpose of determining to what Court it should direct its order of remand, and should not have passed an order the effect of which was to maintain the dismissal of the suit. REMAND—*contd.*2. GROUNDS FOR REMAND—contd.

61. — Suit held not barred by limitation—Trial on merits—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 351. Where an Appellate Court decides that a suit is not barred by limitation after it has taken evidence and gone into the whole case the decision is not one within s. 351, and the Court is not competent to remand the case, but ought to try it upon the evidence. HUSSUN ALI CHOWDHRY v. MANOOWAR ALI . . . 21 W. R. 413

62. — Decision on limitation and on the merits—Insufficiency of evidence—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, ss. 353, 357—Power to remand. Where the Court of first instance decides both on the general merits and the plea of limitation, and the Judge of the Appellate Court considers that the evidence upon the record is not sufficient to allow of a satisfactory judgment, and that he is in a position legally to order further evidence to be taken, he ought to proceed in the manner provided in ss. 354 to 357 of the Code of Civil Procedure, but has no right to set aside the first Court's decree and remand the case for re-trial. GOOROO PERSHAD DUTT v. SREENATH BANERJEE . . . 15 W. R. 314

63. — Decision on merits—Insufficiency of evidence—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 354. When the decision of a lower Court is not on a preliminary point, the lower Appellate Court cannot remand the suit to that Court with directions to take further evidence and to re-try the case, but the appeal must be kept pending on the file, and the record must be sent to the lower Court, with orders to take the necessary evidence. KALLEE SUNKUR ROY v. KISHTO DOOLAL CHOWDHRY . . . W. R. 1864, 296

64. — Additional evidence—Issue, trial of, by lower Court—Defect of parties—Successor of Judge making remand, power of. When an Appellate Court remands a case under s. 351 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1859, for the trial of an issue which the lower Court may have omitted to raise or to try, it is not limited to the evidence then on the record, but may keep the case pending on its own file until the return of the first Court's finding on the issue, with the evidence recorded on the trial thereof, or the Appellate Court may itself try the issue so raised. Where the evidence is accepted by a Subordinate Judge as sufficient to warrant a decree, and the case is only remanded for a defect of parties, his successor is justified, when the case is returned by the first Court, in respecting the former judgment and looking upon the evidence as prima facie good and sufficient. WISE v. ISHAN CHUNDER BANERJEE . . . 14 W. R. 380

65. — Decision as to costs—Power to remand case for trial on merits where appeal is only as to costs. On an appeal as to costs only, the Appellate Court had no jurisdiction to return the case for trial on its merits. MUTHRA PERSHAD v. BUNDEE ROY . . . 4 N. W. 20

trial. In a suit to obtain possession of miras land the Court of original jurisdiction decreed for plaintiff on the evidence, but on appeal its decision was reversed, on the ground that the claim had not been properly valued, and plaintiff was permitted to bring a fresh action. At the trial of the second action the Munsif recorded his previous decree and some additional evidence, which the District Judge on appeal considered to be insufficient. Held, that, under the peculiar circumstances of the case, the Judge, if not satisfied with the evidence taken at the second trial, should have allowed the plaintiff to give again the evidence adduced at the former trial. The lower Court's decree was therefore reversed, and the suit remanded in order that this might be done. JOTI BIN NIMBAJI v. SOMAJI BIN BAPAJI GURAV . . . . . 1 Bom. 166

67. ————— Decision as to admission of evidence—Additional evidence—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 354. The defendant pleaded payment and produced a letter of acknowledgment said to have been written by the plaintiff. The plaintiff denied its genuineness, and the Principal Sudder Ameen rejected the testimony of two pyadas who deposed to the payment. On appeal the Judge remanded the case, requiring the lower Court to give the appellant the opportunity of proving the letter, and after recording a fresh finding to return the case to his Court. Held, that the lower Court was bound to pronounce a distinct opinion as to the value of the evidence and not to have rejected it altogether. Held, also, that the Judge was wrong in remanding the case under s. 354, Act VIII of 1859, as he could have decided the case himself taking such additional evidence as might appear necessary. *RUNPAL SINGH v. When a suit has been regularly heard and determined, and on appeal the decree is reversed, the Appellate Court has the discretionary power to remand the case only if the decree should have been upon a preliminary point, and have the effect of excluding the consideration of evidence essential to the rights of the parties. *MUNIAPPAH NAIDU v. 3. ——— Remand after trial and decision on evidence—Appellate Court, powers of—Objection taken on appeal—Act VIII of 1859, s. 351—Costs. A lower Appellate Court is not competent to remand a case for a second decision, except as provided by s. 351, Act VIII of 1859, and therefore has no power to remand a case when a Court of first instance has investigated the merits of the case and passed its judgment upon the evidence. The objection that a case has been improperly remanded by the lower Appellate Court can be taken in special appeal from the decree passed upon the remand, although a special appeal might have been preferred from the order of remand, but the appellants were held not entitled to their costs. *MAJORAM OJHA v. 3. ——— Remand for re-trial—Re-opening of whole case. Where a suit was remanded by the lower Appellate Court for a "re-trial" the intention of the order of remand was held to be that the whole case was to be gone into de novo, the plaintiff being allowed to prove her case in any way she could. *GUDADHUR DUTT v. 7. ——— Remand for trial of issue under s. 354, Civil Procedure Code, 1859, effect of. Where an Appellate Court, in pursuance of Act VIII of 1859, s. 304, sends an issue down to the first Court in order that such evidence as the parties desired to adduce upon it may be taken and returned, the result is not to remand the case for re-trial, the first Court being functus officio in respect to such portion of the matter as it had already considered and determined. *GOSSAIN DOW-LUT GEER v. 9. ——— Absence of Judge who passed decree—Jurisdiction of his successor. Where a case is remanded to the lower Court to record reasons for its judgment, if the Judge who passed the decree is absent, the superior Court should be informed of it by his successor. 12. ————— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 562—Order of remand—Issues undecided—Procedure. A Subordinate Judge decided a suit on the ground (i) that it was res judicata; (ii) that it was barred by limitation. On appeal, the Assistant Judge upheld the decree on the first-mentioned ground without deciding the point of limitation. On second appeal, the High Court reversed the Assistant Judge's decision, holding that the suit was not res judicata, and remanded the case to be tried on the merits. On receipt of the order of the High Court, the Assistant Judge reversed the decree of the Subordinate Judge without giving any decision on the point of limitation and remanded the case to the Subordinate Judge to be tried on the merits. From this order the defendant appealed to the High Court. Held, that the order of remand by the Assistant Judge was unauthorized under s. 562 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). When the High Court remanded the case to be tried on the merits, the whole case was left open to the Assistant Judge, and, before he could reverse the Subordinate Judge's decree, he was bound, under s. 562 of the Code, to determine whether the decision of the Subordinate Judge on the question of limitation was right or not. RAISINGJI v. On the return of the reference the appeal came before another Judge, who, holding that the reference was unnecessary and that the original findings of fact in the Court below were sufficient to dispose of the appeal, disregarded the findings on the reference, and dismissed the appeal. In appeal under s. 10 of the Letters Patent, it was held, that it was competent to the Judge before whom the appeal had subsequently come to disregard the findings on the order of reference. MUBARAK HUSAIN v. 21. ——— Taking evidence on remand—Power to take additional evidence on remand where order of remand does not so order—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 562, 566, and 568. Suit by the adoptive daughter of a temple dancing woman, deceased, to compel the trustees of the temple to permit the performance of a certain ceremony, in view to her entering on the duties and emoluments attached to the office of her adoptive mother. On second appeal, the High Court directed the return of a finding on the issue (previously framed, but not tried) whether the plaintiff's adoption was valid. Fresh evidence was taken, and the finding was that the adoption was made with the intention that the girl should be prostituted while she was still a minor. Held, that the lower Court had power to take additional evidence on the issue remanded, although not specially authorized to do so by the order of remand. KAMALAKSHI v. MOHIMA CHUNDER MOOKERJEE . . . 11 W. R. 227

29. ——— Trial on issue not stated in order of remand—Effect of irregularity. Where the High Court had been misled into making an order of remand upon an issue other than that on which the case at the time ought to have been made to depend as between the parties, and the lower Appellate Court on remand came to a finding of fact which correctly disposed of the case, it was held that though the latter did not deal properly with the evidence on the record with reference to the precise issue sent down to it, its default ought not to govern the final result between plaintiff and defendant. MAHOMED HASHIM v. 5. ———— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 567—Discretion of Court. Where a first Appellate Court has remanded a case to the Court of first instance for the trial of issues, and where, on the return of findings on these issues, objections under s. 567 of the Civil Procedure Code have not been filed until after the expiration of the prescribed period, the Appellate Court, though not bound to entertain the objections, should nevertheless, upon the hearing of the remand allow the party filing them to be heard with regard to them. Ratan Singh v. Wazir, I. L. R. 1 All. 165, and Akbari Begam v. Wilayat Ali, I. L. R. 2 All. 908, referred to. An Appellate Court, because it remands issues, does not therefore, in the absence of subsequent objection by either or both of the parties to the findings when returned, divest itself of its power to exercise its judicial mind as to the propriety of such findings; but apart from any objection by the parties, it should examine and test them to see whether or not they ought to be accepted. Akbari Begam v. Wilayat Ali, I. L. R. 2 All. 908, followed. Umed Ali v. Salima Bibi, I. L. R. 6 All. 383, referred to. MUMTAZ BEGAM v. FATEH HUSAIN. I. L. R. 6 All. 361

STEWART*. 9 W. R. 438

7. ———— Findings to which no objection is preferred—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 566—Appellate Court, powers of—Error or irregularity. Held, that an Appellate Court is not bound to accept a finding returned to it by a Court of first instance, under s. 566 of Act X of 1877, merely because no objections to such finding are preferred, but is competent to examine the evidence on which such finding is founded, and to satisfy itself that it is correct and fit to be accepted. Noorun v. Khoda Baksh, 1 Agra 50, dissented from. Ratan Singh v. Wazir, I. L. R. 1 All. 165, followed. Held, also, that, assuming that an Appellate Court, in deciding a case in a manner inconsistent with and opposed to the finding returned to it by the Court of first instance under that section, in the absence of objections, acted irregularly, its decree could not be reversed or the case remanded on account of such irregularity, such irregularity not affecting the

Wilayat Ali, I. L. R. 2 All. 908*, followed. 9. ————— Lower Appellate Court, power of, on remand—Possession, suit for—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 561, 566. The plaintiff's suit for possession of certain lands after determination of the boundary between two estates was partially decreed by the Munsif. The defendant appealed, but the plaintiff did not appeal, nor file any objection under s. 561 of the Civil Procedure Code. The Subordinate Judge, on appeal, modified the decree in favour of the defendant. Plaintiff then appealed to the High Court, and the case was remanded for trial on a fresh investigation. The Subordinate Judge after a fresh enquiry passed a decree in favour of the plaintiff giving him more lands than what was given by the Court of first instance. On second appeal by the defendant: Held, that under the circumstances, the Subordinate Judge had no power to award to the plaintiff more than what he recovered in the Munsif's Court. *Bikramjit Singh v. remanding a suit for re-trial is not to be confined to the question whether the remand has been made contrary to the provisions of s. 562 of Act X of 1877 or not, but the question whether the decision of the Appellate Court on the preliminary point is correct or not may also be raised and determined in such an appeal. BADAM v. IMRAT, I. L. R. 2 All. 675

3. ————— Power of Appellate Court to deal with whole appeal after return of findings—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 561, 566. In a second appeal by the defendant, in which the plaintiff filed objections to the decree under s. 561 of the Civil Procedure Code, the High Court, without giving judgment on the appeal, stated (giving reasons) the opinion that the appellant would be entitled to succeed and at the same time remitted an issue under s. 566 of the Code with reference to the plaintiff's objections. At that time the appeal was apparently not argued out, and the true meaning of the facts as found was obviously not present to the mind of the Court. Held, that, upon the return of the findings on remand, the Court could not treat the appeal as already decided and the objections the sole matter for consideration, but must consider both appeal and objections and decide the whole case. Held, however, that where Judges have heard arguments on some of the issues and have expressed their views thereon and have remitted another issue or issues under s. 566, they are not bound, on the return of findings, to hear the case de novo, but may confine counsel to argument upon the findings. *LACHMAN PRASAD v. 4. ————— Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 562—Power of the High Court to go into the merits on appeal from a remand order. The Court of first instance dismissed a suit as barred by limitation. In appeal that decision was reversed, and the case was remanded under s. 562 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). Against the order of remand the defendant appealed to the High Court under cl. 28 of s. 588 of the Civil Procedure Code. It was contended by the plaintiff that the High Court had no power to decide the point of limitation, but could only consider whether the order of remand satisfied the requirements of s. 562 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held, by the Full Bench, that in an appeal against such an order of remand the power of the High Court is not confined to the question whether that order satisfied the requirements of s. 562; but may also determine the correctness of the lower Appellate Court's decision on the preliminary point on which the Court of first instance disposed of the case. *Badam v. of Appellate Court to re-try such point. A Court of first instance dismissed a suit upon a preliminary point. On appeal by the plaintiff against the decree of such Court, the then Judge of the Appellate Court, Mr. B, reversed the decree upon such preliminary point and remanded the suit under s. 562 of Act X of 1877 for the trial of a certain issue. The Court of first instance tried such issue and made a decree in accordance with its finding thereon. On appeal against the decree of the Court of first instance, the defendant again raised such preliminary point. The then Judge of the Appellate Court, Mr. K, dismissed the suit upon such preliminary point. Held, that, as, although Mr. B had irregularly remanded the suit under s. 562 of Act X of 1877, his decision disposed of such preliminary point, and only left open for trial the issue which he had directed to be tried, Mr. K was not competent to re-try and decide such preliminary point. *SURAJ DIN v. of the Munsif, who threw out plaintiff's claim, omitted to pass a decree himself in favour of the plaintiff, which his finding showed he intended to do. The case was remanded on special appeal by the High Court to the District Judge (who had meanwhile returned to his appointment), who re-opened the whole case, and passed a decree directly opposed to that of his predecessor, in which he confirmed the Munsif's decree. Held, that the decree of the Judge should be reversed, and the suit again remanded, in order that he might pass a decree for the plaintiff, in accordance with the view of the case expressed by the Acting Judge, with which the High Court saw no ground, upon the special appeal before it, to interfere. *BABAJI BIN RAMJI v. The Munsif having decided the case accordingly, it went up on appeal to the Additional Judge. Held, that the proper course for the Additional Judge was simply to confine himself to considering whether the decision of the Court below on the issue directed was correct or not: he had no power to go behind the order of the Subordinate Judge on the previous occasion. *BODUN BUROOH v. Where an Appellate Court passed an order under s. 562, remanding a case which had been disposed of in the Court of first instance upon points which were not preliminary points, but points directed to the merits of the case, the High Court on appeal set aside the remand order, directing the lower Appellate Court to hear the appeal according to law. ABRAHIM KHAN v. REMAND—contd.*6. CASES OF APPEAL AFTER REMAND—
—contd.

—Civil Procedure Code, s. 13—Res judicata. It is competent to a High Court in an appeal from an order of remand under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure to pass a decree dismissing the appeal preferred to the lower Court from the decree in the suit. Bhau Ba'a v. 18. ———— Civil Procedure Code, s. 566—Power of High Court in second appeal. A revenue-paying talukh was sold for arrears of dāk cess under the Public Demands Recovery Act. The sale was set aside on appeal by the Revenue Commissioner, but on an application for review made to his successor, the sale was confirmed, and the purchaser took possession. In a suit to recover possession of an 8 annas share of the talukh on the grounds, among others, that the order on review was passed without jurisdiction and without notice to the plaintiffs, and as such conferred no title on the purchaser, the District Judge, on appeal, held that the order on review, not having been set aside, remained in force, but he remanded the case under s. 566 for trial of the question of notice. On the case coming back to the Appellate Court before another Judge, he held the order on review to be ultra vires, and the trial of the question of notice to be unnecessary. The defendants preferred a second appeal against the last judgment. Held, that on the hearing of the appeal the entire case, including the order of remand, was open to consideration, and that the High Court had power to determine whether that order or the order subsequently passed was correct on the merits. LALA PRYAG LAL v. JAI NARAYAN SINGH

19. ———— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 562, 590, and 591—Power of High Court in second appeal. On an appeal from a decree of a District Munsif, it appeared that he had decided all the issues framed in the suit, but in the opinion of the District Judge he had based his judgment upon evidence improperly taken. The District Judge remanded the case to be retried, and in the event a decree was passed dismissing the suit which was affirmed on appeal by the Subordinate Judge:—Held, on second appeal, that the order of remand was illegal, and, although it had not been appealed against, the subsequent proceedings should be treated as non-existent and the appeal to the District Court should be remanded to be disposed of in accordance with law. Savitri v. Ramji, I. L. R. 14 Bom. 232, and Rameshar Singh v. Sheodin Singh, I. L. R. 12 All. 510, referred to. SUBBA SASTRI v. BALACHANDRA SASTRI

21. ——— Finding of fact—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 584 and 588. Where an appeal is preferred against an appellate order under s. 588, Civil Procedure Code, the finding of fact by the lower Appellate Court is conclusive as between the parties on the proper construction of ss. 584 and 588, Civil Procedure Code. *VEN : A-NAYYAN v. 22. ——— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 562, 588, and 591—Conditions under which an order passed in the course of a suit may be questioned in an appeal from the decree in such suit—Limitation. An order made under the Code of Civil Procedure from which an appeal is given under s. 588 of that Code may be questioned under s. 591 in an appeal from the decree in the suit if the ground of objection is stated in the memorandum of appeal. So held, by the Full Bench, following Rameshar Singh v. Sheodin Singh, I. L. R. 12 All. 510. Muzhar Hossein v. Bodha Bibi, I. L. R. 17 All. 112, distinguished. Held, (by EDGE C. J. and AIKMAN, J.), that s. 591 of the Code of Civil Procedure does not enable an appellant to avoid limitation by coming up under s. 591 when the only ground of appeal is an order made under s. 562. S. 591 contemplates two things—there being a regular appeal about something else, and in that appeal the insertion of a ground of objection under s. 591. SHEO NATH SINGH v. RAM DIN SINGH

23. ——— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 591—Appeal from decree in suit, the grounds of appeal being solely directed against an interlocutory order in the suit. No appeal will lie where, the appeal being ostensibly against the decree in the suit, the grounds of appeal were solely directed against an interlocutory order passed in the suit. *Sheo Nath Singh v. therefore appealable. LALA RAM SARAN LAL v. NEM NARAIN SINGH (1902) . 6 C. W. N. 326

25. ——— Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 588 (28)—Appeal against order remanding case for disposal—Decision by Sub-Collector in summary suit under Rent Recovery Act—Remand by District Court—Appeal—Rent Recovery Act (Mad. Act VIII of 1865), s. 69—"Judgment." In a summary suit under the Rent Recovery Act, the Sub-Collector held a patta to be improper, and released certain property from attachment. On an appeal being preferred, the District Judge reversed the finding of the Sub-Collector, and remanded the case, under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure, for disposal according to law. Plaintiff appealed to the High Court against the order of remand, when it was objected that no appeal lay: Held, that an appeal lay. It was competent to the District Judge to make the order of remand under s. 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The adjudication by the Collector was a formal expression of an adjudication on a right claimed, within the meaning of the definition of "decree" contained in s. 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure. It was also a formal expression of a right claimed in a Civil Court. VEERASWAMY v. MANAGER, PITTAPUR ESTATE (1902) I. L. R. 26 Mad. 518

26. ——— Validity of order of remand—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 562, 566, 578, 588—Jurisdiction, meaning of the term—Remand order in contravention of s. 564—Whether the remand and the subsequent proceedings null and void—Whether legality of the remand order could be questioned on an appeal from the final decree. The term "jurisdiction" in s. 578 of the Civil Procedure Code is used in the sense of pecuniary or local jurisdiction, or jurisdiction relating to the subject-matter of a suit. It does not mean the legal authority of a Court to do certain things. A suit having been decided by the Court of first instance, not upon a preliminary point, but upon the merits, the lower Appellate Court reversed the decision of the first Court and remanded the case under s. 562 of the Civil Procedure Code. On remand a partial decree was passed by the Court in favour of the plaintiff. On appeal the decree was modified by the lower Appellate Court. On a second appeal by the plaintiff to the High Court:—Held, that, having regard to the provisions of s. 578 of the Civil Procedure Code, the remand order and the subsequent proceedings were not null and void, as by the remand there was no error affecting the jurisdiction of the Court or the merits of the case. Rameshar Singh v. Sheodin Singh, I. L. R. 12 All. 510, dissented from. Held, also, that the legality of a remand order and the subsequent proceedings could be questioned on second appeal from the final decree, although no appeal had been preferred against the order itself under s. 588, cl. (28), of the Civil Procedure Code. MOHESH CHANDRA DASS v. JAMIRUDDIN MOLLAH (1901)

REMAND—contd.*7. CRIMINAL CASES.

1. — Object of remand—Criminal Procedure Code (Act VIII of 1869), s. 422—Act X of 1872, s. 282—Power of Appellate Court. A remand of a case under s. 422, Act VIII of 1869, could only be for the purpose of taking further evidence, and certifying the result thereof to the Appellate Court, and not for the purpose of retrying the case upon such fresh evidence. After remand under this section, the Appellate Court could only try the case as an ordinary appeal, and had no power to enhance the punishment. ANONYMOUS

2. — Ground for remand—Improper admission of examination of accused—Criminal Procedure Code, 1861, s. 205. When the examination of the prisoner had not been recorded in full as required by s. 205 of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1861, and was therefore inadmissible without further proof of it, but, if admissible, would either alone or with other evidence be sufficient for the conviction of the accused, the proper course was held to be to remand the case to the Court of Session, in order that proof might be taken of the examination. When the evidence, exclusive of the inadmissible examination, is sufficient to support the conviction, it may be affirmed by the High Court without remanding the case. REG. v. KALLA LAKHMAJI

S.C. BHABATARINI DAS v. GREY

2 B. L. R. A. C. 152

2. — Suits cognizable under Rent Act—Suit partly for rent in district where Act not in force. Held, that a suit brought to recover rent, partly due in respect of estates situate in a district in which the Act was not in force, could be brought under the Rent Act. OOSMAN KHAN v. CHOWDHRY SHEORAJ SINGH

5 N. W. 42

3. — Basis of suit—Jurisdiction of Collector. A suit for rent was cognizable only by the Collector under cl. 4, s. 23, Act X of 1859, whether it was based upon a kabuliati or agreement, or neither. DHUNPUT SINGH v. MILLS

7 W. R. 473

4. — Suit for rent of lands held in excess. The Revenue Courts had under Act X of 1859 jurisdiction in a suit for rent in respect of lands held in excess of the lands for which the defendant was paying rent, where there was no lease or express contract limiting the lands of the tenancy. SHAM JHA v. DOORGA ROY

7 W. R. 122

5. — Suit for rent payable under agreement—Variable rate. A suit will lie under the Rent Act for rent payable under an agreement that land taken and occupied without an actual demise should be paid for at certain rates. A variation in the rates of rent in accordance with the crops under a distinct agreement to that effect is not in the nature of enhancement of rent. JADOOBUR SINGH v. BEHAREE SINGH

2 N. W. 437

6. — Suit for rent in kind—Beng. Act VIII of 1869. A suit for rent in kind is cognizable under Bengal Act VIII of 1869. MULLICK AMANUT ALI v. UKLOO PASEE and RAIKISORI DASI v. BONOMALI CHARAN MAITI

1 B. L. R. S. N. 14; 10 W. R. 209

7. ———— Suit for rent in kind. The Rent Act applies where rent is reserved in kind, just the same as in the case of suits for rent in money, but not where articles are to be delivered under a separate agreement unconnected with the question of rent. BHUBO SOONDUREE DEBIA v. JYNUL ABDIN . . . . . 8 W. R. 393

8. ———— Suit for rent in kind—Beng. Act VIII of 1869—Jurisdiction. The defendant took from the plaintiff's ancestor a small portion of endowed land for a garden, and in consideration thereof paid him a certain fixed amount of grain for his maintenance and support, and subsequently that payment was commuted into a monthly allowance of R3-8, which was regularly paid till 1276, and then stopped. To a suit under Bengal Act VIII of 1869 to recover the amount, the defence was that a suit for a claim of such a nature could not be brought under that Act; but the objection was overruled, and the plaintiff held entitled to recover the amount sued for. JAILALODDEN v. BURNE . 15 B. L. R. 261 note; 18 W. R. 99

9. ———— Suit for rent in kind—Damages. Held, that damages on account of the wanton destruction of trees, though stipulated for in a kabuliat, cannot be claimed as rent; but that a stipulation to supply a number of mangoes yearly is one to pay a part of the rent in kind, and the value of the mangoes is realizable as rent in a Revenue Court. NUBO TARINEE DOSSEE v. GRAY . . . . . 11 W. R. 7

S.C. BHABATARINI DASI v. GREY

2 B. L. R. A. C. 152

10. ———— Suit to maintain money-rent and prevent substitution of rent in kind. Held, that a suit for maintenance of money-rent, and to prevent the zamindar from substituting a rent in kind for the money-rent previously paid, is not a suit cognizable under the Rent Acts (Act X of 1859 or Act XIV of 1863). BAINEE v. MAHOMED ALI KHAN . . . . . 2 Agra 307

11. ———— Suit to enhance julkur tenure. A suit for enhancement of a julkur tenure is cognizable under the Rent Act. PUKAN SAUTRA v. TAJOODDEEN . 5 W. R., Act X, 20

And so is a suit for a kabuliat for payment of the rent of a fishery. KOYLASH CHUNDER DEY v. JOY NARAIN JALOOAH . . . . . 7 W. R. 93

12. ———— Suit for rent of land in a town—Beng. Act VIII of 1869. Bengal Act VIII of 1869 relates only to agricultural holdings, and its provisions have no application to lands forming part of a street in a town. COLLECTOR OF MONGHYR v. MADAR BUKSH . . . . . 25 W. R. 136

RENT, SUIT FOR—contd.

13. ———— Suit for rent of house situated in town. A suit for a kabuliat or surkhut will lie under Bengal Act VIII of 1869 in the case of a house situated in a town. RAM LALL v. CHUMMON GHUTTUCK . 24 W. R. 271

14. ———— Enhancement of rent of a dwelling-house in village. A suit for enhancement of rent of a dwelling-house in a village is cognizable under the Rent Act. ABDOOL HAMID v. DONAGRAM DEY . . . . . 3 B. L. R. Ap. 133

15. ———— Suit for rent of land with buildings. A suit for the rent of land is not altered by the fact of houses or buildings standing thereon, and therefore such a suit is one cognizable under the Rent Act (X of 1859). MATHURANATH KUNDU v. CAMPBELL . . . . . 9 B. L. R. 115 note; 15 W. R. 463

16. ———— Suit for rent of land with buildings—Jurisdiction. The Revenue Courts had no jurisdiction to entertain a suit for rent of land with buildings upon it, when the rent included the rent of the buildings as well as of the land. DHIRAJ MAHATAB CHAND BAHADUR v. MAKUND BALLABH BOSE . . . . . 9 B. L. R. Ap. 13; 14 W. R. 246

17. ———— Suit for house-rent including ground-rent. Where house-rent includes the rent of the ground upon which the house stands, and the ground-rent can be separated from the other items forming the aggregate of the house-rent, the claim to the extent of the ground-rent may be cognizable by the Revenue Court under Act X of 1859. RAM CHURN SINGH KETTREE v. MEADHUN DURJEE . . . . . 8 W. R. 90

18. ———— Liquidated damages under agreement with respect to house. The defendant bought a house belonging to the plaintiff and standing on his own land, on the condition that, as long as the house was not removed, he would pay the plaintiff a certain sum per month. The house not having been removed, the plaintiff sued for the stipulated sum from date of purchase. Held, that this was not an action for rent, but a suit for liquidated damages, and as such cognizable in the Civil Court. DEBNATH ROY CHOWDHRY v. KALLY KISTO ROY CHOWDHRY . . . . . 1 W. R. 2

19. ———— Jurisdiction under Beng. Act VIII of 1869—Suit for rent of houses. The rulings applicable to suits for rent of houses or of portions of land covered with houses or markets have no reference to suits in which rent is claimed in respect of a mouzah or of an entire estate or the aliquot part of an estate. Hence a suit for rent of 8 annas of a mouzah which was part of the plaintiff's zamindari held in farm as a whole by the defendant may be properly brought in a Civil Court under the provisions of Bengal Act VIII of 1869. GANEEMUT HOSSEIN v. RUNGOO SAHOO . . . . . 3 C. L. R. 8

20. ———— Suit for rent of lands appurtenant to dwelling-house. The defendant had been declared entitled, under s. 9, Bengal

RENT, SUIT FOR—contd.

Regulation XIX of 1814, to hold certain lands as attached to his dwelling-house, at an equitable rent payable to the landlord. The landlord subsequently sued under the Rent Act for enhancement of rent of these lands. Held, that a suit for the rent of such lands could not be maintained under that Act. KHAIRUDDIN AHMED v. ABDUL BAKI

3 B. L. R. A. C. 65: 11 W. R. 410

21. ——— Suit for house and ground. If a house and two parcels of ground were held and enjoyed together, forming, as it were, one compound or set of premises, the suit as to the whole was not cognizable under the Rent Act. If one of the parcels of land lies at a distance, or is wholly separate and distinct from the other, the suit as to the former was cognizable under that Act. BIPRODOSS DEY v. WOLLEN

1 W. R. 222

TAREENY PERSAUD GHOSE v. BENGAL INDIGO COMPANY

2 W. R., Act X, 9

22. ——— Suit for rent of land let for purpose of factory and dwelling-house. A suit lies under Act X of 1859 for the rent of land let for the purposes of a factory including the dwelling-house of the proprietor of the factory, it being immaterial for what purposes the lands were demised. TAREENY PERSAUD GHOSE v. BENGAL INDIGO COMPANY

2 W. R., Act X, 9

23. ——— Suit for rent of lands covered by arhâts, ghâts, and bazars. A suit for rent of land where the rent comes from arhâts, ghâts, and bazars situated upon it, as well as from the land, was held not to lie under the Rent Act. HARI MOHAN SIRKAR v. MONCRIEFF

9 B. L. R. Ap. 14: 15 W. R. 464 note

MADAN SING v. MADAN RAM DEB

1 B. L. R. S. N. 11

24. ——— Suit for ground rent of land on which golah is built. A suit for ground-rent of the land on which a golah stands is not cognizable under the Rent Act. DELAHUR ALI v. DABEE PERSHAD

11 W. R. 203

25. ——— Suit for ferry tolls. The rent law in Bengal does not apply to ferry tolls. Hari Mohan Sirkar v. Moncrieff, 9 B. L. R. Ap. 14, applied. RACHHEA SINGH v. UPENDRA CHANDRA SINGH

I. L. R. 27 Calc. 239

26. ——— Suit for rent of bastu lands. Where the rent for bastu lands was paid by the raiyats to their landlord separately from the rent paid for the cultivated lands, but the tenure of the bastu lands was a raiyatwari tenure, it was held that, as a matter of law, the distinction in the mode of paying the rent did not exclude those lands from the operation of Act X of 1859 or Bengal Act VIII of 1869. POGOSE v. RAJOO DHOPEE

22 W. R. 511

27. ——— Suit for rent of garden attached to a house. Held, that a suit by a lessee against a sub-lessee to obtain rent of a garden which was attached to a house, and was ancillary to the enjoyment of the house, was not cognizable by the Revenue Court, but by the Civil Court. SHYAM SINGH v. PUNCHUM MAJEE

RENT, SUIT FOR—contd.

2 Agra 243

28. ——— Suit for rent of land on tenancy not strictly agriculturable. The class of cases cognizable under the Rent Act includes suits for rent in cases of tenancies not strictly agriculturable, provided the subject of the lease is land and the rent issues out of the land, and is due on account of, and for the use of, the land, whatever may be the purpose for which the surface of the land is used. WATSON v. GOBIND CHUNDER MOZOOMDAR

W. R. 1864, Act X, 46

29. ——— Garden land where trees are removed—Suit to fix rent of—Act X of 1859, s. 23, cl. 1. Where land has been held as a bagh, and no other right or interest therein is shown, it becomes ordinarily, on removal of the trees, a portion of the malguzari land of the village, and the occupant who brings it under cultivation is liable to the payment of rent. If the landowner and himself cannot by agreement fix the rent, a suit for the determination of the rate was maintainable under cl. 1, s. 23 of Act X of 1859. But where the occupant who brings the bagh under cultivation sets up a right inconsistent with the existence of the relation of landlord and tenant, and there is a contest between the parties as to their respective rights and positions, the clause was inapplicable. SHEOPAL SINGH v. RAI SEETARAM

3 N. W. 18

30. ——— Suit for tolls from persons coming to hât—Beng. Act VIII of 1869. A suit for rent derivable by a lessor from tolls collected by the lessee from persons resorting to a hât is not cognizable under Bengal Act VIII of 1869. SAVI v. ISSUR CHUNDER MUNDUL

20 W. R. 146

31. ——— Suit to enforce right to erect golahs at ghâts and to collect duties—Act X of 1859, s. 23. A suit for enforcing an alleged right to erect golahs at certain ghâts, and to collect duties from persons using them, was not a suit "on account of any right of pasturage, forest right, fisheries, or the like," within s. 23 of Act X of 1859, and the Collector had no jurisdiction to entertain it. FURLONG v. JOHURREE LOLL

Marsh. 194: 1 Hay 453

32. ——— Suit for rent from a toll on river or canal—Act X of 1859, s. 23, cl. 4. A suit to recover rent on lease of toll arising from a canal or river navigation was not cognizable under cl. 4, s. 23, Act X of 1859. GARLAND v. RAI MOHUN HAZRAH

1 W. R. 15

33. ——— Suit for tolls for use of a ferry—Act X of 1859, s. 23, cl. 4. A suit for tolls for the use of a ferry belonging to the plaintiff was not maintainable under Act X of 1859, s. 23, cl. 4. FURLONG v. TREELOCHUN SINGH

Marsh. 504: 2 Hay 598

34. ——— Suit for dustoorut—Beng. Act VIII of 1869—Objection on appeal. A suit for dustoorut is not a suit for rent, and is therefore not cognizable under Bengal Act VIII of 1869. The ground that, even supposing the suit was not a suit for rent, it was not liable to be dismissed in order that a fresh suit might be instituted under Act VIII of 1859, not having been taken in the Court below, nor in the grounds of special appeal, was overruled at the hearing of the special appeal. RAM CHURN BANERJEE v. TORITA CHURN PAUL

RENT, SUIT FOR—contd.

18 W. R. 343

35. ——— Suit for rent of stone quarries—Act X of 1859, s. 23, cl. 4. In a suit for rent under a lease of 8 annas of a certain hill and of 14 bighas of land by which the lessee reserved a yearly rent of R200 for the land, and the right of levying a yearly tax on the parties who were employed in quarrying the stone:—Held, that this was not a suit cognizable under Act X of 1859. Khalut Chunder Ghose v. Minto, 1 Ind. Jur. N. S. 426, considered and approved. SHALGRAM v. KUBIRUN
3 B. L. R. A. C. 61: 11 W. R. 400

36. ——— Suit to recover payment for use of land for stacking timber. In a suit to recover money due, or payment in kind, for the use of the plaintiff's land by stacking timber thereon and keeping it there for a specified time:—Held, that the claim was of the nature of one for rent and governed by the law of limitation applicable to money claims of that kind. Where there are well known terms upon which the use of land for stacking timber is permitted by its owner, and a party with the knowledge of this custom or practice uses the land in this way, he is bound as by an implied agreement to pay accordingly for such use. JUMNA DOSS v. GAWSEE MEAH . 21 W. R. 124

37. ——— Huqajiri—Usufructuary mortgage—Reserved rent. The plaintiff had borrowed money on security of a zur-i-peshgi lease of property which, after some years, he sued to redeem by payment of an alleged balance, claiming credit for huqajiri of the hypothecated land owing to him for the intervening period. Held, that huqajiri is not rent (see Hyder Buksh v. Hossein Buksh, 4 W. R. 103), and if it were it was not claimed as such in this case; moreover, there being a rent reserved would not alter the essential character of the arrangement, which was one of usufructuary mortgage. Held, that the words of s. 25, Act X of 1859, imply that a suit by a zamindar to recover a rent reserved on land which has been let out on a zur-i-peshgi lease should be brought in a Civil Court. Held, also, that the plaintiff was justified in bringing his suit in a Court where he could obtain substantial relief, although the remedy sought by him involved in its details different jurisdictions. SHEO GOLAM SINGH v. ROY DINKUR DYAL . 12 W. R. 215

38. ——— Huq-i-zamindari—Deposit as security for rent. The fact that a sum of money was deposited by the lessee with the lessor as security for the payment of the rent did not remove a suit for rent from the jurisdiction of the Revenue Courts. A claim for huq-i-zamindar was not cognizable under Act X of 1859. JOWAHUR LALL v. SULTAN ALI . 12 W. R. 214

RENT, SUIT FOR—contd.

39. ——— Suit for zamindari dāk charges. A suit by a zamindar against a patnidar for zamindari dāk charges, under Bengal Act VIII of 1862, for which the latter is liable under his kabuliat, was not cognizable under Act X of 1859. RUTTUNMONEE DOSSEE v. JOTENDROMOHUN TAGORE . 6 W. R., Act X, 31

40. ——— Suit for sum in nature of rent-charge—Act XIV of 1863, s. 1, cl. 4—Nuzzerana. A certain sum was paid to Government as nuzzerana during the existence of the maafee grant through a lambardar. After the maafee was resumed and a Government jumma assessed upon it, the nuzzerana continued to be paid until the interest of the holder of the resumed maafee was confiscated for rebellion and sold at auction. After the confiscation, the Government allowed the amount to the lambardar by deducting it from the amount of Government revenue paid by him. Held, that, under the circumstances, the payment of nuzzerana being a present in acknowledgment of proprietary title in the nature of a rent charge, the suit was cognizable under cl. (4), s. 1, Act XIV of 1863. ZAHOR HOSSEIN v. ASSUD ALI
2 Agra Pt. II, 178

41. ——— Suit for arrears of cess. A suit for arrears of a cess, which is not in the nature of rent, could not be brought under Act X of 1859. KASIM ALI v. SHADEE . 3 N. W. 21

42. ——— Suit to recover cesses in excess of rent—Jurisdiction. Act X of 1859 gives no jurisdiction in suits to recover cesses over and above the rent. ORJOON SAHOO v. ANUND SINGH . 10 W. R. 257

43. ——— Suit to recover lambardari right—Act XIV of 1863. Held, that a suit to recover lambardari right, or 10 per cent. allowance provided for in the administration paper, being other than a commission on actual collection, was not cognizable under Act XIV of 1863. KHOOBEE v. AKBAR . 2 Agra 322

44. ——— Suit for price of trees—Act X of 1859, s. 23, cl. 4. A suit for half the price of trees cut down by the tenant, and claimed by the landlord by right of usage, was not cognizable under cl. 4, s. 23, Act X of 1859. TOHUL ROY v. MAHADEO DUTT . W. R. 1864, 327

45. ——— Suit for rent of zerait lands. A suit for rent from a party holding lands as zerait in his own possession was one for rent as between landlord and tenant, and cognizable under Act X of 1859. CROWDY v. SREE MISSEER
12 W. R. 4

46. ——— Suit for rent of land covered by buildings. L having claimed certain lands as lessee from the zamindar and A having pleaded that he held them under a mirasi tenure from the zamindar, the Court held that the two leases could co-exist, and that L was entitled to recover actual possession and to pay to A, as an intermediate holder, the rent due to the zamindar. In execution of the decree L was put in possession of all the land

except a portion covered by factory buildings in the possession of A, which buildings the Court held did not go with the land. Unable to get possession, I brought a suit to recover rent for the land covered by the building. Held, that no suit for rent could lie, A's representative being a trespasser and his mere statement of willingness to pay rent being insufficient to constitute the relation of landlord and tenant. LYONS v. BETTS . 13 W. R. 94

47. ———— Payment by one co-sharer to others—Beng. Act VIII of 1869. A co-sharer in an estate who cultivates a portion belonging to himself and the other shareholders should pro tanto be considered their tenant, and payment by such co-sharer for land so cultivated, by whatever name it be called, is substantially rent and a suit for such rent comes properly under the provisions of Bengal Act VIII of 1869. ALLADINEE DOSSEE v. SREENATH CHUNDER BOSE . 20 W. R. 258

48. ———— Suits for rent by goondahs against under-tenants. Suits for rent between "goondahs" and those cultivating under them were cognizable under the Rent Act. LIKHUN PATHUK v. ROOP LAL . 3 N. W. 48

49. ———— Suit against co-sharer for share of rent—Act X of 1859, s. 23. S. 23, Act X of 1859, was not applicable to a suit in which the plaintiff claimed as entitled to a moiety of the rent of certain land in the possession of his co-sharer. MITTUNLAL SAHOO v. NADUE . 1 W. R. 53

KALEE PERSHAD v. LUTAFUT HOSSEIN . 12 W. R. 418

50. ———— Suit for share of rent against tenant and co-lessors. A suit for a share of rent against a tenant and co-lessors was not cognizable as a suit for rent within the meaning of cl. 4, s. 23, Act X of 1859. LALIA ISREE PERSHAD v. STUART . W. R. 1864, Act X, 28

51. ———— Suit for rent and damages against co-sharers for sub-lease. Suit against co-sharers and dar-ijaradar for rent and damages in respect of a mehal of which a sub-lease was granted by the defendant co-sharers. As plaintiff did not get possession of his share until after the expiry of the sub-lease, and then only by the aid of the Civil Court, and as his title during the subsistence of the lease was merely nominal, and as he exercised no rights of a landlord during this period, and could not have sustained against the dar-ijaradar an action for rent under Act X of 1859:—Held, that his suit was properly brought in the Civil Court. RADHAJEEBUN MUSTAFEE v. DENONATH BANERJI . W. R. 1864, Act X, 49

52. ———— Suit by patnidar for his share of rent. A suit by one of a body of partnidars against his co-patnidars for his share of the rents collected by them was cognizable under the Rent Act. SOOBHUL SINGH v. MEETO SINGH . W. R. 1864, Act X, 12

RENT, SUIT FOR—contd.

HYDER ALI v. OMRI CHOWDHRY . W. R. 1864, Act X, 42

53. ———— Shikmi talukdars—Permanent settlement. Where shikmi talukhs at the time of the permanent settlement were comprised within the zamindar's estate, the talukhdars were subordinate to the zamindar, and the zamindar could therefore sue them for their rents in the Revenue Courts. CHUNDER KANT CHUCKERBUTTY v. DUKHEEANE ODEA . 1 Ind. Jur. N. S. 6: 4 W. R., Act X, 41

CHUNDER KANT CHUCKERBUTTY v. MAHOMED HOSSEIN . 6 W. R., Act X, 1

54. ———— Suit for money advanced to naib for works on salaries. Money advanced to a naib for the construction of a bund, or for the payment of the salaries of tahsildars and peadahs, comes within the terms of s. 23, Act X of 1859, with regard to the management of land, and a suit by a manager of an estate to recover such advance was cognizable by the Revenue Courts. RAM DYAL BANERJEE v. COURT OF WARDS . 12 W. R. 269

55. ———— Suit for profits of misappropriated property. A suit for profits of property alleged to have been appropriated by a wrong-doer was cognizable by the Civil Court, and not by the Collector. ROOP MUNGUL SINGH v. ANUND ROY . 3 W. R. 111

56. ———— Suit on bonds secured by assignment of rent. A lent money to B on bonds, payment of which was secured by assignment of the rents of B's estate. A, instead of liquidating the bonds from the collections of the estate assigned, brought a suit on the bonds, and obtained a decree. B then sued for a refund of the collections made and not appropriated to the payment of the bonds. Held, that such a suit was not one for rent, and was not cognizable under the Rent Act. ALI MAHOMED v. KANARAM GHOSE . 8 W. R. 128

57. ———— Suit for rent against purchaser of crops—Purchase of crops on condition that they were subject to claim for rent. Where a party purchases crops belonging to a raiyat at auction sale with notice and assenting to the condition of sale that the crops were subject to the landlord's claim for rent, and the landlord also being aware of the terms of sale allows the purchaser to remove the grain on the understanding that the purchaser assented to, and became liable to pay, the rent, a suit to recover the amount from the purchaser is a suit as an implied contract between the landlord and the purchaser and was not cognizable under the Rent Act. ACHUL v. GUNGA PERSHAD . 2 Agra 73

58. ———— Suit against sezawul to recover loss—Default of sezawul. A lease empowered the landlord, on default of payment of any of the kists by the tenants, to appoint a kuruk sezawul, the tenants being responsible for any loss accruing. A default having occurred and a kuruk

sezawul having been appointed, the landlord sued to recover the loss sustained by him. Held, that such a suit would not lie under the Rent Act. ANUND MOYEE DEBIA v. KHIRODHUR HALDAR

2 W. R., Act X, 46

59. ——— Suit to settle future rate of rent. A suit to settle the rent of future years between owner and occupier of land will not lie. MUDHOOSOODUN ROY v. SREEPUTTY BHUTTA-CHARJEE

25 W. R. 488

60. ——— Suit to determine future rates of rent—Beng. Act VIII of 1869, ss. 28, 29, 35. A suit to determine not merely current, but prospective rates of rent will lie under the rent law. A pottah is not necessarily mokurari because it confers a contingent holding on the lessee and his posterity. ASGUR ALI v. WOOMA KANT MOOKERJEE

25 W. R. 318

61. ——— Suit to collect rents as a sharer or representative sharer. The Civil Court had jurisdiction in a suit which involved the right to collect rents as a share or representative or as deriving from a sharer, and the decision of which depended on proof of a certain alleged partition. HURROCHUNDER ROY v. OBHOY CHURN SIRCAR

2 W. R., Act X, 72

62. ——— Suit raising question of extent of share as kutkeenadar. Where the kutkeenadar of an alleged share sued the kutkeenadar of the remaining portion for a proportion of rent, and defendant, while admitting himself to be plaintiff's tenant, disputed the extent of the alleged share:—Held, that the question of the extent of the shares of the parties as co-kutkeenadars could only be decided by a Civil Court, which could give complete relief on the whole case with reference both to shares and rent. VERASUT HOSSEIN v. JUGH-DHAREE SING

13 W. R. 59

63. ——— Disputed title to rent—Intervenor. In a suit for rent paid in kind in which defendant did not deny plaintiff's right as landlord, but in which intervenors appeared and objected that the Civil Court had no jurisdiction, and pleaded also that defendant was their tenant and paid rents to them:—Held (by LOCH, J.), that neither defendant's appropriation of the rent, nor the fact of his disputing plaintiff's share, nor the act of the intervenors in raising a question of right, altered the nature of the suit, or took it out of the cognizance of a Revenue Court. Held, also (by PHEAR, J.), that whatever might have been the case before the intervention, as soon as the intervenor was made a defendant, and issues of right and title were raised by the Court between him and the plaintiff, there was matter which the Court had jurisdiction to decide. GOLAM MAHOMED AKBUR v. RADHA KISHEN MOHUNT

9 W. R. 287

65. ——— Suit for rent after assignment of rent in consideration of loan. In a suit for rent where the original landlord had, in consideration of a loan from his tenant, made to him an assignment of the rents to some extent, plaintiff alleged that that arrangement had been put an end to, and the assignment had dropped by reason of the defendants having recovered the money in another way. Held, that the Deputy Collector had full jurisdiction to enquire into the allegation, because plaintiff's cause of action was the original cause of action of the landlord, and the only effect of subsequent events was to deprive defendants of an answer to the claim. ISHAN CHUNDER SEIN v. person whom they alleged to be a surety for the payment of the rent. An ex parte decree was made in favour of the plaintiff's, but it did not expressly make the alleged surety liable for the money awarded. In execution of the decree, certain of the alleged surety's land was sold, and the decree-holders were the purchasers at the sale. An application under Bengal Act VII of 1876 for the registration of their names as proprietors of the land purchased having been rejected, the decree-holders brought the present suit to establish their title to, and to recover possession, of the land. Held, that the plaintiff's title was bad, on the ground that the decree did not purport to bind the surety for the payment of the money awarded, and on the ground that a Revenue Court is not competent to entertain a suit against a person who has become surety for payment of rent. BHUGWAN CHUNDER ROY CHOWDHRI v. 89. ——— Benami lease—Suit for arrears of rent—Landlord and tenant—Act X of 1859. A brought a suit in the Collector's Court against B, C, D, and E for arrears of rent in respect of land demised under a pottah to F. He joined G and H as defendants. According to the terms of the pottah, they were sureties for F. It was admitted that F's name was used benami in the pottah, and that he took no interest. A sued B, C, D, and E as the parties interested and in possession. C objected that a new settlement had been made and a new pottah granted; that he held a moiety only of the lands, and was not liable for more; and that D was his raiyat, and ought not therefore to have been made a defendant. D and E contended that they were liable in respect of the lot comprised under the pottah, and had already paid rent for it to A under a decree, but objected that they ought to have been sued separately from B, and B did not appear. The lower Court held that C had failed to make out his case, and that D and E were liable in this suit, and passed a decree ordering them to pay the amount admitted by them to be due from them and the other defendants to pay the remainder of the claim. C appealed. On the appeal, PEACOCK, C.J. (MITTER, J., contra), held that the plaintiff's suit must be dismissed, the lease being to H and not to the defendants; that the Court below had founded its decision on matters extraneous to the lease, which it had no jurisdiction to inquire into. Held, per MITTER, J., that the suit was properly brought against the actual tenants and not against the benamidar, and that the Collector had jurisdiction. Held by both Judges, that the suit should be dismissed as against the sureties, who could not as such be sued under Act X of 1859. ROY PRIYANATH CHOWDHRY v. the actual possession of the land, and that these persons were really the tenants; that the form of the decree passed by the Collector was correct, the plaintiff having consented to the decree being given in that form; that the sureties had really made themselves responsible for those who were really interested under the lease, and not for F. Prosunno Coomar Pal Chowdry v. Koylash Chunder Pal Chowdry, B. L. R. Sup. Vol. 759, distinguished. Held, by NORMAN, J. (dissenting), that the terms of the lease under which F was alone interested could not be contradicted by oral evidence; that F alone was bound to the lessor under the lease; that the defendant could not be sued as tenant, unless subsequent to the pottah and kabuliat something had occurred creating the relation of landlord and tenant between them and the lessor; that no such relation or any contract creating such relation between the parties could be implied from the circumstances of the case, and the suit should be dismissed. The Revenue Court had therefore no jurisdiction. But whether in the Revenue or Civil Court, D and E could not be sued jointly with B and C, nor could G and H. *BIPINBEHARI CHOWDRY v. The rent having again fallen into arrear, K took proceedings against G, under Regulation VIII of 1819, for the sale of the patni; but the arrears having been paid, the patni was not sold. In a suit for arrears of rent of the same patni subsequently brought by K against G, P, and B (the wife of P) jointly, on the allegation that the patni had been purchased by G benami for P and B:—Held, that the Collector had no jurisdiction to try questions relating to rent depending upon equitable rights and liabilities arising from circumstances other than those of the relationship of landlord and tenant. *PROSONNO COOMAR PAL CHOWDRY v. 92. ————— Title—Suit for arrears of rent—Title. A died, leaving four sons, B, C, D and E, by a wife deceased, and a widow, K, and three other sons, F, G, and H, by her. K brought a suit against B, C, D, and E, and against her three sons, F, G, and H, to establish her title to a certain talukh which she alleged had been conveyed to her by A under a deed of gift. B, C, D, and E set up a prior deed of partition, whereby the property of the deceased, including this talukh, was divided between all his sons in the proportion of ten annas to B, C, D, and E, and six annas to F, G, and H. The High Court, on appeal, held that the deed of partition was genuine and rendered the subsequent deed of gift inoperative. Afterwards B, C, D, and E instituted a suit in the Collector's Court for arrears of rent in respect of another talukh, also included in the deed of partition, against the raiyats and F, G, and H. The raiyats admitted that they held at the rent claimed, but stated that they had not paid their rent on account of a dispute between the brothers as to the shares in which they were entitled to the same. F, G, and H raised the defence that this suit could not be maintained in the Collector's Court: a suit in the Civil Court should be brought for the determination of their shares, and the decision in their prior suit was no evidence against them. Held, that the question was really one of title between the brothers, and such suit could not be maintained in the Revenue Courts. *GIRISH CHANDRA ROY CHOWDHRY v. 98. ———— Right of suit—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 12—Suit for cancellation of patni and for mesne profits—Rent for the same period—Maintainability of such a suit. Plaintiff, in the first instance, sued the defendant for cancellation of the patni lease which the latter held under him, and for mesne profits. He also brought a second suit against the defendant, to recover arrears of rent for the same period. Held, that s. 12, Civil Procedure Code, was no bar to the maintainability of the second suit, and that plaintiff could simultaneously prosecute the two suits. The decree of the second suit was not, however, allowed to be executed till the first suit was finally decided in appeal. Plaintiff brought the suit in the double capacity, viz., in his own right and as shebait of a certain deity, though his name was not registered in that double capacity under Bengal Act VII of 1876 (Land Registration). Held, that it was sufficient for the purpose of bringing the suit that plaintiff's

1. ———— Effect of change of law on pending suit—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 387.
A suit was held to be pending under s. 387, Act VIII of 1859, if anything remained to be done which might have been done under the old law ; and a party in such a case was entitled to ask the Court to proceed under the old law, inasmuch as the application of the new Code would deprive him of a right, in reference to the procedure of the case, which but for the passing of the Code would have belonged to him. PARROTT v. RAM SUHAY SINGH

VIII of 1859—Re-hearing. A defendant in a suit instituted before the passing of Act VIII of 1859 was entitled, under s. 387, to any advantage of right which he might have possessed under the old procedure ; but this did not bar him from availing himself of any advantages which he might obtain from the new procedure, e.g., a re-hearing under s. 119, in the case of an ex parte decree.

1. ———— “Representative,” meaning of—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 203. A person may be a representative within the meaning of s. 203 of Act VIII of 1859 (corresponding with s. 252 of Act X of 1877) so as to make the decree effectual for the purpose therein stated, although that person

2. ———— “Legal representative”— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 234—A stranger to a decree against a deceased person in possession of his property. The words “legal representative” in s. 234 of the Code of Civil Procedure do not include any person who does not in law represent the estate of the deceased person. Consequently, a stranger in possession of property of a deceased person who was not a party to a decree against such person cannot be proceeded against in execution otherwise than by a regular suit. *CHATHAKELAN
v. GOVINDA KARUMIAR* . I. L. R. 17 Mad. 186

3. ———— Liability of representative for papers of deceased. The heirs of a deof the deceased, as well as for debts due therefrom to the extent of assets taken by them. *LUCHMEE-party is sued for money as the heir and possessor of the assets of a deceased debtor, and it is proved debt, a personal decree therefor can be passed brother, and the brother took possession of the deceased's estate during the widow's lifetime :—Held, that the brother was liable to pay a debt of the deceased out of the estate come into his hands. Held, also, that he was liable as legal representative of deceased, the widow having relinquished her rights as heirress. Quare : Is any stranger who takes a deceased's estate liable under Hindu law, to pay his possession of the estate of a deceased Hindu (who has left a will, of which, however, no probate has been granted) must, in the present state of the law, be treated for some purposes as his representative, until some other claimant comes forward. A judgment obtained against such a person, even if it cannot be executed against the estate in the hands of an executor when he has taken out probate, is at any rate sufficient to enable a plaintiff to bring a suit against the executor in order to have the decree satisfied. *PROSUNNO CHUNDER BHUTTACHARJEE v. 9. ——— Heir of deceased Hindu allowing stranger to enter into possession of deceased's property—Effect of decree against party in possession. If the heir of a deceased Hindu stands by and allows a stranger to enter into possession of the deceased's property, every person claiming under him will be bound by the decree in a suit of which he had notice, instituted bona fide against the party in possession for the recovery of a debt due by the deceased to the plaintiff. *UMA SUNDARI v. 22 W. R. 449

11. ——— Widow of deceased Hindu—Creditor's right on decree against widow as representative. Where a Hindu died leaving a childless widow and a separated brother, it was held that until a legal representative was appointed to the deceased's estate, his widow was the only person who could defend a suit as his representative; and that, while a decree obtained against the widow would enable a creditor to attach and sell, not only the widow's life-estate in the immoveable property, but also the reversionary estate of the remainderman, yet a decree obtained against the remainderman would not enable the creditor to touch the estate in the hands of the widow. NATHA HARI v. JAMNI

12. ——— Sale in execution of decree against estate of deceased—Suit against representatives of deceased husband's estate. In 1862 a suit for mesne profits was brought against certain persons as being the heirs of one R L, deceased, among whom were his widow and two infant sons. During the pendency of this suit the two infant sons died, and the widow was made a defendant as representing the estate of her deceased sons. The suit was decreed in favour of the plaintiffs in 1875; and on the plaintiffs applying for execution, the widow objected that five-sixteenths of the properties, against which execution was sought, was the property of her adopted son, whom she alleged to have adopted in 1874. The adopted son was not made a party to the suit. This objection was overruled, but the same objection was taken by the adopted son through his natural father as his guardian and next friend, and the Court released the five-sixteenth share from attachment, and allowed the objection. Against this order some of the plaintiffs appealed, but pending the appeal another of the plaintiffs applied to the High Court under s. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure to have the order set aside. The Court, whilst refusing to interfere with the order inasmuch as there appeared to be no material irregularity therein, pointed out to the lower Court that the decree of 1875 having been obtained on account of a debt of R L's, and being against the widow as representing her husband's (R L's) estate, the estate would be answerable for the debt, whether the widow or the adopted son represented the estate, supposing the decree to have been properly obtained. The principle in Ishan Chunder Mitter v. Buksh Ali Soudagur, Marsh. 614, followed. SOTISH CHUNDER LAHIRY v. NILCOMUL LAHIRY

13. ——— Sale in execution of decree against deceased Mahomedan's estate—Representation of deceased by some only of his next-of-kin—Civil Procedure Code, s. 234—Sale held to be valid. V, a Mahomedan woman, died leaving her husband and several minor children as her representatives. In execution of a money decree obtained against V the creditor attached certain land which belonged to V and made her husband and two of her children parties to the execution proceedings. The land was sold and purchased by the decree-holder. Held, in a suit brought by the children of V to set aside the sale on the ground, inter alia, that some of them were no parties to the proceedings in execution, and that the others, being minors at the time, had not been represented by a guardian appointed by the Court, that the sale was valid. *KUNHAMMAD v. a bond executed by S against the mother of S whom he believed to be the heiress of S. In attempting to execute this decree against the estate of S, plaintiff was obstructed by the defendant, who was the adopted son of S. Plaintiff sued the defendant for a declaration that he was entitled to execute his decree against the estate of S in the hands of the defendant. Held, that the suit must fail, inasmuch as the estate of S was not properly represented in the former suit. *Sotish Chunder Lahiry v. 15. ——— Son as representative of father—Suit against son—Assets. Where a suit is brought against a Hindu son, personally and as representative of his father, to recover a debt due by the father, a decree ought to be given against his son, whether he has inherited any property or not, the result of such a decree in the case of non-inheritance being that it cannot be executed against the non-inheriting son. BAPUJI AUDITRAM v. UMED-BHAI HATHE SING . . . 8 Bom. A. C. 245

17. ——— Son's liability for father's debts—Decree against legal representatives of a deceased debtor—Assets. Where a suit is brought against the son and legal representatives of a deceased Hindu for debts contracted by the latter, the Court ought to pass a decree, although the deceased debtor may have left no assets. Bapuji v. Umedbhai, 8 Bom. A. C. 245, followed. LALLU BHAGVAN v. TRIBHUVAN MOTIRAM

17. ——— Suit against legal representative—Assets—Decree—Execution—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 252. A plaintiff is entitled to sue the legal representative of his deceased debtor, and to obtain a decree against him, without proving that assets have come into his hands. It is sufficient if there are assets of which he may become possessed. The decree should mention that it is against the defendant in that character, and should be executed as directed by s. 252 of the Civil Procedure Code, Act XIV of 1882. Rayappa Chetti v. Ali Sahib, 2 Mad. 335, followed. GIRDHARLAL v. BAI SHIV . I. L. R. 8 Bom. 309

18. ——— Suit against heir for debts of ancestor—Onus probandi. In a suit against an heir for debts of his ancestor, in the absence of special circumstances, it lies upon the plaintiff in the first instance to give such evidence as would prima facie afford reasonable ground for an inference that assets had or ought to have come to the hands of the defendant. Plaintiff having laid his foundation for his case, it then lies upon the defendant to show that the amount of such assets is not sufficient to satisfy the plaintiff's claim, or that he was entitled to be satisfied out of them, or that there were no assets, or that they had been disposed of in satisfaction of other claims. KOTTALA UPPI v. SHANGARA VARMA

REPRESENTATIVE OF DECEASED PERSON—contd.

19. ——— Liability of representative with assets to account—Mesne profits. When a party is proceeded against as the representative of a deceased judgment-debtor, and it is proved that property which belonged to the deceased judgment-debtor has come into his hands, it lies upon him to account for such property and to include in his accounts mesne profits, whether accruing in the shape of rents or of interest. ASEEMOONNISSA v. AMEER-ONNISSA . . . 15 W. R. 285

20. ——— Denial of assets—Decree against estate—Costs. In a suit brought against the representatives of a deceased Mahomedan, alleged to be in possession of his estate for recovery of the amount of a bond-debt due by the deceased, the plaintiff should first be allowed to establish his right of suit against the estate, although the defendants plead that they possess no property belonging to the deceased to satisfy the claim. Such a plea, if established, is one to be regarded in framing the decree. The decree in such a case should be for payment out of the property of the deceased. And ordinarily the Court should not direct payment of the costs by the defendant personally, but out of the estate. MADHO RAM v. DILBUR MAHUL . . . 2 N. W. 449

21. ——— Person in possession of estate without assets—Act VIII of 1859, s. 203. The plaintiff sued the defendants on the ground that they were in possession of his deceased debtor's property. It being found that the defendants received no assets from the deceased:—Held, that the suit was rightly dismissed. If the suit had simply been against the defendants as heirs or personal representatives of the deceased, and if they had alleged that no assets had come to their hands, the plaintiff would have been entitled to a decree against them as representatives of the deceased (if he had prayed for such a decree), without going to a trial on the question whether or not the defendants had assets; and in that case he might have proceeded, in enforcement of his decree, under the provisions of s. 203, Act VIII of 1859. In the matter of the petition of HIRALAL MOOKERJEE

22. ——— Representatives of debtor—Right to decree to extent of assets against heirs. A decree was obtained against A, and on his death execution was taken out against his widows. B came in, and, alleging that A was merely a benami holder for B, applied to be substituted for the widows as defendant. Held, that the Court was not right in exempting from liability A's heirs to the extent of any assets which might have come into their hands. *DOORGA SOONDUREE DEBIA v. REPRESENTATIVE OF DECEASED PERSON—contd.

a judgment against certain land which belonged to the defendant's father and the right to which passed by succession to the defendants. Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to a decree for payment by the defendants of the amount of the bond out of any property which passed to them as the representatives of their father; the plaintiff, in execution of the decree, being at liberty to proceed in respect of the immoveable property, if there should be no moveable property left, or if it should prove insufficient when sold to satisfy the decree. RAYAPPA CHETTI v. ALI SAHIB . . . 2 Mad. 336

24. ———— Execution of decree against son—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 203—Issues. Where the defendant in a suit for the payment of money died before decree, his sons were made parties and a decree for the debt due by the deceased was given against them. In execution of this decree, the decree-holder attached certain property in the hands of one of the sons, who objected on the ground that it was his self-acquired property. Held, that the proper issues to be determined were (i) whether the property attached by the decree-holder had formed a part of the estate of the deceased debtor; and if not, (ii) whether if it was separate property of the son, that son had misapplied any property received by him from his father, and, if so, to what extent. MOORAREE SINGH v. PURYAG SINGH . . . 2 C. L. R. 189

25. ———— Responsibility of representative—Rights of creditors. When a defendant against whom a decree was passed in his representative capacity has made payments in satisfaction of the decree to the full value of the property of the deceased which has come, or but for the default of the defendant might have come, to his hands, the decree can no longer be executed even although the decree-holder may be able to prove that the defendant still has in his possession property which originally belonged to the deceased. If the heir of a deceased Hindu or Mahomedan has sold to a bonâ fide purchaser property which he has inherited, he is responsible for the assets received, but the property cannot be followed in the hands of the purchaser. RAM GOLAM DOBEY v. AYMA BEGUM . . . 12 W. R. 177

26. ———— Liability of representatives—Onus probandi—Mode of accounting. Before judgment-debtors can claim exemption from a decree-holder's claim, on the ground that they only received a small sum from their ancestor's estate, or that what they have received has been paid in satisfaction of their ancestor's debts, they should prove and file an inventory of the whole estate descended to them, and prove how it has been applied. In a claim of this kind, the onus of proof is on the judgment-debtors, and, on their failure to sustain it, a presumption arises in favour of the decree-holder. *JOOGUL KISHORE SINGH v. On the obligee's death, the succession was disputed, and the obligor refused to pay the subsequent interest to the plaintiff. Held, that, as the plaintiff had failed to take out a certificate of succession to the obligee, the obligor was justified in such refusal. Held, also, that the plaintiff could not recover the stamp penalty from the obligor. *GARUDA REDDI v. 28. ———— Payment of debts to heir of deceased without certificate—Certificate subsequently granted—Liability of debtor—Bom. Reg. VIII of 1827. A defendant who is sued by the holder of a certificate of heirship to a deceased Hindu for a debt due from the defendant to the deceased is at liberty to show, notwithstanding the certificate of heirship, that he has paid the debt he owed the deceased to the actual heir of the latter before the grant of the certificate of heirship. It will not, however, be sufficient for such defendant to show that he has paid his debt to a person whom he bonâ fide believed to be such heir. PURSHOTAM MANSUKH v. RAMCHHOD PURSHOTAM

29. ———— Succession Act (X of 1865), s. 187—Hindu Wills Act (XXI of 1870), s. 2—Estate of deceased Hindu—Legal representative—Right of suit. A Hindu, who was of one of the defendants in a suit, died leaving a will. The executors appointed by the will did not take out probate; and the property of the deceased came into the possession of his divided brothers, who were thereupon brought on to the record of the suit as the representatives of the deceased defendant. A decree was passed for the plaintiff by consent. The mother of the deceased, who would, apart from the will, have been his legal representative, then sued to set aside the above decree, having previously obtained a declaration that she was entitled to the property of the deceased in the suit against his brothers above referred to. Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to maintain the suit. *JANAKI v. The plaintiff, whose domicile was the same as that of defendant 1, then sued in British Cochin for a declaration of his right to receive the interest accrued due on certain Government promissory notes, being the property of his deceased karnavan. Held, that the suit did not lie, and that the appellant should either have established his representative right by suit in the Court of Native Cochin and then applied to the Resident for a certificate or have brought his action against the

He appealed, and while the appeal was pending, the wife died leaving two daughters. The question then arose whether her husband or his daughters should represent the deceased in the appeal. Held, that the daughters of the deceased were the legal representatives for the purposes of the appeal. *MANILAL REWADAT v. 32. ————— Representative of insolvent debtor—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 252—Suit against widow of insolvent as his legal representative. The husband of the defendant was adjudicated an insolvent in 1891, and the usual order was made vesting his estate in the Official Assignee. He subsequently died without having filed his schedule, and no schedule had ever been filed. After his death, a suit was brought by a creditor against the defendant as the "widow, heiress, and legal representative" of the deceased insolvent, in which suit a decree was made against her, "the amount to be levied out of the assets of the deceased in her hands." In an application by the defendant to have the decree set aside on the grounds that the Official Assignee was a necessary party to the suit, and that the decree should have been against him as her husband's representative, as his estate was in his lifetime, and since had continued to be, vested in the Official Assignee:—Held, that on the death of the insolvent his widow, the defendant, became his legal representative within the meaning of s. 252 of the Civil Procedure Code, and that the existence of the vesting order in no way affected her position as such representative. *Greender Chunder Ghose v. A Hindu judgment-debtor died, leaving a widow and two sons, who were minors. His widow was placed on the record as his heir, and not his sons. Certain property of the deceased was sold in execution. The sale certificate issued to the purchaser stated that he had purchased the right, title, and interest of the judgment-debtor in the property. In a suit subsequently brought by the sons:—Held, that they were bound by the sale. The widow of the deceased judgment-debtor, who as natural guardian of the minor sons was in possession of the property, was upon the record, and it was clear that it was the interest of the judgment-debtor, and not that of the widow, that was intended to be sold. *ACHUT RAMCHANDRA PAL v. She took possession of the estate, and applied for letters of administration with the will annexed. The will was ultimately found to be true, and letters ordered to be granted. In the meantime, R K and the heir-in-law were substituted in place of the judgment-debtor in the execution proceedings, and an order was made between the parties in the matter of the execution. Held, that the order was a good and binding order. Held, further, that a residuary legatee in possession of the estate of a deceased judgment-debtor could not be regarded as an executor de son tort, so that his acts would not be binding upon the legal representative. *Prosunno Chunder Bhattacharjee v. marriage of husband and wife—Interest payable to both jointly—Death of husband—Claim by widow by right of survivorship—Right of husband's legal representative to his share. Upon the marriage of first defendant with K, a sum of money was settled by first defendant's mother on first defendant or on K. This money was lent on mortgage, and, by the terms of the mortgage, interest was payable by the mortgagors to first defendant and to her husband K, jointly, with the exception of that which would accrue in respect of the last year of the term, which, together with the principal sum secured by the mortgage, was to be paid to first defendant herself. K died, whereupon plaintiff, as K's legal representative, brought the present suit to recover the interest due under the mortgage. Held, that plaintiff was entitled, under s. 45 of the Contract Act, as the legal representative of K, to a moiety of the interest which had accrued since the death of K, first defendant being entitled to the other moiety, and that the right to the whole of the interest did not pass by survivorship to first defendant. The circumstance that K and first defendant intended to live and did in fact live together as husband and wife under the Aliyasantana law was insufficient to raise the presumption of a contract that there was to be a right of succession by survivorship between K and first defendant in respect of the settled fund. *KANTHU PUNJA v. Hindu law—Rights of unsecured creditors by way of charge or lien on the inheritance—Position of legal representative—Distribution of assets. The unsecured creditors of a deceased Hindu have no charge or lien on the inheritance. If payments are not made by the heir rateably, it does not follow that he has failed to apply the assets duly. Every payment on account of a debt is perfectly lawful, irrespective of its effect upon the other creditors, and is a due application of the assets, within the meaning of s. 252 of the Code of Civil Procedure. There is no analogy between the case of an executor who is governed by the special provisions of the Succession Act, and that of a legal representative under the Hindu law, with reference to the question of the distribution of the assets among creditors. Where property of a deceased remains in the hands of the legal representative, it does not necessarily follow that a creditor is entitled to proceed against it as assets in the hands of the legal representative. The question to be considered is the real effect of what has been done, and, where payments have been made by the legal representative to the extent of the full value of the property of the deceased which has come into his hands, a decree cannot be executed, even although he may still have in his possession property which originally belonged to the deceased. *VEERASOK-KARAJU v. 7. ——— Power of Courts—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 329. The power given by s. 329 of the Civil Procedure Code to make such order as the Court shall see fit must be construed with regard to the circumstances in respect of which the power is to be exercised. An order under s. 329 should be the result of the fact that the defendant in the suit, who is precluded by the decree from disputing plaintiff's right, unjustly instigates a third party, who has no real interest in the property, to prevent the plaintiff from getting the benefit of his execution. A Court has no power under this section to determine, as between the judgment-creditor and a third party obstructing the execution of the decree, important questions on the merits which are wholly unconnected with, and cannot be affected by, the fact that the obstruction is made at the instigation of the defendant. *GOVINDA NAIR v. Upon investigation, the first class Subordinate Judge made an order staying execution of the decree. The plaintiff appealed to the District Judge, who held that no appeal lay to him, as the subject-matter of the original suit out of which the execution suit arose exceeded Rs. 5,000. The plaintiff appealed against this decision to the High Court. Held, that the investigation of a claim under s. 229 of Act VIII of 1859 was not to be regarded as a fresh suit, but was merely a continuation of the original suit, and that there was therefore no appeal against the order

Code, ss. 13, 278, 331—Munsif, jurisdiction of. The plaintiff, having obtained a decree for possession of certain land, applied for execution by delivery of possession, whereupon a third party filed an objection in the Court of the Munsif that he held a prior decree for possession of the same land, and therefore the plaintiff's decree was incapable of execution. This objection was allowed, and the plaintiff then sued for establishment of his right to possession of the land jointly with the objector, making the former judgment-debtor and the objector defendant to the suit. The Subordinate Judge in first appeal held that the Munsif had acted under s. 331 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and, applying s. 13 of the same Code, dismissed the plaintiff's suit. The plaintiff then appealed. Held, that circumstances did not exist to give the Munsif jurisdiction to act under s. 331, and that his order must be taken to have been made, as it purported to have been made, under s. 278. *Buhal Singh Chowdhry v. Code, ss. 328, 331—Obstruction offered by a tenant—Decree for partition—Possession, decree for. Obstruction was offered to the execution of a decree for partition of certain property by a person claiming to be entitled to occupy part of the land in question as a mulgeni tenant. The decree-holder presented a petition to the Court under the Civil Procedure Code, s. 328: this petition was rejected, and the claim was not numbered and registered as a suit. Held, that the decree for partition was a decree for possession of property within the meaning of the Civil Procedure Code, s. 328; and that that section was not rendered inapplicable by the fact that the obstructor claimed to be a mulgeni tenant. *GOPALA v. In June 1870 the plaintiff filed a petition under s. 230, Act VIII of 1859, alleging that he had purchased the property claimed from the heirs of D in 1864, and had been in possession until he was ousted by the defendant, and that he was not a party to the suit brought by the defendant in 1867. Held, that the title of the defendant was barred, more than twelve years having elapsed from the date of his purchase and that the plaintiff was entitled on mere proof of bonâ fide possession, and that he was not a party to the suit by the defendant in 1867 to put the defendant to proof of his own title and, on the defendant's failing to prove his title, to be restored to possession. *BRINDABUN CHUNDER ROY v. 1859, s. 230. On inquiry it appeared that each and several of the four applicants claimed possession of the same portions of the fisheries. The lower Court, holding that it was impossible for each of several parties setting up adverse claims to the same property to show that it had been bonâ fide in his possession, and that he had been dispossessed from it, referred all parties to a regular suit. had executed and registered a patni pottah for a three annas share of one of the zamindaris in dispute, and granted it to D, who having objected under s. 246, Civil Procedure Code, 1859, to the above sale, an order was made at the time of the auction sale that it should be proclaimed that D claimed a patni right, and this was accordingly done. Before M was put into actual possession, she was required to find security. Delaying to do this, the lands were attached and sold under a judgment obtained by others who purchased and entered into possession. M, having furnished security, petitioned to be put into possession, but her petition was rejected. She then brought a suit to cancel the order refusing her possession. In her plaint she claimed khas possession, but did not refer to the patni claimed by D. Her plaint was decreed, the decree was appealed, and it was finally upheld by the Privy Council; but throughout the litigation no issue was raised as to the patni. In the proceeding to execute the decree M claimed actual possession. Before process had been issued, D objected to khas possession being given of his patni mouzah. The Judge ruled that the objection fell within the spirit of s. 269, Act VIII of 1859, and that he had therefore jurisdiction to entertain it. Held, that s. 269 did not apply, inasmuch as no attempt had been made to deliver possession. Held, also, that the only intention of the decree was to confirm the plaintiff in the position which she occupied when the property was sold in execution of her original decree, after proclamation of D's claim, and that she was not entitled to khas possession. *SHARODA PERSHAD MULLICK v. In a case governed by the Civil Procedure Code, 1877, it was held that, there being no provision in that Code similar to that contained in s. 269 of Act VIII of 1859 enabling the Court to do so, the Court could not enquire into a complaint made by a person other than the defendant on the ground of dispossession in the delivery of possession to the purchaser of immovable property sold in execution of a decree; and therefore the only remedy of a person so dispossessed was by regular suit. This omission in the Code of 1877 was rectified by the amending Act XII of 1879, and under the present Code, Act XIV of 1882, a person other than the defendant may make an application for an inquiry.

58. ————— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 319, 335—Land in the occupancy of raiyat—Symbolical possession under s. 319—Dispossession of a third party. Where a person is found to be in possession of any land by receipt of rent from tenants, delivery of possession thereof under s. 319 of the Civil Procedure Code to a third party being a purchaser at an execution sale does not cause dispossession of the original possessor, within the meaning of s. 335, Civil Procedure Code, so as to entitle him to complain within the meaning of that section. KISORI LAL GOSWAMI v. LALA SHIB LAL . . . . . 1 C. W. N. 343

59. ————— Civil Procedure Code, ss. 318, 335—Suit to recover possession of property sold in execution of decree. S attached certain land and a house in execution of a decree against R. M put in a claim, under s. 278 of the Code of Civil Procedure, alleging that he was in possession as purchaser from R. The claim was rejected. No suit was brought by M to contest this order. S purchased the said land and house in execution and obtained a sale-certificate. In 1884 S sued M to recover possession of the land and house, alleging that in execution proceedings in 1882 he had been put into possession of the land, but not of the house which was found locked up by the Court Ameen, and that M prevented him from enjoying both the land and house. M pleaded that S had never been put into possession, and again set up his title as purchaser from R and possession under such title. The Munsif found that S had been put into formal or constructive possession of the land but not of the house, and decreed the claim. On appeal, the District Judge held that S was bound to proceed according to the provisions of s. 335 of the Code of Civil Procedure to recover possession, and could not bring a separate suit. Held, that, whether there had been legal delivery or not, the suit was not barred. SEVU v. died. Possession was delivered on 28th August. The person dispossessed presented a petition under s. 332 of the Code of Civil Procedure disputing his right to be put into possession, on the ground, inter alia, that the judgment-debtor was not represented on the record. On appeal against the appellate order of the District Judge:—Held, assuming that the order for possession was made prior to the death of the judgment-debtor, there was no necessity for the decree-holder to bring any other person on to the record between the date of that order and the date on which the order was executed. *Ramasami v. 61. Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 335—Joint managers—Mortgage by one of such managers—Sale by mortgagee in execution of decree on mortgage and dispossession of the other manager—Application for restoration of possession by other joint manager. K, the owner of certain property, gave the management of it to his three nephews, G, A, and N. A mortgaged the property, and the mortgagee sued on the mortgage and got a decree. In execution of the decree, the property was sold and purchased by L, who was put in possession by the Court. G, one of the managers, then applied for possession under s. 335 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) alleging that he had been wrongfully dispossessed. Held, that the mortgagee got no title to the property by his mortgage from A against the real owner K; and G, who was in actual possession as his manager (whether or not there were others equally entitled to share in the management), was entitled to prevent the purchaser L taking possession, and having been dispossessed had a claim to be restored to possession under s. 335 of the Civil Procedure Code. *GOBIND BALVANT SHIVNEKAR v. A usufructuary mortgagee of the property who had been a party to the suit, and in whose favour the decree was, in so far that it declared his right to continue in possession, applied to be restored to possession, and obtained an order in his favour. Thereupon the assignee, auction-purchaser, applied in revision to have the order restoring the usufructuary mortgagee to possession set aside. Held, that the order in question was an order which could properly be made under s. 335 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and, being unappealable, an application for revision thereof might lie. The auction-purchaser, though he happened also to be the assignee of the decree, was not a representative of a party to the suit within the meaning of s. 244, nor was the usufructuary mortgagee a judgment-debtor within the meaning of s. 334 or s. 335, but he was a person other than a judgment-debtor within the meaning of s. 335. SABHAJIT v. SRI GOPAL. I. L. R. 17 All 222

63. Resistance or obstruction to execution—Limitation—Renewal of resistance or obstruction—Fresh cause of action. The period of limitation provided for in s. 328 of the Code of Civil Procedure is a limitation which governs a cause of action arising out of a particular resistance or obstruction. So far as that resistance or obstruction is concerned, the decree-holder, if he wishes to take proceedings under s. 328, must do so within one month from the time of such resistance or obstruction. But the bar created by the limitation imposed by this section does not extend to and hold good so as to bar complaints against acts of resistance or obstruction made upon fresh proceedings taken by the decree-holder. *Ramasekara v. 65. Obstruction—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 331—"Possession"—Constructive possession—Obstruction to possession in execution of decree—Construction. The word "possession," as used in s. 331 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), is not limited to actual physical possession. It includes also constructive possession, such as possession by a tenant. So held by CANDY and TYABJI, JJ. (WHITWORTH, J., dissenting). Where premises sought to be recovered in execution are in the occupation of tenants, and the landlord of such tenants obstructs the officer executing the decree, the claim of such landlord may be investigated under s. 331 of the Civil Procedure Code. *MANCHARAM v. fendant-respondent cannot avoid the application of the principle of res judicata by saying that he did not appear at the trial of the suit and a plaintiff who has got an ex parte decree on proof of his title or on failure of the defendant to prove a defence, the onus of proving which was on him, cannot be deprived of the full benefit of the decree which he has obtained by the fact that the defendant did not appear in Court to protect his own interest. Ram Kirpal v. The District Court dismissed it on the ground that no sufficient evidence had been given to establish the plaintiff's case. Subsequently the High Court decided that it had no jurisdiction to order such a transfer and the consent of parties could not confer jurisdiction. The plaintiff thereafter instituted a fresh suit in the Agent's Court on the same cause of action. The Agent dismissed the suit as res judicata, and an appeal to the Governor in Council was rejected on the ground that it would be inexpedient and set a bad example and encourage a multitude of suits for the same cause of action. Held, by the Judicial Committee, that the legal right to bring a suit and to have it determined by the proper Court created for the purpose of determining such suits cannot be barred upon considerations of policy or expediency. Held, also, that the former decision of a Court adjudged by the High Court to be without jurisdiction cannot be treated as res judicata, and the plaintiff was entitled to have his suit tried on the merits by the Agent's Court. SRI VIKRAMA DEO MAHARAJU-LUGARU MAHARAJA OF JEYPORE v. In a previous suit by B against A for redeeming land, A had set up an irredeemable adimayavana tenure in the land, which contention was overruled and a decree for redemption was made. The Court of first instance held that the suit was barred by res judicata, that the right to adimayavana allowance was not proved, and dismissed the suit. The lower Appellate Court reversed the judgment on both the points and remanded the suit for re-trial. Held, by the High Court on appeal, that the decision in the previous suit disallowing the tenure was no bar under s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure to the present suit for the allowance. The word adimayavana, when applied to a tenure of land, imports a permanent tenure, but it may be used with reference to an allowance of money or grain rent charged on the land, and in that case it will not imply any tenure in favour of the grantee, but only an allowance. The fact that an allowance had been received out of certain lands for a long period from several successive owners, is proof of a grant of perpetual allowance charged on such land. Vythilingam Pillay v. II—Suit for redemption—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), ss. 89 and 92—Valid tender—Subsequent suit for recovery of damages on account of wrongful detention of the property by the mortgagee. A executed a usufructuary mortgage in favour of B, and undertook to redeem the mortgage on a certain date. On the day fixed for repayment A made a valid tender of that which was due on the mortgage, and the tender was improperly refused by B. A suit was brought for redemption by A, which was decreed on condition of payment within six months of what was due on the date of tender. The amount was deposited in Court, and A was put in possession of the property. Subsequently A brought a suit for recovery of damages on account of wrongful detention of the property by B, between the date of tender and the date of delivery of possession. The defence was that the suit was barred by res judicata. Held, that inasmuch as the claim now set up might and ought to have been put forward in the redemption suit, and the mortgagee might and ought to have been called upon to account for the profits, which he has received from the mortgaged premises, up to the date fixed in the redemption decree, the subsequent action for recovery of damages was barred. *SATYABADI BEHARA v. and MILLER, JJ. (Chief Justice dissenting), that such subsequent suit was barred. Per SIR ARNOLD WHITE, C.J.—The question whether a matter “ought” to have been made a ground of attack within the meaning of s. 13, Expl. II of the Civil Procedure Code, will depend on the facts of each case. Where the two different kinds of heirship under which a person claims property cannot co-exist, he is not bound, in a suit based on one kind of heirship, to join the other in the alternative, when the former, if proved, will necessarily negative the latter. It cannot be said that a party “might and ought” to have claimed alternatively in the view that the ground of title set up was false or that he would be unable to prove it. Per WALLIS, J.—The question of what “ought” to be made a ground of attack under s. 13, Expl. II, must be determined by the provisions of s. 42 of the Civil Procedure Code. The first question to be considered in such cases is whether the provisions of s. 42 required the plaintiff to join in the former suit the ground of attack in the subsequent suit. Where a person claims as heir, the “matter” within the meaning of s. 42 is his heirship, and he is bound to include in one suit all the different grounds on which he bases his heirship “as far as practicable.” It will not be practicable to join in one suit the different grounds only when the evidence in support of one ground will be destructive of the other. Ramaswami Ayyar v. Vythinatha Ayyar, I. L. R. 26 Mad. 760, followed. MILLER, J.—The construction of the word “ought” in s. 13, Expl. II of the Code of Civil Procedure, must, to a great extent, depend on considerations of hardship and inconvenience caused to the parties. There is no hardship or inconvenience in requiring a plaintiff suing as heir to state all the facts on which he bases his heirship, even though it may result in the presentation of an alternative case, while great inconvenience and hardship may be caused to the defendant by allowing the plaintiff to keep a ground in reserve. *Muthumadeva Naik v. ground of his defence the title obtained<sup>7</sup> by him at the mortgage sale. Held, that A was not bound to do so, and a suit by A to recover the lands in village S purchased at the mortgage sale is not res judicata under Expl. II of s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code. Per BRETT, J.—Expl. II of s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code refers to the title litigated in the former suit as distinguished from the relief claimed. When several independent grounds of action are available, a party is not bound to unite them all in one suit, though he is bound to bring before the Court all grounds of attack available to him with reference to the title which is made the ground of action. This rule equally applies to the converse case of a defendant, when pleading in his defence. Pittapur Raja v. Venkatta Mahipati Surja, L. R. 12 I. A. 116, and *Ramaswami Aiyar v. ## 2. ESTOPPEL BY JUDGMENT.

1. ————— Rule as to estoppel by judgment—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 2. The doctrine laid down in the Duchess of Kingston’s Case, 2 Smith’s L. C. 6th Ed. 679, as to estoppel by judgment is applicable to cases tried under Act VIII of 1859, the second section of which is consistent with that rule. But the Judicial Committee, reversing the decision of the Court below, considered that the doctrine had no application in the present case, the judgment relied on not being the judgment of a Court of concurrent jurisdiction directly upon the point upon the same matter; and, after an examination of the whole evidence, restored the judgment of the first Court. *KHUGOWLEE SING v. (MITTER, J., dissenting).—A former judgment, which is not a judgment in rem, nor one relating to matters of a public nature, is not admissible in evidence in a subsequent suit, either as a res judicata, or as proof of the particular point which it decides, unless between the same parties or those claiming under them. In a suit between A and B the question was whether C or D was the heir of H. If C was the heir of H, then

A was entitled to succeed; otherwise not. The same question had been raised in a former suit brought by X against A and decided against A; and this former judgment was admitted in evidence in the suit between A and B, and dealt with by the Courts below as conclusive evidence against A upon the point so decided. Held (MITTER, J., dissenting), that the former judgment was not admissible as evidence in the suit between A and B either as "a transaction" under s. 13, or as "a fact" under s. 11, or under any other section of the Evidence Act. *GUJJU LALL v. Judgments and decrees recognizing rights between parties to a suit or between persons whom they represent, although they are not conclusive under the Evidence Act (I of 1872), as they were before that Act came into operation, are yet admissible in evidence under s. 13 of the Act, even if the parties in the former suit be entire strangers. Where the parties are the same, or representatives of those in the former suit, such judgments and decrees may be evidence so nearly conclusive as, when produced by the party in whose favour they are, to shift the burden of proof from him to his opponent. Semble: Under s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), the law is now the same as it was under Act VIII of 1859, prior to the passing of the Evidence Act. *NARANJI BHIKABHAI v. In a case where the previous suit was to recover a two-thirds share of the property in question, and the subsequent suit was by a different plaintiff to recover the remaining one-third share of the same property :—Held, that in the subsequent suit, the judgment in the previous suit was not admissible in evidence, the subject-matter in the two suits not being identical. *TEPU KHAN v. The defendants relied upon a subsequent decree in a contested suit by the plaintiffs against the tenants of the other half share, in which a lower rate of rent had been given. No other evidence than the decrees was produced on either side. It did not appear whether the ex parte decree had ever been executed. Held, that it was open to the defendants to dispute the rate of rent claimed, and that the plaintiffs were bound to prove that they were entitled to recover it. *Nilmoney Singh v. 8. ———— Decrees in rent suits—Suit for arrears of rent—Subsequent suit for enhancement. The plaintiff sued the defendant in the year 1873 for arrears of rent at a certain rate per bigha. The defendant pleaded that the land had been held by him at a uniform rent for more than twenty years, and this contention was supported by the Court. The plaintiff then gave the defendant notice of enhancement, and sued to recover rent for two years at the rate stated by the defendant, and for one year at an increased rate. To this suit the defendant raised substantially the same defence. Held, that the decision in the previous suit was not a bar to the present suit, there being two questions for consideration : one, whether there had been a uniform payment of rent for twenty years; and if so, whether the presumptions which the law directs to be drawn from a uniform payment of rent for twenty years had been rebutted by the plaintiff; neither of which questions were concluded by the previous decision. *GOPEE MOHAN MOZOOMDAR v. was tenant to the plaintiff of a less quantity of land only than that in respect of which the plaintiff claimed rent in his suit. Held, that there was no estoppel and that the plaintiff might show, notwithstanding such previous judgment, that the defendant was in occupation of the larger quantity. OJODHYA PERSAD v. 14. ———— Decision as to amount of rent—Subsequent suit for abatement of rent. The plaintiff obtained a patni lease of certain villages from the defendant in 1861 at an annual rent, and in 1865 was evicted from a portion of the property. She took no steps to obtain an abatement; but inasmuch as she did not pay any rent for the year 1871, the defendant brought a suit against her for the rent of that year. The plaintiff set up the defence that she was entitled to an abatement of R155 from her rent, the R155 representing the annual value of the property which she had lost in consequence of the eviction. In that suit it was decided that the amount of abatement she was entitled to was R42. No appeal was made against that decision. In a suit brought by the plaintiff for the purpose of obtaining a permanent abatement of her rent she claimed the precise measure of abatement, viz., R155, which she had claimed in the suit brought against her by the defendant. Held, that the question was res judicata, it having been raised and decided in the former suit. NOBO DOORGA DOSSEE v. Foyz Buksh Chowdhry, I. L. In a later suit the plaintiff sued the defendant in respect of the same holding for the rent of a subsequent year, and he claimed at the same rate as he had claimed

17. ————— Decision as to possession as tenants—Admissibility in evidence of decree in former suit. The plaintiffs, as purchasers of a share of an estate, sued to recover their share of the rent of certain tenures held in that estate by the defendants. The defendants denied being in possession as alleged. Another co-sharer in the same estate had previously brought a suit against the same defendants for the rent of the same tenures, and in that suit the present plaintiffs and other co-sharers of the estate were made co-defendants, and the decision in that suit was that the present defendants were in possession and were liable to pay to the then plaintiff his share of the rent. Held (MITTER, J., dissenting), that the decree in the former suit was not a res judicata or even admissible as evidence in the present suit. *SURENDER NATH PAL CHOWDHRY v. In a suit arising out of an alleged trespass to the same drain brought by A against B, in which A stated it was his property, the judgment of the Munsif in the former suit was tendered in evidence on behalf of the plaintiff, and it was contended it was an estoppel. In 1823 the then shebait of the debsheba of K instituted a suit for the recovery of the alienated lands against the then shebait of the sheba at C, and in that suit it was declared that the sheba was independent of the debsheba, and thus the plaintiff was referred to a regular suit. It should be inquired into (the decree being so construed) whether the acceptance of a fixed payment was on forfeiture of all rights to the property, and whether it extended only so far as the widow's right is concerned, or whether it affected the son's right likewise. MAN KOONWER v. On the death of one brother leaving a widow and daughters, the widow obtained possession of the villages which formed her husband's share, and a suit brought against her by the other brother to recover them was dismissed on the ground that the divided shares descended according to law. 30. ——— Benami transaction for purpose of defrauding creditors—Deed of conveyance not in real purchaser's name—Collusive suit by nominee against real owner—Decree obtained by fraud—Subsequent suit by real owner against nominee for possession—Right of party to fraud to set fraudulent decree aside—Collusive transaction when held binding and when set aside. In 1874 the plaintiff P bought a house from G, but caused the conveyance to be executed by G in the defendant C's name. This was done with the object of protecting the property against the claims of the plaintiff's creditors. The plaintiff occupied the house, ostensibly as tenant to the defendant for a nominal rent. In 1880 the defendant brought a suit against the plaintiff to recover possession of the house, and obtained an ex parte decree. He applied for execution of the decree, but allowed the execution-proceedings to drop. In 1883 he made a fresh application for execution. Thereupon the plaintiff filed the present suit for a declaration of his title to the house in question, and of his right to retain possession alleging that the defendant was a mere benamidar: that the sale-deed and the ex parte decree were sham and collusive transactions in fraud of the plaintiff's creditors, and that the defendant was merely a trustee for him. Held, that the plaintiff was bound by the decree passed in 1880 in the defendant's favour, though it was a collusive decree. The plaintiff could not get the judgment set aside which the defendant had obtained against him by his own contrivance. The plaintiff alleged that the defendant held in trust for him: the object of that trust being to protect the plaintiff's property in fraud of his creditors. Even if such a trust enforceable by the Court could arise out of such a turpis causa, the question was whether this continued to subsist and would be enforced when the original relations of the parties had become merged in the decree obtained by the defendant against the plaintiff. The general principle is that where a defendant has suffered a judgment to pass against him, the matter is then placed beyond his control. Held, also, upon the general principle of res judicata, that the plaintiff was estopped from raising the question of fraud in the present suit which he might and ought to

Before that purchase, though after the attachment, another holder of a decree against the zamindar brought the right, title, and interest in the zamindari to sale in execution of his decree, and himself became the purchaser. He then, claiming to have obtained the zamindari estate, sued the patnidar for rent due under the lease. This suit was dismissed, save as to rent due for the time intervening between the two sales in execution, on the ground that the relation of zamindar to lessee had ceased on the purchase by the latter. The present suit was brought by the purchaser from the zamindar stating his title, acquired at the prior of the two sales, and claiming to redeem the mortgage. Held, that the dismissal of the rent-suit, which involved the title, barred the present one; and the opinion was expressed that the plaintiff had been rightly adjudged in the rent-suit to be bound by the proceedings taken by the mortgagee, pending which the purchase relied upon had been made. RADHAMADHUB HOLDAR v. 32. — Identity of cause of action with that of prior suit, to which the plaintiff in a subsequent suit had been a party—Effect of judgment, that a will had been revoked to bar, between the parties, any claim founded solely on the will. The widow of a talukhdar, acting under his supposed will, appointed the present appellant to succeed to the talukh and other estate which had belonged to the deceased. The heir of the deceased, under the Oudh Estates Act, I of 1869, obtained the judgment of the Judicial Committee, declaring that he was entitled to the talukhs as against the present appellant whose title was under the will, which had been revoked as the Committee found. Another suit brought by the present appellant for a decree declaring that, in virtue of his appointment by the widow under the will, he was entitled to the whole of the estate of the deceased, talukhdari and non-talukhdari, was dismissed by the Judicial Committee on the ground that he had no such title to the whole or any part of the estate. Held, that this prior judgment was conclusive to bar the present suit, which, being founded entirely upon the appellant's appointment in pursuance of the will, was brought for possession of all the estate of the deceased as well as a declaration of right thereto. Although the heir was not entitled to possession of the estate of the deceased other than talukhdari, inasmuch as the widow took her estate therein, nevertheless, the claim of the present appellant being only founded upon her appointment under the will, as if unrevoked, and not being a claim for property as descending to the widow upon her husband's intestacy, the prior judgment was binding in the present suit. TRILOKI NATH SINGH v. 33. — and s. 43—Act XII of 1879, s. 6. The present suit was preceded by others in which the plaintiff sought to establish a right in the same part of the talukhdari estate that he now claimed to redeem from mortgage. The first suit, in which he with another claimed as under-proprietors, was dismissed in 1866 on the ground that they had not shown themselves to have held such right under the talukhdars within the period since 1841. Proceedings not to be regarded as judicial, subsequently taken under Circular 4 of 1867, resulted in a finding that the dismissal was right upon the merits, the property having been transferred to the talukhdar by a conditional sale which had become absolute. Another suit was then brought to recover the talukhdari right under the terms of Circular 106 of 1869, it being alleged that arrears of revenue paid by the talukhdar had been paid on the plaintiff's account. That suit was also dismissed. Held, that the present suit to redeem the same property under a mortgage was not barred under s. 13 of Act X of 1877, as amended by s. 6 of Act XII of 1879. AMANAT BIBI v. 34. — Clause of conditional sale in mortgage—Suit by mortgagee for declaration of title—Decree ordering delivery of property to mortgagee in default of payment of mortgage-debt by mortgagors within one month—Default of payment by mortgagors—Effect of such default—Mortgaged property taken by mortgagee in execution of such decree not as mortgagee, but absolutely—Subsequent suit for redemption. In 1863 B and C mortgaged certain land to one G under a mortgage-deed, which provided that, if the mortgage-debt was not paid at the stipulated time, the land should become the absolute property of G, the mortgagee. In 1871 G filed an ejectment suit against B and C and one H alleging that he had become owner of the land by operation of the above clause, and that he had subsequently let it to H, who now, in collusion with the other two defendants (the mortgagors), denied his title. The ejectment suit was subsequently converted into one for a declaration of G's title as owner as against the mortgagors, B and C, who claimed a right to redeem. A decree was passed in 1872 ordering B and C to pay Rs 100 to G within one month, or in default, to deliver up to him possession of the land. The money was not paid, and V, as purchaser from G, got possession in execution of the above decree in August 1873. In September 1885 the plaintiff, as B's heir and legal representative, filed a suit against G and V to redeem the property. The Court of first instance dismissed the suit, holding that the plaintiff's claim was res judicata by virtue of the decree passed in 1872, and that the right to redeem was lost. On appeal, the Court reversed this decision and passed a decree for redemption on payment of R100 by the plaintiff within six months. The defendant V then applied to the High Court under its extraordinary jurisdiction. Held, that the plaintiff's claim was res judicata. In the suit brought by G (the mortgagee) in 1871, he had claimed the land as owner through the forfeiture clause in the mortgage-deed, and the mortgagors insisting in that suit on a right still to redeem, the decree plainly meant to give them, by way of indulgence, one month within which to regain the land by payment of R100 to G. It renewed the mortgage, but with a condition, which was a material part of the decree. They having failed to pay, the mortgage was extinguished. After the lapse of the month, G could not have recovered the R100. Had he sought to recover that money, he would have been met by the terms of the decree. He was entitled to the land, and nothing else. So, too, was V as his vendee. As, then, there was no debt that could be recovered, there was and could be no subsisting mortgage that could be redeemed. VISHNU CHINTAMAN v. BALAJI BIN RAGHUJI . . . I. L. R. 12 Bom. 352

35. ———— Partition suit—Declaratory decree. A suit for partition of certain land was withdrawn as against one of the defendants who was entitled to part of the land. The plaintiff and the remaining defendants entered into a compromise in the terms of which the Court passed a decree for delivery of a share of the land to the plaintiff. The decree-holder having died without executing the decree, his heir now sued for partition of the land and delivery of the above share, joining as defendants the various persons entitled to shares. Held, that the decree in the former suit could only operate as a declaratory decree, and did not preclude the plaintiff from bringing the present suit. *BEEMABAI v. The widow of the testator, who had unsuccessfully opposed the grant in the Court of the North-Western Provinces, then filed a suit in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of the 24-Parganas for, amongst other things, the construction of her late husband's will. Held, on appeal in such suit, that the application for letters of administration was not a suit properly so called, and that the finding on the construction of the will by the Court of the North-Western Provinces, being incidental and for the purpose of determining the question of the representative title of the applicants, could not be regarded as concluding the plaintiff by res judicata from obtaining a construction of the will in the suit brought by her. *ARUNMOYI DAS v. The defendants opposed their application, and on appeal the High Court rejected it, holding that on the evidence the execution of the will was not proved. The plaintiffs thereupon filed the present suit, as the persons beneficially entitled under the will for a declaration that the property of the deceased belonged to them, and for an injunction to restrain the defendant from obstructing them in the enjoyment of it. In a subsequent suit by the reversioner for recovery of possession of the immovable property so sold, the defence was that the suit was barred as res judicata. Held, that the dismissal of the previous suit, which was for recovery only of the limited estate of female heir, would not be a bar to the subsequent suit which was for the recovery of the absolute estate, which vested in the reversioner. BRAJA LAL SEN v. For a moiety of the debt a bond was passed by M to H and for the other moiety by the widow of A. H filed a suit against M and got a decree, which was satisfied. H then sued the widow on her bond. The Court allowed her objection that she was not competent to give a bond binding her sons personally, and of its own accord made M a defendant, and passed a decree against M and A's estate. H assigned this decree to R, who applied for execution against M. M thereupon filed this suit against H and R praying for an injunction against the execution of the said decree and for damages against H. He alleged that during the pendency of the suit in which the said decree had been passed, H had agreed that he would not obtain a decree against him, and that, if such a decree were passed he would not execute it. The lower Appeal Court rejected the plaint, holding (i) that, as between the plaintiff M and the defendant R, the question in issue was res judicata, and (ii) that there was no cause of action against the defendant H. On appeal to the High Court:—Held, that, as between M and R, the suit was not res judicata. Neither a recital in the decree of the rate of rent alleged by the plaintiff, nor a declaration in it as to the rate of rent which the Court considers to have been proved, would operate in such a case so as to make that matter a res judicata, assuming that no such declaration were asked for in the plaint as part of the substantive relief claimed, the defendant having a proper opportunity of meeting the case. *MODHU-SUDUN SHAHA MUNDUL v. In a later suit the plaintiff sued the defendant, in respect of the same holding, for rent for a subsequent year, and he claimed at the same rate as he had claimed in his previous suit. It was contended on behalf of the defendant that the question as to the rate at which the rent was payable was res judicata, it not being alleged that there had been any agreement subsequent to the first suit by which the rate was altered. Held, that the question as to the rent payable for the period covered by the first suit was res judicata; but that it did not follow that the decree in that suit operated as res judicata, and conclusively determined the rate of the rent payable for the year in respect of which the subsequent suit was brought. That depended on whether the previous decision was that the plaintiff should recover from the defendant the sum admitted by him to be due, or that the sum so admitted to be due was the proper amount of rent payable for the period in question. Held, that in this case the previous decision was to the latter effect, and that the question of the rate at which the rent was payable by the defendant was res judicata. *Punnoo Singh v. 50. ————— Rent, suit for—Decree as to rent payable for former years—Evidence of rent payable. The plaintiffs sued the defendants for rent of a certain jote claiming a higher rent than the defendants admitted. The High Court in second appeal gave a decree at the lesser rate admitted by the defendants. Subsequently the plaintiffs again sued the defendants in regard to the same jote for arrears of rent for subsequent years at the rate claimed in the former suit. The defendants contended that the rate of the rent as regards this jote was, by virtue of the judgment of the High Court in the previous suit, res judicata as between themselves and the plaintiff. Held, that where in a rent suit a Judge tries the question and gives judgment on the question "what is the yearly rent," and makes that the foundation of his judgment, that decision is res judicata between the parties. The previous judgment of the High Court therefore operated as res judicata. Hurry Behari Bhagat v. Pargun Ahir, I. L. possession. The defendant failed to prove his contention, and a decree was given for the full amount claimed. Subsequently the plaintiff again sued the defendant in regard to the same property for arrears of rent for subsequent years at the rate claimed in the former suit. The defendant had the land measured, adduced evidence, and endeavoured to raise the same defence as he had in the previous suit. No allegation was made to the effect that the rent had been altered in consequence of anything that had happened since the previous decision. The lower Courts, without considering the evidence adduced by the defendant, held that the defendant could not again raise the same contention as the question had already been considered and determined in the previous suit, and was res judicata between the parties. Held, that the previous decision did not operate as res judicata, and that the lower Courts ought to have determined on the evidence adduced what the amount of rent in question was. *NIL MADHAB SIRCAR v. appeal in second suit. For the purposes of the rule of res judicata it is not essential that the subject-matters of the present and the former litigations should be identical. Where a recurring liability is the subject of claim, a previous judgment dismissing a suit between the same parties upon findings which do not go to the root of the title on which the claim rests, but relate merely to a particular item or instalment, cannot operate as res judicata. But if such previous judgment negatives the title and the main obligation itself, the plaintiff cannot re-agitate the same question of the title by claiming a subsequent item or instalment. Rajah of Pittapur v. Sri Rajah Rau Buchi Sittaya Garu, L. R. 12 I. A. 16, referred to. A judgment liable to appeal or under appeal is only a provisional and not a definite or final adjudication and cannot operate as res judicata during the interval preceding the appeal or the interval preceding the decision of the appeal. Explanation IV of s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code commented on. Kakralapudi Suriyanarayanarazu v. Chellamkuri Chellama, 5 Mad. 176, and Nilvaru v. Nilvaru, I. L. R. 6 Bom. 116, referred to. The rule of res judicata contained in s. 13 of the Code applies equally to appeals and miscellaneous proceedings as to original suits. Having regard to its main object so far as it relates to the re-trial of an issue, it refers not to the date of the commencement of the litigation, but to the date when the Judge is called upon to decide the issue. Where after the commencement of the trial of an issue, a final judgment upon the same issue in another case is pronounced by a competent Court (the identity of parties and other conditions of s. 13 being fulfilled), such judgment operates as res judicata upon the decision, original or appellate, of the issue in the later litigation. On the 17th August 1885 a suit was instituted for recovery of an annual malikana allowance for the years 1290, 1291, and 1292 Fasli. On the 5th October 1885 the Munsif dismissed the suit. On the 10th March 1886 the Subordinate Judge on appeal reversed the Munsif's decree and decreed the suit. On the 21st June 1886 the defendant appealed to the High Court, which, on the 4th July 1887, reversed the Subordinate Judge's decree and restored that of the Munsif, on the ground that the plaintiff had never received and was not entitled to malikana. Meanwhile, on the 8th June 1886, the plaintiff brought another suit against the defendant for recovery of malikana for the year 1293 Fasli, which accrued after the institution of the former suit. By judgments dated respectively the 21st August and 27th November 1886, the lower Courts decreed this suit, holding that the Subordinate Judge's decree of the 10th March 1886 in the former suit operated as res judicata, and was conclusive in favour of the plaintiff's title to the malikana. On the 17th May 1887 the defendant appealed to the High Court, and on the 16th May 1888 (the High Court having, in the interval, dismissed the former suit by its judgment of the 4th July 1887) the appeal came on for hearing. Held, that the lower Courts were wrong in holding that the Subordinate Judge's decree of the 10th March 1886 in the former suit, which, at the date of the institution of the present suit on the 8th June 1886, was liable to appeal, and, at the dates of the decisions of those Courts in August and November 1886, was the subject of a second appeal pending in the High Court, could operate as res judicata in favour of the plaintiff's title to malikana. (i) That the High Court's judgment dismissing the former suit on the 4th July 1887, though passed after the decisions of the lower Courts in the present suit and after the institution of the second appeal in the present suit, was nevertheless binding on the High Court in deciding such second appeal, and, being final, was conclusive as res judicata against the plaintiff's title to malikana. (ii) That the effect of the High Court's judgment dismissing the former suit on the 4th July 1887 was not affected by the circumstance that the second suit was brought for recovery of malikana for a different year, inasmuch as that judgment went to the root of the plaintiff's title to malikana, and its scope was not limited to the particular item then claimed. BALKISHAN v. KISHAN LAL

55. ——— Fact in issue not heard and "finally decided" therein—Proceedings in a prior suit. To support the defence of res judicata, it is not enough that the parties to the suits are the same, and that the same matter is in issue. The matter must have been heard and finally decided (s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code). In 1885 relations of a deceased proprietor, alleging their right to the inheritance, sued for a declaration that they were his next of kin. The defendant set up a title as direct descendant, claiming to be the son of that proprietor's daughter. The first Court decided that this was his true parentage, and dismissed the suit. The High Court maintained the dismissal, not upon the merits, but on the grounds that the suit was defective for want of parties, and that a declaratory decree could not be made. In 1888 the same plaintiffs, having purchased the interest of the parties not joined in the previous suit, brought the present suit with the same object, against the same defendant, whom the Subordinate Judge (not the same officer that disposed of the former suit) now found not to have been the son of the said daughter. A Bench of the High Court (composed of Judges other than those that heard the former appeal), having examined the record of the former suit, reversed the Subordinate Judge's decision. They declined, however, to decide whether or not the latter suit was barred on the ground of res judicata. But intimating that they would have affirmed the judgment of the lower Court in the former suit had it, on the merits, come before them, they preferred that judgment to the one before them, and gave effect to this opinion by reversing the latter. Held, that the question of parentage had not been heard and finally decided in the suit of 1885. The appeal in that suit had put an end to any finality in the decision of the first Court, and had not led to a decision on the merits. There was therefore no res judicata; but unless treated as such, the judgment in the former suit had little or no bearing on the question as afterwards put in issue in this. That issue had been rightly decided by the Subordinate Judge on the evidence, and his judgment was accordingly maintained. SHEOSAGAR SINGH v. SITARAM SINGH

57. ——— Possession known and acquiesced in, prior to adjudication—Sivaganga sanad of 1803—Fraud. A suit was brought in 1886, grounded on fraud attributed to the lineal ancestor of the principal defendant in obtaining in 1803 the grant of the sanad of the Sivaganga zamindari, to which the plaintiff claimed title. The plaintiff's case was that the defendant's ancestor, the younger of two brothers, had fraudulently caused the sanad to be made out in his own name, whereas it was intended to be, and ought to have been, a grant to the elder brother, who was the plaintiff's lineal ancestor. Those through whom the plaintiff claimed had not made any such charge, although they had knowledge of all the facts connected with the grant of the sanad of 1803 to the younger brother, and with the long possession by him and his descendants, among whom there had been litigation, resulting in a decision adverse to the plaintiff's claim as to the ownership. The lower Appellate Court and the High Court both found that the alleged fraud had not been proved. Held, that this suit could not be maintained to re-open the question. *BALA GOURI VALLABA TEVAR v. 58. ———— Circumstances and evidence to establish existence of trust. A claim made for a share of property by inheritance from a deceased relation who had been in joint possession of it with the defendant was met by the defence that the estate had been jointly held for religious and charitable purposes under a will, the deceased having had no beneficial or heritable interest. The defendant alleged that the original owner of the property had bequeathed the property in trust for these purposes. The claimant alleged a revocation of the will, and denied that there was such a trust. One of the contentions upon this appeal was that the plaintiff was estopped from denying the existence of a trust by there having been a judgment of the High Court, in a prior suit, between the present defendant and the widow of the deceased, that judgment having stated that the trust had been recognized by him who was now defendant. Held, that this was not within s. 13, Civil Procedure Code, the matter not having been tried and determined in that suit. Held, also, that another prior judgment, in a suit brought by others interested in the trust, which judgment found the will to have been revoked, was admissible, though not conclusive, evidence against him. *BITTO KUNWAR v. 59. ———— Judgment obtained by fraud—Failure to appear and resist order granting certificate. P died in 1889, leaving a daughter B. P, it was alleged, had made a will appointing certain persons his executors. The executors applied for a certificate under the Succession Certificate Act (VII of 1889) to recover a debt due to the deceased's estate from one N. B opposed this application, and claimed the certificate for herself by a separate application. The District Judge rejected B's application, and issued a certificate to the executors on the 14th September 1892. In the meantime, one M obtained a decree against B as legal representative of P, and in execution bought P's right, title, and interest in the debt due from N. On the 12th September 1892 M applied for a certificate under Act VII of 1889 to recover this debt. The District Judge rejected this application. M appealed to the High Court. To this appeal the executors were made parties at their own request. The High Court reversed the District Judge's order, and remanded the case for disposal on the merits. Upon the remand the executors did not appear before the District Judge to contest M's application, and the District Judge granted him a certificate. Thereupon he applied for revocation of the certificate previously granted to the executors; and the executors in their turn applied for revocation of the certificate granted to him. The District Judge revoked M's certificate on the ground that he had fraudulently concealed from the Court the previous grant of a certificate to the executors. Against this order M appealed to the High Court, contending, inter alia, that the executors, not having resisted his application for a certificate after the case had been remanded by the High Court, were estopped, on the principle of res judicata, from applying for a revocation of the certificate granted to him. Held, that the executors were not stopped. The executors, having applied to be made parties to the appeal proceedings, were bound to appear in the Court below, and their failure to do so disabled them from pleading objection such as the collusive character of the decree and B's want of title, but it did not operate as res judicata, especially when there was reason to suspect fraud on the part of M. The order obtained by him could not have the effect of res judicata, unless the executors, being called on to dispute it, had failed to do so. A party to a proceeding is never disabled from showing that a judgment or order has been obtained by the adverse party by fraud. MANCHHARAM v. KALIDAS . . . I. L. R. 19 Bom. 821

The village was divided into khatas, but the title to the revenue in respect of each and every khata was one and the same. The plaintiff sued to recover arrears of revenue due in respect of khata No. 29, with interest. On his right to receive interest being disputed, it was held that a previous decision of a competent Court between the same parties, but dealing with a claim for interest due on arrears of revenue payable in respect of khata No. 47, operated as res judicata as to the claim with regard to khata No. 29. Ex parte Ador, [1891] 2 Q. B subsequently instituted a suit, in the Madras High Court on its Original Side, against A. The parties in both Courts were the same, and the matters in controversy between them were substantially the same. The latter related to the prescriptive right of B to light and air in respect of certain windows situated in a wall abutting on A's house. Issues were framed in both Courts relating to this question. By consent A's suit in the City Civil Court was adjourned from time to time to await the final decision of the High Court. This was duly arrived at in a judgment of an Appellate Court, after which A's suit came on for hearing in the City Civil Court. The question then first raised and considered was whether the decision of the High Court barred the trial of the suit, it being contended on behalf of A that, inasmuch as A's suit had been filed prior to B's, the decision in B's suit did not operate as a bar. Held, that the

65. ———— Mistake of law—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 13. D and R were divided brothers. R, in conjunction with the senior of his two wives, and to the exclusion of the junior wife, adopted a son of D on 27th October, 1879. On the same day, R settled some properties on his junior wife for life, with remainder to his daughter by her. In 1885 R died: his senior wife died shortly after, and in 1886 his adopted son also died, unmarried. D in 1890 sued the surviving widow and daughter for a declaration that he, as the reversionary heir of the deceased adopted son, was entitled to succeed to the properties left by R (including those settled on the widow and daughter) after the lifetime of the widow. The claim was dismissed in so far as it related to the settled property, but D was declared to be entitled, as reversioner, to the other properties left by R, after the lifetime of the widow. In 1891 D died. In 1897, the surviving sons of D brought the present suit, in which they claimed to be entitled to immediate possession of the properties to which D had been declared, in the former suit, entitled subject to a life interest in the widow. They contended that the decree in the former suit had been obtained under a mistake of law, and that it was no bar to the present suit. Held, that the matter was res judicata. *KAVERI AMMAL v. This decree, however, instead of going on to direct that in default of payment by the due date the property should be sold, directed that if payment was not made within the time fixed the judgment should be deemed to be non-existent. The plaintiffs did not pay the decretal amount within the time fixed, but some years afterwards brought a second suit for redemption: Held, that the second suit was not, under the circumstances, barred, either by reason of anything contained in the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, or by s. 13 or s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. *David Hag v. II, Arts. 142 and 144 of Act XV of 1877—Possession under decree subsequently reserved—Act XV of 1877, Sch. II, Art. 29. An appellate judgment operates by way of estoppel as regards all findings of the lower Court, which though not referred to in it, are necessary to make the appellate decree possible only on such findings. A plaintiff is not entitled under s. 14 of the Limitation Act to exclude the time spent in prosecuting a previous suit when such suit was dismissed for non-joinder on findings arrived at after trial and not without trial, because the Court was unable to entertain the suit. Under Art. 142, Sch. The mortgagee subsequently sued upon his mortgage, making the purchaser a defendant, but pending the suit the latter died, and the suit was not revived against his representatives. A decree was, in 1876, obtained, and in execution of that decree the property in question was purchased by the plaintiff, who now sued to recover possession of the same from the representatives of the purchaser at the former execution sale. Held, that the matter was not res judicata by reason of the mortgage suit, inasmuch as, that suit having been under Act VIII of 1859, the abatement had not the effect which such an abatement under Act X of 1877 would have had, viz., being a bar to a fresh suit in the same cause of action. *NISTARINI DEBI v. 10. ———— Landlord and tenant—Sale for arrears of rent—Deposit to protect under-tenure—Set-off—Voluntary payment. L and R, the holders of a patni estate, granted in 1856 a dar-patni lease to S at an annual rent, the lease stipulating that S should have full power of sale and gift, but should not sub-let without the patnidar's consent. The lease contained no stipulation for the registration of any vendee or donee. In 1860 S sold the dar-patni lease to K, the deed of sale, which was duly registered, providing for mutation of names in the patnidar's books. No such mutation was ever effected by K, who was never recognized as their tenant by L and R, the rent of the dar-patni being paid in the name of S. In 1864 the rent due from the patnidars being in arrear, the zamindar proceeded to sell the patni under Regulation VIII of 1819. Thereupon K, in order to protect his under-tenure, deposited in the Collectorate, on 17th November 1864, a sum of money, on which the sale was stayed. K, being then in arrear in the payment of his dar-patni rent, claimed to set-off the amount deposited in the Collectorate against the rent due to L and R. This L and R refused to allow and they brought a suit in the Collector's Court against S and his sureties to recover the arrears of rent. In that suit K intervened, claiming the benefit of the set-off, to which, however, the High Court, on 26th June 1866, on appeal, held that he was not entitled, the deposit being merely a voluntary payment by K. On 30th October 1867 K brought a regular suit against S and L and R to recover the amount of the deposit and obtained a decree, but the decision was reversed on appeal and the suit dismissed for want of jurisdiction. On 6th June 1869 K filed his plaint in the proper Court. Held, that he was entitled to recover the amount deposited by him in the Collectorate, and that the suit was not barred as being res judicata by the decision of 26th June 1866. *LUCKINARAIN MITTER v. 11. ———— Set-off, plea of, in respect of claim dismissed in former suit—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 13. In a suit to recover a sum of money due as wages, the plaintiff alleging that the defendant had engaged him to sell cloth on his account at a monthly salary, the defendant claimed a set-off as the price of cloth which he alleged the plaintiff had sold on his account on commission. It appeared that the defendant had previously sued the plaintiff to recover the same amount as was now claimed by way of set-off, as being due for the price of cloth sold and delivered by the defendant to him; and the plaintiff (then defendant) pleaded that there had been no sale to him, but the cloth had been delivered to him on commission sale. The suit was dismissed on the ground that there was no proof of a sale of cloth, and the question whether any sum was due for cloth sold on commission sale was not gone into. The cloth now alleged to have been delivered on commission sale was the same as that alleged in the former suit to have been actually sold to the plaintiff. Held, that the claim for such set-off was not barred under the provisions of s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code. AMIR ZAMA v. NATHU MAL . . . I. L. R. 8 All. 396

12. ———— Order of former Magistrate for maintenance—Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1872), s. 536—Maintenance of wife—Adultery of wife subsequent to order for maintenance. A husband, upon whom an order to make an allowance for the maintenance of his wife had been made under s. 536 of Act X of 1872, objected to the payment of the allowance on the ground that his wife was living in adultery. The Magistrate, entertaining this objection, disallowed it, on the ground that the charge of adultery against the wife was not established. The husband subsequently again objected to the payment of the allowance on the same ground. The Magistrate, entertaining the second objection, allowed it, and directed the husband to discontinue paying the allowance. His order was based on proof of adultery by the wife before the date of the order of the former Magistrate. Held, on the general principle of the rule of res judicata, that the second Magistrate was wrong in law in re-opening matters already adjudicated upon, and his order directing the discontinuance of the allowance on the ground of facts antecedent to the former Magistrate's order must be held to be illegal. *LARAITI v. 13. ———— Application to set aside decree after refusal by Court to set it aside—Attachment under ex parte decree. A suit was brought against T and an ex parte decree obtained against him. An application by T to have the decree set aside was dismissed. The defendant afterwards applied to have the attachment and all the proceedings set aside and declared null and void. Quære: Whether the former refusal to set it aside would be a bar to prevent the setting aside by the Court. LADKUVARBHAI v. SANSANGJI PARTABSANGJI . . . 7 Bom. O. C. 150

14. ——— Previous suit by next friend dismissed for default—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 158 (Act VIII of 1859), s. 148—Evidence of fraud of next friend—Limitation. A sued in 1885 to recover certain estate from B, alleging claim under his adoption which took place in 1865. A suit to recover the same estates had been filed on behalf of A by his next friend and had been dismissed for default in 1872. In 1875 A, being still a minor, relinquished by deed his claim to the estates for Rs. 12,000, but now alleged that he thought he was relinquishing it only in favour of the defendant's predecessor in title, who died in 1883 having been in possession of the estates since 1867. The plaintiff attained his majority in 1878. Held, that the claim was res judicata, the plaintiff having failed to prove fraud on the part of his next friend, and that, whether the cause of action arose in 1865 or 1867, it was equally barred from 1879. Per Curiam—The plea of res judicata ordinarily presupposes an adjudication on the merits; but s. 148 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act VIII of 1859) contains a statutory direction that, in case the plaintiff neglects to produce evidence and to prove his claim as he is bound to do, the Court do proceed to decide the suit on such material as is actually before it, and that the decision so pronounced shall have the force of a decree on the merits, notwithstanding the default on the part of the plaintiff. VENKATACHALAM v. MAHALAKSHMAMMA . . . I. L. R. 10 Mad. 272

15. ——— Judgment liable to appeal—Finality of judgment. A judgment liable to appeal or under appeal is only a provisional and not a definitive or final adjudication, and cannot operate as res judicata during the interval preceding the appeal or the interval preceding the decision of the appeal. Expl. IV of s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code commented on. Kakarlapudi Suryanarayana Razu v. Shellamkuri Shellamma, 5 Mad. 176, and Nilvaru v. Nilvaru, I. L. R. 6 Bom. 110, referred to. The rule of res judicata contained in s. 13 of the Code applies equally to appeals and miscellaneous proceedings as to original suits. Having regard to its main object, so far as it relates to the re-trial of an issue, it refers not to the date of the commencement of the litigation, but to the date when the Judge is called upon to decide the issue. Where, after the commencement of the trial of an issue, a final judgment upon the same issue in another case is pronounced by a competent Court (the identity of parties and other conditions of s. 13 being fulfilled), such judgment operates as res judicata upon the decision, original or appellate, of the issue in the later litigation. BALKISHAN v. 16. ——— Award as to partition in prior arbitration proceedings, effect of—Subsequent suit for partition. Disputes having arisen in a joint Hindu family, the parties submitted the question of partition to arbitrators, who passed an award thereon. Both parties objected to the award and it was never carried into effect. On a suit for partition being filed:—Held, that such an award was equivalent to a final judgment and binding on the parties in the absence of positive evidence that both parties agreed that the former state of things should be restored, and that therefore the present suit for partition could not be maintained. KRISHNA PANDA v. 17. ——— Refusal to file award—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 13 and 525. The refusal of an application for the filing of an award under s. 525, Civil Procedure Code, merely leaves the award to have its own ordinary legal effect, and it cannot be contended that an award is not to be relied on as a defence in a suit relating to the subject-matter dealt with by it, only because such an application has not been granted. Separable claims, viz., (a) to share property by right of inheritance, and (b) for the office of lambardar, had been disposed of, on the reference of the present parties, without the intervention of a Court by an arbitrator's award between them. An application under s. 525 had been rejected, for the reason, among others, that (b) was not a matter of civil jurisdiction. Held, however that the present suit, which was grounded on (a), was barred by the award made. MUHAMMED NEWAZ KHAN v. 18. ——— Consent decree—Decree dismissing party from suit. In 1839, in contemplation of a marriage between M and G, a deed of settlement was executed which provided that, during the lifetime of M's father, half of the rents and profits of two houses in Calcutta, held for a term of years, should be taken by him and half by G; that after the death of M's father, the rent and profits should go to G and M, and upon the death of either of them to the survivor; and after the death of the survivor to the use absolutely of the issue of the marriage, if any. The father of M died in 1841, and G on the 23rd of November in the same year. M, on the 21st December 1841, shortly after the death of her husband, married A S. and on the 8th of April 1842 gave birth to a child, who was named E and afterwards married to T. M died in 1850. By A S she had two children, the plaintiff and a son G S. On the 7th November 1859 E and her husband filed a bill of complaint in the Supreme Court, Calcutta, against the trustees of the settlement of 1839, and against A S and G S, who was then an infant, in which she claimed to be entitled to the properties absolutely. On the 21st of June 1860 a decree was made dismissing the suit against G S, and declaring that the properties covered by the deed of settlement were personalty. In the present suit it was objected that the decree of the Supreme Court could not bind G S, as he was dismissed from the suit, and because the decree was a decree by consent. Held, that the decree was binding upon G S and persons claiming to derive their title from him. A consent decree is as binding on the parties to the proceedings in which it is made as a decree made after a contentious trial. In re South American and Mexican Co., [1895] 1 Ch. 37; The Belcairn, L. 21. ————— Division of produce—N.-W. P. Rent Act (XII of 1881), s. 43—Landholder and tenant—Suit to recover rent in kind—Duty of officer appointed to divide produce or appraise standing crops. Where, under s. 43 of the North-Western Provinces Rent Act, 1881, an officer is appointed to divide produce, or estimate or appraise a standing crop, as between a landholder and his alleged tenant, such officer is not empowered to come to any decision as to the liability of the tenant to pay rent, if such liability is denied. If, therefore, an officer appointed for the purposes of s. 43 should take upon himself to determine any question as to the liability of the tenant to pay rent, his decision will not in any subsequent suit between the parties be res judicata. *Harnarain Singh v. previous application was barred. A decree was obtained on 16th March, 1893, and a petition in execution was presented on 8th February, 1894. The next petition in execution was presented on 2nd July, 1897, when the judgment-debtor, though he had notice of it, did not raise the defence of limitation. An order was passed on the petition, for the issue of a warrant for the arrest of the defendant, and the warrant was duly issued. Within three years of that petition the present application in execution was made, when it was objected that, as the application in 1897 had been presented more than three years from the previous application in 1894, it was barred, and that in consequence the present application must also be barred. Held, that it was not open to the judgment-debtor now to raise the objection that the application of 1897 was barred. He had had notice of that application and had raised no objection to it. Execution had been ordered in pursuance of it, which was an adjudication on the application; that order was acted on, and no appeal was preferred against it. The question whether the application of 1897 was barred was therefore res judicata. As the Court which had ordered the execution had jurisdiction to determine whether the decree was barred, and had made an order in execution of the decree, it must be considered to have determined that it was not barred. *Mungul Pershad Dichit v. 26. ————— Incidental or collateral issues—Res judicata in rent suits—Adjudication upon title to the land in rent suits, when res judicata in a subsequent title suit. Where in a suit for rent the defendant denies the relationship of landlord and tenant and either sets up the title of a third person to the land for which rent is claimed, or pleads that she is not in occupation of the land or that the tenancy which existed has expired, the only material issue to be decided in the suit is whether the relationship of landlord and tenant subsisted between the parties for the period covered by the suit and the issue, if any, raised as to the title to the land is an incidental or collateral issue not necessary for the decision of the suit; therefore the adjudication on this latter issue cannot operate as res judicata in a subsequent suit between the parties for the establishment of title to the land. *Srihari Banerjee v. But where in a rent suit, the alleged tenant denies the plaintiff's title to the land and sets up his own title to the same, the issue as to the title to the land becomes a substantial issue in the suit, and the decision of the Court on the question of title becomes res judicata in a subsequent suit between the parties for establishment of title to the land. *Raj Krissen Mukerjee v. Where in a suit brought by the plaintiff against the defendant for rent in respect of an alleged jama of R7 the defendant pleaded that he did not hold any separate jama of R7 under the plaintiff, but that the lands covered by the suit were included in a jama of R33 and odd, which they held under the plaintiff, and the Court held that the defendant did not hold any separate jama of R7 under the plaintiff and the lands of the alleged jama were included in the defendant's jama of R33 odd: Held, that the decision that the lands were included within the defendant's jama of R33 odd, was not necessary for the decision of the suit, and consequently could not be res judicata in a subsequent suit brought by the plaintiff against the defendant for the declaration of his title to those lands and for khas possession thereof. *SAHADEB DEHALI v. 5. ———— Previous suit dismissed as premature—Civil Procedure Code, s. 13—Omission to give notice under Transfer of Property Act, s. 132. A suit by the assignee of a mortgage bond against the mortgagor was dismissed on the ground that the plaintiff was not entitled to sue for want of notice to the defendant under s. 132 of the Transfer of Property Act. The plaintiff then gave express notice of the assignment to the mortgagor, and sued on the bond again. lease had expired. Plaintiff then sued the first and second defendants, basing his cause of action on the dispossession by the second defendant, and praying for the recovery of the mortgage-money by sale of the mortgaged property. Plaintiff then brought a subsequent suit for possession against the same parties and on the same cause of action. The purchaser of plot 155 sold it to A, who in 1873 sued the tenant of a portion of the land for rent. In this suit A prayed that it might be declared that he was the owner. The tenant alleged that B, the purchaser of plot 147, was the owner of the land in respect of which rent was sought to be recovered, and B was made a party to the suit. At the hearing A did not appear, and the suit was dismissed for default. Subsequently A sold plot 155 to the present plaintiff, who now sued for possession. therein. A subsequently did bring a suit with that object against his co-parceners, but allowed it to be dismissed against him for default. B now brought a suit against A and his co-parceners for possession of A's share in such family property. 11. ——— Civil Procedure Code, 1859, ss. 2 and 170—Hindu widow—Reversioner. A, a Hindu widow, brought a suit to recover possession of her husband's share of certain joint property. After partially examining some other witnesses, she cited the defendant as a witness, and, on his failure to attend, her suit was dismissed. After the death of the widow, her daughter sued the same defendant on behalf of her two minor sons, as being entitled in reversion to their grandfather's share, to recover the share which was the subject of the former suit: the defendant was summoned as a witness, but failed to attend. Held, that the suit was not barred under s. 2, Act VIII of 1859, as being res judicata, until it was shown that the former decree had been obtained after a fair trial of the right, so as to bind not only the widow, but the reversioners. The defendant having failed to attend and give evidence on this point, the Court was justified in giving the plaintiff a decree under s. 170, Act VIII of 1859. BRAMMOYE DASSEE v. a suit in terms of s. 102, Civil Procedure Code, is not intended to operate in favour of the defendant as res judicata. When read with s. 103, it precludes a fresh suit in respect of the same cause of action, referring, irrespectively of the defence or the relief prayed, entirely to the grounds, or alleged media, on which the plaintiff asks the Court to decide in his favour. Brother's sons, as nearest agnates of a deceased proprietor, sued for a decree, declaring that a gift, before then made by the widow in favour of her daughter's son, of the estate of her late husband, would not operate against their right of succession on her death. A prior suit before the date of the gift, brought by two of the plaintiffs for a declaratory decree, and an injunction restraining the widow from alienating the same estate had been dismissed under the provisions of ss. 102 and 103, Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877). Held, that the causes of action in the two suits were not identical, and the fresh suit was not precluded by s. 103, the gift having afforded the new ground of claim which also had subsequently arisen. CHAND KOUR v. In 1883 the defendant's predecessor and vendor S had sued the plaintiff's tenant A in the Mamlatdar's Court, alleging that A had disturbed his possession by putting sweepings upon the land and asking to be protected in his enjoyment. He did not appear on the day fixed for hearing, and his suit was dismissed under s. 13 of Bombay Act III of 1876. He did not file a suit to set aside this order of dismissal. It was contended in the present suit now brought by the plaintiff that after three years, by the combined operation of art. 47 and s. 28 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), the defendant's vendor S had lost his title to the land which thus became vested in the plaintiff. Held, that except as evidence of the plaintiff's title to the land, the proceedings in the Mamlatdar's Court in 1883 and his decree did not affect the present suit in ejectment. As such evidence they were before the lower Court. Ramchandra v. Bhikabai. I. L. R. 6 Bom. 447, referred to. RAJARAM v. GANESH HARI KARKHANIS

18. ———— Dismissal for undervaluation. A suit was brought in the Civil Court of a Munsif, who gave judgment for the plaintiffs, but his decree was reversed by the District Judge, on the ground that the claim was improperly valued. A second suit, on the same cause of action, was then brought in the Court of the Munsif, who again decided for the plaintiffs; but his decree was reversed by the District Judge, on the ground that the suit was prohibited by Bombay Regulation II of 1827, s. 21. The High Court, on special appeal, reversed that decision, and remanded the suit, and the District Judge then threw out the claim, under s. 2 of Act VIII of 1859, on the ground that the cause of action had already been heard and determined. In a second special appeal against this decision:—Held, that the plaintiffs were not precluded from presenting a fresh plaint in respect of the same cause of action, and that the case came within the spirit of s. 36 of Act VIII of 1859, as, there being no express power given by the Code to reject a plaint after it had been registered by reason of the claim being improperly valued, the doing so ought to have only the same effect as if the plaint has been originally rejected. DULLABH JOGI v. stating that a fresh suit might be instituted as to a part of the subject-matter. A suit for possession of immoveable property was wholly dismissed on the ground that the plaintiff had not made out his title to the whole of the property claimed, though he had proved title to a one-third share of such property. The decree included an order in these terms: "This order will not prevent the plaintiff from instituting a suit for possession of the one-third interest of Musammatt Lachminia in the fields specified in the deed of sale," upon which the suit was based. No appeal was preferred from this decree. Subsequently the plaintiff brought another suit upon the same title to recover possession of the one-third share referred to in the order just quoted. Held, by the Full Bench, that the Court in the former suit had no power to include in its decree of dismissal any such reservation or order; that the fact that the decree was not appealed against did not give the order contained in it, which was an absolute nullity, any effect; that as in the former suit the plaintiff could have obtained a decree for the one-third share now claimed, and the whole of the claim in that suit was dismissed, the decree in that suit was a decision within s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code; and the present suit was consequently barred as res judicata. *Kudrat v. The second and third defendants in that suit (the defendants in the present suit) who were inhabitants of Surat, pleaded that as against them the Court had no jurisdiction. The suit was accordingly dismissed as against them for want of jurisdiction, but as against the first defendant, who resided in Bombay, the Court passed a decree for the plaintiff. The plaintiff then brought the present suit against the defendants in the Surat Court to enforce their liability under the mortgage. Issues of fact arising on the merits were inquired into; but a certificate of the Collector under s. 6 of the Pensions Act (XXIII of 1871), which was necessary to give jurisdiction to the Court, not having been obtained, the claim was rejected on that ground. Held, that the Court not having legally pronounced on the merits of the former case, the opinions expressed on the issues were not res judicata so as to bar the maintenance of the present suit. *PUTALI MEHETI v. 32. ———— Dismissal of suit on default of plaintiff to give security for costs—Defendant precluded from pleading matter which is res judicata—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, ss. 13, 381. The plaintiff sued the defendants on a promissory note. The defendants filed a written statement, alleging that the note had been obtained by the plaintiff by fraud and false representation. Previously to the filing of the present suit by the plaintiff, the defendants had brought a suit against the plaintiff, in which they prayed that the said promissory note might be delivered up to be cancelled. Their plaint in that suit contained allegations of fraud and want of consideration identical with those contained in their written statement in the present suit. The plaintiffs in the former suit (the present defendants) having failed to give security for costs, the suit was dismissed under s. 381 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877). It was now contended that the defendants were estopped from pleading, as a defence to the present suit, the fraud and want of consideration which had been alleged by them as plaintiffs in the former suit which had been dismissed. Held, that the defence might be pleaded, and that the question of fraud and want of consideration was not res judicata within the meaning of s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code. The previous suit had been dismissed by reason of the plaintiffs' (the present defendants') failure to give security for costs; and a Court cannot be said to "hear and decide" a matter which it is relieved from hearing and deciding by the plaintiff's default. Under s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), a defendant may be precluded from pleading as a defence matter which is res judicata. Quare :

The plaintiffs did not appeal from this decision, but subsequently brought a suit against the same defendants, claiming joint possession of the same property. Held, that the suit was barred by s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code, the Court in the former suit not having reserved to the plaintiffs the right to bring a fresh action. *Ganesh v. The purchaser subsequently brought a second suit. Held, that the dismissal of the former suit was not, under the circumstances, a decision within the meaning of s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code such as could bar the second suit by way of res judicata. Per MAHMOOD, J.—The object of s. 10 and indeed of the whole of the Court-Fees

Act is to lay down rules for the collection of one form of taxation, and the rule that statutes which impose pecuniary burdens or encroach upon, or qualify the rights of, the subject must be strictly construed, applies with special force to such provisions of the Act as provide a penalty, whatever its nature may be. S. 10 is simply a penal clause to enforce the collection of the Court-fees, and dismissal of a suit under its provisions cannot operate as res judicata. Also per MAHMOOD, J.—The condition in s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code, that the former suit must have been "heard and finally decided," means that a former judgment proceeding wholly on a technical defect or irregularity, and not upon the merits, is not a bar to a subsequent suit for the same cause of action. It is not every decree or judgment which will operate as res judicata, and every dismissal of a suit does not necessarily bar a fresh action. It is necessary also to show that there was a decision finally granting or withholding the relief sought. *Ramnath Roy Chowdhry v. Bhagbut Mohaputter, 3 W. R., Act X. 140; Shokhee Bewah v. The procedure provided by Ch. XXII of the Code is not the only manner in which a plaintiff can come into Court for the second time to ask for adjudication upon the merits of his rights, which were not adjudicated upon on the former occasion owing to some technical defect which proved fatal to the former suit. *Ganesh Rai v. 39. — Dismissal of suit on deed of sale when found to be a mortgage only—Refusal of leave to bring fresh suit. The dismissal of a suit on the ground that a deed put in by the plaintiff was a mortgage, and not a deed of sale, does not preclude him from treating it as a mortgage in a subsequent suit, notwithstanding the former suit was dismissed after refusing plaintiff permission to withdraw it and bring a fresh suit. *RAMKRISTO SHAHA v. 40. — Dismissal of suit on failure to produce evidence. 43. — Dismissal of suit for dissolution for want of proof of partnership—Suit for money due for losses in partnership business. In 1878 plaintiff sued the defendants for moneys due on 10th April 1878 on account of an alleged partnership entered into on 3rd July 1876 for the purchase and sale of salt. This suit was dismissed on the ground that no partnership was proved. In 1880 plaintiff sued defendants for money due on account of a partnership entered into on 12th July 1876 for the sale of salt, and continued down to the end of 1878. Held, that the plaintiff, having failed to prove in the former suit that any partnership existed between him and the defendants, was barred from bringing the present suit. *SAMARAPURI CHETTI v. 44. — Finality of order—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 244—Competency of Court. S S brought a suit under a mortgage-bond, making R S, a subsequent incumbrancer, a defendant, and obtained a decree for a sale of the whole of the mortgaged premises. After the decree, a compromise was effected between all the parties with the exception of R S by the terms of which in consideration of the judgment-debtors (mortgagors) undertaking to do certain acts, S S promised to execute his decree against only a 3 annas 12 dams share of the mortgaged premises. The judgment-debtors (mortgagors) having failed to carry out the compromise, S S applied for a sale of the whole of the mortgaged premises, but on the petition of R S setting out the terms of the compromise to which he was no party, the Subordinate Judge, by an order of the 7th September 1885, held that under the agreement S S was entitled to sell only a 3 annas 12 dams share of the mortgaged premises, which was accordingly directed to be sold. That order was not appealed against, but subsequently in March 1886 S S made a fresh application for a sale of the remainder of the premises, R S objecting. Held, that the order of the 7th September was one which the Court was competent to make under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and, by reason of that order not being appealed from, it became final. *BASUDEO NARAIN SINGH v. 45. — Decree against mortgaged property—Liability of judgment-debtor to arrest under such decree—Principles of res judicata applicable to execution proceedings. A decree cannot be extended in execution beyond the real meaning of its terms. A decree obtained on a mortgage directed that the judgment-debtor should pay the sum adjudged out of the property mortgaged. After executing the decree against the mortgaged property, the decree-holder made an application for execution against the person of the judgment-debtor. A notice was issued calling upon him to show cause why execution should not be further proceeded with. But the notice did not give him any intimation of the application for the arrest of his person. He did not appear, and, in his absence, an order was made for his personal arrest; but the order was not executed, as the decree-holder did not pay the process-fee. Subsequently a fresh application was made for execution against the person of the judgment-debtor. Held, that the question as to the personal liability of the judgment-debtor to satisfy the decree was not concluded by the order made in the previous execution-proceedings for execution to issue against his person. The order would have operated as a res judicata if the judgment-debtor had been called upon to contest the right claimed by the decree-holder to hold him personally liable under the decree, and had then failed in his contention to the contrary, or allowed the judgment to go by default. The order was res judicata as to the legal possibility of further execution in terms of the decree, but not as to the special construction which the judgment-creditor sought to impose on it. *BUDAN v. 46. — Application for execution struck off in consequence of non-payment of talbana—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 158 and 647—Civil Procedure Amendment Act (VI of 1892), s. 4—Subsequent application for execution. An application for execution of a decree by attachment of immoveable property having been presented by a decree-holder, the Court executing the decree ordered that the costs of such attachment should be deposited by the decree-holder on or before a certain specified date. The costs of attachment were not deposited by the day named in the order above referred to, and the Court thereupon passed the following order: "This case came on for hearing to-day: as the decree-holder has not deposited the costs of attachment, etc., therefore it is ordered that the case be struck off for default." Held, that, whether this second order was an order under s. 158 of the Code of Civil Procedure deciding the application for attachment, or whether its effect was merely to remove the application from the file of pending applications without deciding it, in either case no fresh application (being of a precisely similar nature) was entertainable, though in the latter case possibly the former application might be renewed. *PHEKU v. ## 5. ORDERS IN EXECUTION OF DECREE.

1. — Summary order in execution—Subsequent suit. A summary order rejecting plaintiff's claim in an execution case to the property in dispute, when it had been attached by a decree-holder, which order was not followed by the sale of the property attached, cannot in any manner affect a subsequent suit against parties other than the decree-holder brought for a different purpose and on a different cause of action. *BOOA RUSSOOLIE v. 2. — Order rejecting application for execution of decree on the ground of limitation—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 2. An order passed by a Court rejecting a bona fide application by a judgment-creditor for the execution of his decree, on the ground that the period allowed by law for execution had expired, held not to be an adjudication within the rule of res judicata or within s. 2, Act VIII of 1859. *DELHI AND LONDON BANK v. 5. ——— Application for execution of maintenance decree—Previous application held to be barred by limitation. On an application made in 1891 for the execution of a decree passed in 1870, it appeared that the decree directed the payment of maintenance to the plaintiff annually on a specified date, and the present application related to the period of three years from 1888 to 1891. There had been an application for execution in 1873. The next application was made in 1879, and it was dismissed as being barred by limitation. Held, that the question whether the application was barred by limitation was not res judicata. KUPPU AMMAL v. SAMINATHA AYYAR . . . I. L. R. 18 Mad. 482

6. ——— Order refusing to execute decree—Attachment without sale—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 67. The plaintiff, a judgment-creditor, had in the High Court obtained a decree against the defendant, whereby it was ordered that the defendant should pay to the plaintiff a sum of R1,68,123, and that the said sum should be a charge on certain immoveable properties situated in the mofussil and specified in a schedule to the decree. In August 1894 the plaintiff obtained an order for transfer of the decree to a mofussil Court and sent a copy of the decree for execution there. He obtained in that Court an order for attachment and sale of the property, but that order was reversed on appeal in May 1895, the High Court holding that the properties could not be sold in execution of the decree, but that a separate suit must be brought under s. 67 of the Transfer of Property Act. The plaintiff then applied to the Court that passed the decree for an order for transmission of the decree to the mofussil Court with a view to execution. That application was refused by SALE, J., who held that the decision of May 1895 was conclusive as to the plaintiff's right to attach the property as distinct from a sale or to sell it except after a suit under s. 67 of the Transfer of Property Act. Held, on appeal (reversing the decision of SALE, J.), that the application was not res judicata. 7. ——— Order refusing to award mesne profits under decree—Proceedings in execution. Held, by the Full Bench, that the law of res judicata does not apply in proceedings in execution of decree. Held, therefore, by the referring Bench, where on an application for the execution of a decree the question was raised whether the decree awarded mesne profits or not, and the Court executing it determined that it did not award mesne profits, that such determination was not final, but such question was open to re-adjudication on a subsequent application for execution of the decree. 8. ——— Refusal to execute decree—Re-opening questions by successor to judge who decided them. On an application being made for the execution of a decree, the judgment-debtor made three objections to its execution. The first of these objections the Court executing the decree, the Subordinate Judge allowed, and refused to execute the decree. On appeal by the decree-holder, the District Judge disallowed all three such objections, holding that the decree should be executed, and remanded the case for that purpose. When the case came back to the Subordinate Judge, the judgment-debtor again raised the second and third of such objections, but the Subordinate Judge refused to entertain them, on the ground that they had already been determined by such District Judge. On appeal by the judgment-debtor, the successor of such District Judge ordered the Subordinate Judge to determine all three such objections. Held, that such succeeding Judge could not re-open such questions, his predecessor having already finally determined them, and his predecessor's order, so far as such application for execution of the decree was concerned, was final. BALLABH SHANKAR v. NARAIN SINGH . . . I. L. R. 3 Ail. 173

9. ——— Refusal to execute decree as being barred—Application for execution of decree subsequently made. When a Court, upon an application for execution, has decided that the execution is barred by limitation, and that order has become final in consequence of no appeal having been preferred therefrom, such order will, upon a subsequent application for execution of the same decree, operate as a bar to execution. 10. ——— Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), s. 13 (Act VIII of 1859), s. 2. The decision, by a competent Court, that an application for the execution of a decree is barred by limitation, has the effect of res judicata; and although such decision may be erroneous, yet so long as it remains unreversed in appeal it is valid and binding, and the question cannot be re-opened. A decision that an application for execution is not time-barred has a similar effect. On the 15th April 1868 the plaintiff applied for the execution of a decree held by him against the defendant, and certain houses were thereupon attached. In April 1869 the attachment was raised on the intervention of a third person. The plaintiff then brought a suit to establish his right to attach the houses, and obtained a decree on the 28th February 1871. An appeal was made, and the suit was finally decided in the plaintiff's favour in April 1873. After the plaintiff had obtained his original decree, and while the appeal was pending, he applied for the sale of the houses in execution on the 30th November 1871,

RES JUDICATA—*contd.*5. ORDERS IN EXECUTION OF DECREE

and subsequently made three other applications within three years of each other, the last of which was dated the 30th October 1876. The Court rejected this last application on the 28th November 1876, on the ground that the execution of the decree was barred, as more than three years had elapsed between the first and second applications (i.e., the applications of the 15th April 1868 and 30th November 1871). The plaintiff appealed against the order, but his appeal was rejected because he had failed to produce with it a copy of the order appealed against. The plaintiff took no further steps in that proceeding, but made a fresh application for execution on the 10th August 1878. The Subordinate Judge rejected it, on the ground that the execution was barred, the matter being res judicata. On appeal the District Judge reversed that order and allowed execution. On appeal to the High Court:—Held, on the authority of Mungal Pershad Dichit v. Grija Kant Lahiri Chowdhry, I. L. R. 8 Cal. 51, that the rule of res judicata applied, and that the application of the 30th November 1871 was time-barred, and, a fortiori, every subsequent application was barred. Semble: A proceeding in execution is a proceeding which terminates in a decree as defined by s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), and is therefore a suit within the meaning of the Code. *MANJUNATH BADRABHAT v. 11. ——— Order construing decree—Order as to possession and mesne profits—Subsequent suit for possession. Certain lands having been divided under a batwara between A and B, who together took one portion, and C, who took the remainder, A in 1847 mortgaged his share to B under a usufructuary mortgage. In 1851 a dispute arose as to the boundaries under the batwara, and ended in C surrendering 51½ bighas, which B was allowed to take possession of under an ikrarnamah executed by A to secure the costs incurred by B in the dispute. In 1874 A sued to recover possession of a moiety of the lands held jointly by him with B, and in 1875 obtained a decree for possession and wasilat, no specific mention of the 51½ bighas being made in the decree. In execution of the decree, wasilat in respect of a moiety of the 51½ bighas was allowed an objection by the defendant to such wasilat being charged having been overruled. In 1878 B sued to recover possession of the moiety of the 51½ bighas which had been taken by A under his decree. Held, that, in rejecting the objection raised by B and allowing wasilat in respect of the 51½ bighas, the Court had interpreted the decree passed and declared that under it possession of a moiety of the 51½ bighas had been decreed and given to A, and that the suit instituted in 1878 was therefore barred. Held, also, that this matter, having been decided under s. 11, Act XXIII of 1861, between the parties in execution of a decree, could not be made the subject of a suit. *KALI MUNDUL v. 12. ——— Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 230—Limitation—Vatandars (Bombay) Act, III of 1874, s. 10—Collector's certificate. A decree of a District Court, dated 5th October 1863, declared the plaintiff to be a hereditary deputy vatandar of a certain deshpande vatan vested in the ancestors of the defendant as hereditary vatandars, and that the plaintiff, as such deputy, was entitled to receive a certain sum annually out of the income of the vatan. The decree did not explicitly deal with the claim to future payments then set up by the plaintiff as hereditary deputy vatandar. The plaintiff received moneys from time to time under the decree until 1875, but he neglected to have himself registered as a representative vatandar under Bombay Act III of 1874, s. 56. In 1875 he made a claim for certain arrears of the allowance which he alleged to be due under the decree, and he attached certain moneys out of the income of the defendant's vatan. The Collector issued a certificate under s. 10 of the Vatandars Act (III of 1874) for the removal of the attachment and the attachment was accordingly removed by the Subordinate Judge. The plaintiff appealed from the order of removal, but the Appellate Court confirmed that order. On second appeal to the High Court, it was held on 23rd June 1879 that the lower Courts were right in raising the attachment; that the Civil Courts had no jurisdiction to register the plaintiff as a representative vatandar, and that the Collector was the proper authority to be referred to. Thereupon the plaintiff applied to the Collector to cancel the certificate which had removed the attachment, and to register him as a representative vatandar. The Collector rejected the plaintiff's application on 31st March 1881. In 1881 the plaintiff presented a fresh darkhast to attach the same vatan property in virtue of the said decree of 1863, but the application was rejected as res judicata by both the lower Courts. They held that the certificate of the Collector, which remained uncanceled, operated as a bar. On second appeal to the High Court:—Held, reversing the order of the lower Courts, that the decree was one capable of execution. Held, as regards the Collector's certificate, that under s. 10 of the Vatandars Act (Bombay), III of 1874, the certificate was exhausted in operating on the execution which it stopped, and that the lower Court ought to have dealt with the case apart from that certificate. *GOPAL HANMANT DESHKA v. 13. ——— Withdrawal of application for execution—Effect of such withdrawal. Orders in execution-proceedings, if not appealed from, are binding on the parties to the suit in all subsequent proceedings in that suit, on principles analogous to those of res judicata strictly so called. It is therefore necessary to constitute a bar that there should be a hearing and final decision. Where an application for execution is allowed to be withdrawn, the matters in dispute are not heard and decided. There is therefore no res judicata. HARI GANESH v. YAMUNABAI. I. L. R. 23 Bom. 35

14. — Principle of res judicata as applied to execution-proceedings—Civil Procedure Code, s. 373. Where a judgment-debtor, being entitled and having an opportunity to plead s. 373 of the Code of Civil Procedure as a bar to execution of the decree against him, neglects to do so, and the application in respect of which such objection might have been taken is entertained by the Court and orders passed thereupon, the principle of res judicata will apply to such proceedings, and the judgment-debtor cannot at a subsequent stage of the same execution proceedings object that such previous application for execution ought, in fact, to have been held to be barred by the operation of s. 373 above mentioned. SHER SINGH v. 15. — Orders disallowing objection to party representative—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 13 and 244. G brought a suit against I for the establishment of her rights as purchaser of certain immoveable properties sold in execution of a decree obtained against I and for possession of the same. After the settlement of issues, but before the suit was finally disposed of, I died, and his brother J was made defendant as his legal representative. J consented to the suit being tried on the defence raised by I and upon the issues already settled. The suit was decreed, it being held that G was the purchaser. In execution of this decree, in which G sought to obtain possession, J objected that he was entitled to a half share of some and to the entire sixteen annas of the other properties, and that his brother I had no right whatever in the same. This objection was disallowed by the Court executing the decree on the ground that it had not been raised in the original suit, and that, as the decree had been passed in the presence of the party then objecting, he was not entitled to urge it. Thereupon J brought a suit against G to establish his rights. The defence was that the order passed in the execution-proceedings, disallowing the plaintiff's objection, was a bar to the suit under s. 13 and s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held, that the order disallowing the plaintiff's objection did not operate as res judicata under s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code. The Delhi and London Bank v. Orchard, I. L. R. 3 Calc. 47; I. L. R. 4 I. A. 127, relied on. Held, also, that this order was no bar to the suit under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code. Kanai Lal Khan v. Shashi Bhusun Biswas, I. L. R. 6 Calc. 777; 8 C. L. dispute as to second plot included in deed—Question of validity of deed again raised—Orders in execution-proceedings how far final—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 13 and 283. The plaintiff purchased two distinct plots of land (A and B) from one G by a deed of sale dated 30th September 1875. In 1884, in execution of a decree against G, plot A was attached and sold as his property and purchased by the defendant. The plaintiff did not intervene, and at that time took no steps to establish his alleged right to this land. In 1885 the defendant obtained another decree against G, and in execution, attached plot B. The plaintiff intervened, and claimed the property attached as his own under the sale-deed of 30th December 1875. The defendant disputed the sale, but the Court found in favour of the validity of the sale-deed and allowed the plaintiff's claim. The defendant did not file a suit to set aside this order. The plaintiff then filed a suit to establish his title to plot A, relying on his sale-deed of the 30th December 1875. The defendant again disputed the sale, pleading that it was a colourable and fictitious transaction. Held, that the order in the execution-proceeding did not operate as res judicata, and did not estop the defendant from contesting the validity of the sale-deed in the present suit. Per JARDINE, J.—If the decision as to the validity of the deed had been a final decision in a suit as distinguished from an execution-proceeding, it would have created an estoppel by res judicata. Between the parties the orders to which s. 283 of the Civil Procedure Code refers are subject to the result of a suit, if any, conclusive, but this conclusiveness exists only as regards the particular property in dispute. DINKAR BALLAL CHAKRADEV v. III—Application in execution for two reliefs—Order passed granting one relief and making no reference to the other—Subsequent application for the other relief; power of Court to grant. A decree awarded a plaintiff possession of land, together with mesne profits. Plaintiff subsequently applied, in execution, for delivery of the land and for the mesne profits. The Court passed an order on this application, directing plaintiff to be put into possession of the land, but making no reference whatever to the mesne profits. Plaintiff subsequently made another application for mesne profits, when it was contended that, inasmuch as the prayer for mesne profits had not been granted when the previous application was dealt with, it must be taken that the application for mesne profits had been refused, and that the matter was consequently res judicata. Held, that the application was not barred, and that the law of res judicata, as laid down in Expl. III to s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure had no application to the case. NITYANANDA GANTAYET v. GAJAPATI VASUDEVA DEVU (1901)

18. ———— Limitation—Order in execution of decree—Limitation—Previous application for execution refused, and judgment-debtor's objection as to limitation disallowed—Effect of such an order in a subsequent application for execution. On an application for execution, an order for attachment having been issued, the judgment-debtor objected to the execution on the ground that it was barred by limitation. After several adjournments, granted at the instance of the decree-holder, neither party having appeared at the date of hearing the Court by its order refused the application for execution and disallowed the objection of the judgment-debtor. On a subsequent application by the decree-holder, the judgment-debtor again objected to the execution on the ground that, inasmuch as the previous application was barred by limitation, the subsequent application was also barred. Held, that the judgment-debtor was not precluded from raising the objection that the previous application was barred by limitation. *Mungul Pershad Dichit v. 19. ———— Although the execution of a decree may have been actually barred by time at the date of an application made for its execution, yet, if an order for execution is made by a competent Court having jurisdiction to try whether such execution is barred by time or not such order, although erroneous, must, if unreversed, be treated as valid. An application for execution of a decree was struck off on the 15th of January 1894. The next application for execution was not made until the 29th of May 1897. Notice of this application was served on the judgment-debtors and they filed objections, but on the day fixed for hearing failed to support them, and they were dismissed. The application for execution was, however, ultimately struck off by reason of the non-payment of process fees, by the decree-holders. Held, that it was not open to the judgment-debtors, on a subsequent application for execution being made, to plead limitation in respect to the application of the 29th May 1897, as a bar to the execution of the decree. *Mungul Pershad Dichit v. The order did not operate as res judicata. Mungul Prosad Dichit v. Grija Kant Lahiri, L. R. 8 I. A. 123; I. L. R. 8 Calc. 51, distinguished. *JNANADA SUNDARI CHOWDHURANI v. ## 6. CAUSES OF ACTION.

1. ———— Nature of cause of action—Obligation to disclose title. A plaintiff's cause of action is a very different thing from his title; the one being something done contrary to his interest, which obliges him to seek the aid of a Court of Justice, the other being the proof that that something affords him a valid ground for relief. DUDSAR BIREE v. SHAKIR BURKUNDAZ 15 W. R. 168

2. ———— Identity of bases of claim—Dismissal of claim on failure to produce evidence. Where the relief sought for in respect of certain property in a suit is different from the relief sought for in respect of the same property in a prior suit (between the same parties or their privies), but the title on which the relief sought for is based is the same in both suits, the dismissal of the former suit for failure to establish such title is a bar to the second suit. *RAM RAO v. 3. ———— Difference in rights on which claim is made—Omission to assert every title. Act VIII of 1859, s. 2, does not require a plaintiff at once to assert all his titles to property, or to be thereafter estopped from advancing them. The maxim, nemo debet bis vexari pro una et eadem causa, cannot apply where the right on which the second suit is brought is not the same as that asserted in the former suit. SADAYA PILLAI v. CHINNI

4. ———— Omission to decide part of case—Suit as to part of case raised in former suit. A plaintiff is bound to raise every title on which he can succeed and to obtain a decision upon every part of his case, and if it is found that any part of the case which he made has been neglected by the Court which tried the suit, he is not at liberty to bring a fresh suit in respect of such part. SREEKRISTO BISWAS v. JOY KRISTO BISWAS

5. ——— Obligation to assert every title—Reservation of right. A litigant is bound to disclose all his titles at once. He cannot be allowed to keep back one, and then, years after, to bring a fresh suit on the ground that he had still a right in reserve. BROJO LALL ROY v. KHETUR NATH MITTER

6. ——— Civil Procedure Code, s. 13, Expl. II—Idem corpus, alia causâ petendi. In 1876 A sued K and others to recover certain lands, alleging that he was the karnavan of their tarwad, and that the lands were granted to them for maintenance under an oral agreement, which had been broken by K having mortgaged some of the lands. This suit was dismissed. In 188 A sued the same defendants to recover the same lands, on the ground that as karnavan of the tarwad he was entitled to resume possession of the lands. Held, reversing the decrees of the lower Courts, that the suit brought by A in 1881 was not barred by s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1877. Per MUTTUSAMI AYYAR, J.—Expl. II to s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1877, refers to the title litigated in the former suit as distinguished from the relief claimed. Where several independent grounds of action are available, a party is not bound to unite them all in one suit, though he is bound to bring before the Court all grounds of attack available to him with reference to the title which is made the ground of action. ALLUNNI v. KUNJUSHA

7. ——— Civil Procedure Code, 1882—Suit for land based on plaintiff's title—Previous suit as lessor—Omission to make title a ground of attack in previous suit—No denial of plaintiff's title as landlord—Maintainability of suit. In a previous suit, brought in 1890, plaintiff had sued for the recovery of certain land which he alleged to have been let verbally to the defendants in 1886. Defendants denied the verbal letting, and pleaded that they held the land from plaintiff's predecessor under a written agreement of 1876. The Court passed a decree in plaintiff's favour, holding that the lease under the written agreement had expired prior to 1886, and that the subsequent enjoyment of the land was under a verbal agreement. No steps were taken to execute that decree. Plaintiff now sued defendants for the recovery of the same land, together with arrears of rent basing his claim on the same written agreement of 1876, and also on his title as owner thereof. The District Court held the claim on the written agreement to be res judicata, and that plaintiff could not now

sue upon his title, as that should have been made a ground of attack in the former suit. On appeal to the High Court:—Held, that, inasmuch as plaintiff's title as landlord was recognised in the suit of 1890, the defendants could not have acquired a prescriptive title as against him in 1898, when the present suit was filed; and that plaintiff was therefore entitled to recover the land upon his title independently of any letting by him to the defendants. That the claim for arrears of rent under the old written agreement was res judicata by reason of the former suit, but that plaintiff's omission to sue on the strength of his general title in the former suit was no bar to the present suit, inasmuch as his title as landlord had never been disputed. *Zamorin of Calicut v. 8. ——— Dismissal of suit for proprietary right to land—Subsequent suit for possession of portion of same land as planter of the trees on it. The dismissal of a suit in which the plaintiff had claimed a proprietary title in certain land held not to bar a subsequent suit in which he prayed for a declaration that, as planter of the trees and constructor of a tank in a garden forming a portion of the land, he was entitled to retain possession of the garden and tank. *GOSHAIN JUGOOPOOREE v. 9. ——— Dismissal of suit on demise as continuation of prior demise—Subsequent suit on prior demise. In 1883 plaintiff sued to recover certain land from the defendant on a demise of 1856 which he alleged was a renewal of a prior demise of 1835. The suit was dismissed on the ground that the demise of 1856 was not proved. Plaintiff then sued to recover the same land on the demise of 1835 and on title. Held, that the decree in the former suit was no bar to this suit. KANDUNNI v. KATTAMMA

I. L. R. 9 Mad. 251

10. ——— Suit for land based on plaintiff's title—Prior suit alleging that defendants held on lease from plaintiff. In a previous suit in which plaintiff had been a party, it had been attempted to assert plaintiff's title to a piece of land occupied by the defendants by proving that they held the same by virtue of an alleged specific lease. The Court had held that no such lease had been executed. Plaintiff now claimed the land as belonging to his devasom, and sued to recover it on the strength of his title; he also set up the alleged lease once more. Held, that, though the question of the validity of the lease was res judicata, plaintiff was at liberty to sue also on the strength of his title, independently of the lease, and he was not estopped from so suing by the fact that the former suit had been based on the lease alone. If the relation of landlord and tenant were shown to have existed prior to the specific lease sued upon, it was for the tenant to prove that such relation had ceased to exist. In the absence of such proof, the relation would be presumed to continue, and the tenant's

11. — Suit for same property on different cause of action—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 2. The plaintiff sued to recover certain land, on the ground that he had been forcibly dispossessed of it by the defendant. As the plaintiff did not prove the alleged dispossession, his claim was rejected, but the Court suggested that he might recover in a fresh suit, treating the defendant as a trustee, and offering to make certain payments to him. The plaintiff then filed a fresh suit, framing it in the manner indicated by the Court. Held, that the latter suit, being based on a different cause of action from the former, was not barred, and that the question at issue between the parties was not res judicata. BISTO SHANKAR PATIL v. 12. — Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 2—Decision as to nature of document. In 1864 the original plaintiff, L, as heir of F, brought a suit against J (the guardian of F), A, B, and C, to recover a piece of land. The suit was rejected, as it was proved that (though the plaintiff was the heir of F) F's guardian had mortgaged the land for necessary purposes to C, the two defendants A and B being merely tenants of C. The plaintiff then sued C for redemption of the mortgaged premises. Held, that the second suit was not barred under s. 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held, also, that the fact of the document under which C held the land being described in the Court's judgment in the earlier suit as an instrument of sale was not conclusive in the second suit as to the real nature of the instrument. VALLABH BHULA v. a certain document has been held to be genuine between a third person as plaintiff and the present plaintiff and present principal defendant as defendants, was held to be conclusive in this suit on the point of authenticity of the document, though not a res judicata under s. 2, Act VIII of 1859, in other respects. KALLY PERSAD SEIN CHOWDHRY v. 15. — Sanction for forgery in respect of document in another suit. A former decision in a civil suit in which the issue was the genuineness or otherwise of a kabuliati, and the Court held that it was not genuine, but added (as an obiter dictum) that the pottah produced by the other side was authentic, does not bar the jurisdiction of a Civil Court in sanctioning a commitment for forgery in respect of the pottah. JUGGUT MISSER v. 16. — Subsequent suit in which same question arose. Where a Court in a former suit against the present plaintiffs to set aside a mortgage decided that the mortgage as to a certain share of the property was invalid, although it was not a matter for adjudication then before the Court:—Held, that that decision was no bar to a subsequent suit for recovery of the mortgage-debts as to that share, and that the question of the genuineness or otherwise of the mortgage by defendants to plaintiffs was open to be decided on the merits. BUSTEE RAM v. NEWAZ SINGH

17. — Decision as to validity of document—Matter in issue—Defence not relied on. A suit was brought by A to recover property, in which, on appeal to the Privy Council, two questions arose, viz., whether the property was to pass as divided or undivided property, and whether such property was conveyed away to A's father by a deed of testamentary disposition. The lower Court had decided only the latter point, and the Privy Council remanded the case for determination of the former point. On a second appeal to the Privy Council, that Committee were about to enter upon the question as to the validity of the testamentary paper, when A gave up the point that the paper was in any sense testamentary in its character, and disclaimed having any title under it as a testamentary devise, and the Privy Council therefore did not decide that question. Held, that a subsequent suit by A, in which he sought to recover the property by setting up the paper as a valid will and testament, was a suit instituted without bonâ fides, and could not be allowed to proceed, because the nature of the paper was in issue in the former suit, and what was in issue must be taken to have been decided by the judgment. RAGHOONADHA PERYA OODYA TAVER v. The question whether the sale was changed into a conditional sale or mortgage by an agreement entered into by him with the vendors on the same day that the deed of sale was executed, could not be raised by any of the parties to that suit or their representatives in a suit brought by R to obtain proprietary possession of the subject of the sale, in virtue of the deed and the decree. *DHUNDI v. 19. ———— Suit for possession under deed of gift—Subsequent suit by heir of donor to set aside deed of gift as invalid. G executed a deed of gift of his whole property in favour of J. J sued for possession and obtained a decree. On the death of G, his heir sued to set aside the deed of gift, alleging that, notwithstanding the decree, J did not obtain possession till after the death of G, and that the deed of gift was, under the Imames law, invalid. Held, that this might have been a good defence on the part of G to the suit brought against him by J, but that, after the decision of that suit, it was not open to G to dispute the title of J, nor was it now open for his heir to do so. *FURZUND ALI v. 20. ———— Deed of gift—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 2—Matter not determined in former suit—Suit on different cause of action. M brought a suit to obtain her share of the entire property of A, her deceased father. It was pleaded, with respect to a certain portion of the property, that A, had made it over by parol gift to his minor son. The case came before the High Court on special appeal, when it was contended on behalf of M, the appellant, that the gift was not proved, and that some portion of the property was “mush’a” (undivided), and the gift in regard to it invalid. The High Court refused to allow the last plea, which had not been taken in the Court of first instance, to be taken in appeal, the point raised being one of fact, and, as the gift had been established by evidence, dismissed the appeal. F, the purchaser of the rights and interests in A’s estate of W, a defendant in the suit brought a suit against his vendor, M, and the guardian of the minor, to obtain possession of the property conveyed by the sale in which property affected by the gift was included, and claimed the setting aside of the gift because a portion of the property conveyed by it was undivided. Held, that his suit was not barred by s. 2 of Act VIII of 1859. IMAMAN v. FAZUL KARIM 7 N. W. 251

21. ———— Suit to compel execution of release from document—Suit to declare document executed for nominal purpose. On 23rd March 1878 plaintiff executed to defendant a document purporting to be a deed of gift. In 1886 plaintiff sued to cancel the document, alleging that defendant on 11th May 1881 had agreed to execute release, but had not done so; that suit was dismissed for non-payment of duty due under the Court Fees Act. The plaintiff now sued in 1887 for a declaration that the document “was executed for nominal purposes and was not intended to take effect.” Held, that, since the cause of action in the suits of 1886 and 1887 were not the same, the claim in the latter suit was not res judicata. NAGATHAL v. PONNUSAMI . I. L. R. 13 Mad. 44

22. ———— Suit for same object on different cause of action—Decision in former suit. Plaintiff, claiming as grandson of one S M, the only undivided brother of S, sought to recover half of the village sold by S to first defendant’s father in 1885; the village having been (as alleged) family property, and sold without the consent of plaintiff’s father, who succeeded his father S M, and not for family purposes. In a former suit (No. 3 of 1855), brought by the plaintiff’s father against S and R, the father of the present first defendant, and the present second defendant the paternal nephew of the first defendant, for possession of the whole of the family property belonging to him and S as co-parceners, and to rescind the sale to R, the plaintiff stated, amongst other things, that S was imbecile; and that the sale-deed was obtained by taking a fraudulent advantage of his imbecility, and that it was invalid as being made without plaintiff’s consent. The Court decided that S was “both physically and mentally qualified to manage and legally competent to deal with the estate, supposing it to be undivided, to the extent of his own share,” and dismissed the suit. In 1862 the plaintiff again sued the present defendant for the whole of the village on the same ground of imbecility and fraud. The Civil Court decided that the suit was barred by the decree in the first suit, and on appeal the decree was affirmed. Held, that the present cause of action—namely, the plaintiff’s right as to co-parcener to a moiety of the property and the invalidity of the instrument of sale to pass that right to the defendant—was not res judicata. *CHINNIYA MUDALI v. 23. ———— Former suit on same cause of action—Suits stating different grounds for right to succeed to estate. Plaintiff sued to recover a zamindari from his step-brother, alleging that the zamindari was hereditary property belonging to the family, the succession thereto being governed by the law of primogeniture; that his father died in 1859, leaving the plaintiff, defendant, and another, his sons, the former by the first wife, and the latter two by the second wife; and that the defendant (respondent) unlawfully enjoyed the estate, while plaintiff as the eldest son, had a legal claim thereto. In defence it was pleaded that the claim was res judicata by the decree in a suit which was brought by plaintiff to obtain declaration of his status as the son of his father's pattaba stri, or royal wife, in which suit the plaintiff's father was first defendant, and defendant's mother was second defendant, and wherein they both denied that plaintiff was son of the pattaba stri and affirmed that second defendant was first defendant's first wife, and that her sons were preferential heirs to the zamindari. Among the points recorded was for "plaintiff to prove his status and right as alleged," and that issue was set down for defendants to rebut. The Judge disbelieved that plaintiff was the son of his father's first wife, and added, "Plaintiff further pleads that he is the eldest son, a position not denied, but one which cannot confer on him the status he now claims." The Judge decided that plaintiff had failed to prove that his mother was the pattaba stri, and that he was heir to the exclusion of second defendant's sons. On appeal to the Sudder Adawlat, the decree below was confirmed and the Court made the following observation: "It has been attempted at the hearing of the appeal to maintain the plaintiff's right to succeed as being the eldest son. This, however, was not the position taken in the Court below, where the succession was allowed to depend on another circumstance,—namely, the mother being the pattaba stri; and the Court therefore held the argument to be an inadmissible one." Held, on appeal, that the present suit was barred by res judicata, a different causa to the former not having been adduced. To the judgment in Chinnaya Mudali v. Venkata Pillai, 3 Mad. 326, after the words in page 334, "in favour of the defendant all the objective grounds of the decision which have led to the dismissal of the suit," the following ought to be added: "and without the establishment of which the suit could not have been logically or legally dismissed." *MUTHUMADEVA NAIK v. 24. ——— Suit for enhancement of rent—Subsequent suit for admitted rent. A suit for enhanced rent after notice having been dismissed on appeal, plaintiff sued to recover rent for the same year at the rate admitted by the defendant in the former suit. Held, that the cause of action in the subsequent suit was not the same as in the former, and that the law of res judicata did not apply in bar. *KHEDARONISSA BEEBEE v. B died in 1868, and in 1872 A, who used to collect the rents on behalf of B, brought a suit against one of the raiyats for the rent of the 11 annas. An issue having been raised as to the extent of A's share omitting that of B, it was decided to be 7 annas only and he got a decree accordingly. In a subsequent

26. ——— Claim as heir to property as joint and undivided—Subsequent claim as reversioner on death of widow. A, a brother's son, in 1847, claimed, on the ground that he had title as heir to the moiety of the estate, prior to the other brother's widow, on the plea that it was joint and undivided, and that suit was dismissed. In a subsequent suit accepting the decision of 1847, and regarding the widow's title to be prior to his, and as holding a life-interest in the whole estate before him, A claimed as heir next in reversion after the widow, regarding her property as separate, with a view to a declaration of his right as such heir to have a certain alienation by the widow (alleged by him to be illegal under Hindu law) set aside. Held, that the two cases and causes of action were essentially different. SUNKUR DYAL SINGH v. PURMESSUR DYAL SINGH

27. ——— Dismissal of former suit to set aside assignments—Subsequent suit for possession by reversioner. C, the reversioner expectant in the life-interest of a Hindu widow, instituted a suit in her life-time to set aside sales of the estate. It had first been sold in execution of a decree against the widow and purchased by A, and then for arrears of revenue due by A, and had been purchased by B; but this suit was dismissed under Act I of 1845, s. 24, on the ground that more than a year had elapsed since the sale for arrears of revenue. After the death of the widow, the reversioner sued B for recovery for possession of the lands. Held, that the plaintiff was not barred by the dismissal of the suit instituted in the life-time of the widow: the object of that suit being to set aside the assignment of the widow's interest, and not for the assertion of the plaintiff's right to the reversion. *DOORGA CHURN v. 28. ——— Suit to set aside alienation by widow—Subsequent suit to recover property as reversioner. A widow (a life-tenant of an ancestral estate), having executed an ikrar transferring a share to N, her granddaughter, afterwards sued to set it aside on the ground that N had not conformed to its terms. While the suit was in the appeal stage, the widow died, and her reversioner applied to be made, and was admitted, as, her kaem mukam, to carry on the appeal on her behalf. He afterwards sued to recover possession of the share as reversioner, alleging that the succession opened out to him on the death of the widow. Held, that the causes of action in the two suits were different, and that it was not necessary for the reversioner, when he took up the widow's case in its appeal stage, to disclose his title and claim as reversioner as he was not competent then to introduce any pleas arising out of a new state of facts not existing when the suit was instituted. DEORANEL KOOWAR v. INDURJEET KOOWAR . . . 12 W. R. 234

29. ——— Dismissal of suit to establish plaintiff's adoption—Civil Procedure Code, s. 13—Representation of estate by Hindu widow—Decree in favour of widow—Admission by widow subsequent to decree. In 1877, S, claiming to be the adopted son of M, sued A, the widow of M, to recover his estate. A denied the adoption. S failing to adduce any evidence, the suit was dismissed under s. 158 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1877. In 1882, by an agreement made between A and S, A acknowledged the title of S, as adopted son of M. A having died, a suit was brought against S by a reversioner of M to recover the estate of M. Held, that S was estopped by the decree in the former suit from setting up his claim as adopted son against the plaintiff, and that the subsequent agreement between A and S did not affect plaintiff's right. *ARUNACHALA v. 30. ——— Second suit for restitution of conjugal rights—Decree not executed—Subsequent voluntary cohabitation followed again by desertion—Satisfaction of decree—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 13—Husband and wife. Plaintiff obtained a decree against his wife for restitution of conjugal rights in 1885, which was never executed. In 1887, however, she returned to his house, and stayed with him for two months. She afterwards deserted him again. Thereupon the plaintiff filed a second suit for restitution of conjugal rights. Held, that the suit was not barred under s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882). A second withdrawal from cohabitation constitutes a fresh cause of action. KESHAVALAL GIRDHARLAL v. BAI PARVATI . . . I. L. R. 18 Bom. 327

the deed of sale, not being registered, could not be received in evidence, and consequently I's right to sue on such bond failed. I, having procured the execution of a fresh deed of sale and caused it to be registered, brought a second suit on such bond in virtue of such deed of sale, claiming as before. Held, that the second suit was not barred by the provisions of s. 13 of Act X of 1877. *ISHRI DAT v. 35. ——— Suit for sum due on mortgage—Decisions in former suit for interest—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 13—Sale of mortgaged property in execution of decree. Certain immovable property was mortgaged to R and then sold to N. It was then brought to sale in execution of a decree against N and was purchased by H. The balance of the sale-proceeds after satisfaction of that decree was paid to N. Under the terms of the mortgage to R, interest on the principal amount was payable annually and its payment was charged on the property as well as the payment of the principal amount. The mortgagors having failed to pay the interest annually, R in 1875 sued them and N and H to recover the interest due. It was decided in that suit that N was primarily and personally liable for the interest then due on the mortgage, as he had received the sale-proceeds of the property, and that the property was only liable in case he failed to satisfy the claim. N subsequently paid into Court the sale-proceeds he had received, and R was paid the same. In 1878 R again sued same persons for interest, and again N was declared primarily and personally liable, on the ground that he had not at once made over the sale-proceeds to R. In 1880 R sued the same persons to recover the principal amount and interest due on the mortgage, by the sale of the mortgaged property. Held, that, whatever might have been the rights and relations of the parties so long as any portion of the sale-proceeds remained with N, their position towards him assumed an entirely different character when once he had discharged himself of those moneys, and with this change in the situation the ratio decidendi of the suits of 1875 and 1878 no longer existed, and therefore the decisions in those suits did not preclude R from bringing a suit to recover the principal and

The plaintiffs, having repurchased the equity of redemption from A B, brought a second suit to redeem the lands in the defendants' possession. Held, that the question whether the equity of redemption of the lands in suit had been sold to A B was res judicata and could not be reopened by the defendants on the ground that the plaintiffs were litigating under a different title in the

41. ——— Foreclosure in the Central Provinces. By a bond, dated 10th February 1857, a certain village was mortgaged by one G to the appellants and their father as security for a loan; the bond providing that, "if I fail to pay the money as stipulated, I and my heirs shall, without objection, cause the settlement of the said village to be made with you." The interest of G in the village was described as that of a malguzar, and his proprietary right therein was declared by the revenue authorities shortly after the execution of the mortgage; but his payments of revenue being in arrear, the Board of Revenue granted a lease of the village for ten years to the appellant's father. The mortgagees in a suit on the bond obtained the following decree on 3rd November 1860: "As the defendant acknowledges the plaintiff's claim, it is ordered that a decree be given to the plaintiffs for principal and interest and costs against the defendant and the mortgaged property." In proceedings in the Civil Court taken under this decree, the mortgagees asked for possession of the village, and obtained, on 17th July 1862, an order, in pursuance of which they were put in possession, an appeal by G being rejected. G took various steps to recover possession of the mortgaged property, or a declaration of his proprietary interest therein, but failed in his endeavours; an application for a grant of the proprietary right in the village, and an appeal from an order cancelling his pottah, being rejected by the revenue authorities on 8th December 1864 and 27th July 1865, respectively; and on 12th August 1867, G conveyed the village by deed of sale to the respondents. In a suit brought by them to redeem the mortgage and obtain possession of the property:—Held, that the suit was not barred by the order of the Civil Court of 17th July 1862, nor had the orders of the revenue officers of 8th December 1864 and 27th July 1865 effected such a transfer of any right which G might have had to the appellants as to render the sale to the respondents invalid. *GOKULDAS v. 44. ————— Conditional decree—Failure of mortgagor to pay in accordance with decree—Subsequent suit for redemption—Civil Procedure Code, s. 13—Foreclosure—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 93. In a suit for redemption of a usufructuary mortgage, a decree for redemption was passed conditional upon the plaintiff paying the defendants, within a time specified, a sum which was found still due to the latter, and the decree provided that, if such sum were not paid within the time specified, the suit should stand dismissed. The plaintiff failed to pay, and the suit according lystood dismissed. Subsequently he again sued for redemption, alleging that the mortgage-debt had now been satisfied from the usufruct. Held, having regard to the distinction between simple and usufructuary mortgages, that the decree in the former suit only decided that, in order to redeem and get possession of the property, the mortgagor must pay the sum then found to be due by him to the mortgagee, and did not operate as res judicata so as to bar a second suit for redemption, when, after further enjoyment of the profits by the mortgagee, the mortgagor could say that the debt had now become satisfied from the usufruct. Having regard to s. 93 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), in a suit brought by a usufructuary mortgagor for possession on the ground that the mortgage-debt has been satisfied from the usufruct, and in which the plaintiff is ordered to pay something because the debt has not been satisfied as alleged, the decree passed against such a mortgagor for non-payment has not the effect of foreclosing him from all time from redeeming the property. 48. ————— Ejectment suit by mortgagor treated as suit for redemption—Subsequent suit for redemption—Civil Procedure Code ss. 12, 13. A zamindar mortgaged his estate under four successive instruments to the same creditor who was subsequently placed in possession. On the death of the mortgagor, his son, claiming to have succeeded by the law of primogeniture to the zamindari as an impartible estate, sued to eject the mortgagee; and a decree was passed declaring what was the sum due on a date named and how far it was binding on the estate, and decreeing that, on payment of what might be due on taking an account, the mortgagee should give up possession. Many years later the zamindar applied to the Court to carry out this decree, and a like application was put in by the present plaintiff to whom seven-eighths of the equity of redemption had been assigned. Both of these applications were rejected in the High Court as barred by limitation, and the applicants applied for leave to appeal to the Privy Council against the order of the High Court. Meanwhile the plaintiff brought the present suit to redeem the mortgages of the late zamindar. Held, (i) that the suit was not barred under Civil Procedure Code, s. 12 by reason of the pendency of the application for leave to appeal to the Privy Council; (ii) that, as there was no decree for foreclosure passed in the previous suit which had been treated as a suit for redemption, the present suit was not precluded by the decree therein;

50. — Omission to direct foreclosure—Neglect to redeem—Second suit to redeem—Hindu family—Suit by manager in his own name—Representative character—Practice—Parties—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 50. In 1856 V, a member of an undivided Hindu family, sued the defendants, and obtained a decree for the redemption of certain immoveable property, but the decree was never executed. At the date of that suit V was the manager of the family, consisting of himself and the plaintiff N who was then a minor. The decree did not provide for the foreclosure of the mortgage in the event of V failing to redeem. In 1878 N brought another suit to redeem the same property. The lower Court held that, as the former decree did not direct foreclosure, the relation of mortgagor and mortgagee continued between the parties, and that the plaintiff's suit was not barred by the former decree. The defendant appealed. Held (PINHEY, J., dissentiente), reversing the decree of the lower Court, that the plaintiff's suit was barred. A decree for redemption on the default of the decree-holder to pay the money declared to be due within the time fixed by the decree or if none be fixed, within the time allowed by the law for the execution of the decree, operates as a judg-

58. ————— Suit for khas possession. The plaintiffs, as talukhdars, brought a suit against their tenant M for recovery of rent at enhanced rates of land held by him as to two cottahs of which he denied that they were part of his holding, but alleged that they were part of the lakhiraj holding of one H, and H intervened in that suit and claimed the two cottahs as lakhiraj. The result of that suit was that the rent was assessed on the land admitted by M to be in his possession, excluding the two cottahs. The plaintiffs then brought a suit against H for a declaration that these two cottahs were their mal lands, and obtained a decree simply declaring their mal rights over the land in dispute. In a suit brought by the plaintiffs against H, after serving him with notice to quit, for recovery of the khas possession of the two cottahs with mesne profits, and praying that he might be ordered to remove a mud house erected by him on the land, the defence was that, as the plaintiffs had already claimed khas possession and obtained a decree simply declaring their right to receive rent, the suit was barred, and that, as H had been twenty years in possession and had erected a house without any opposition from the plaintiffs, they had no right now to sue for khas possession. Held, that the suit was not barred by s. 2, Act VIII of 1859, and the plaintiffs were entitled to a decree for khas possession. ESHAN CHUNDER GHOSE v. HURRISH CHUNDER BANERJEE 10 B. L. R. In February 1879 R and P, B, and S joined in suing N for a declaration of their proprietary right to two-thirds of the estate and to have the deed of gift set aside. The Court trying this suit treated it as one for a mere declaration of right and dismissed it with reference to the provisions of s. 42 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, on the ground that the plaintiffs had omitted to sue for possession although they were not in possession and were able to sue for it. In November 1879 R and P, B, and S again joined in suing N. In this suit they claimed possession of two-thirds of the estate and to have the deed of gift set aside. executing this decree." The obligee applied in execution of such decree to recover, by the sale of such property, which had passed into the hands of third parties after the passing of such decree, instalments which had become due after the passing of such decree, and had not been paid. Such execution having been refused on the ground that such decree was a money-decree, the obligee brought a second suit upon such bond to recover such instalments by the enforcement of the lien therein created on such property. Held, that, although the enforcement of such lien was claimed in the former suit, yet, inasmuch as it was very questionable whether the Court was competent to grant the second relief claimed in that suit, viz., a declaration of right to recover instalments which were not due in execution of a decree for instalments which were due, and the claim in the second suit was not the same as that in the former suit, the plaintiff asking for instalments said to be actually due, and not for a declaratory decree for instalments not due, the second suit was not barred by s. 13 of Act X of 1877. UMRAO LAL v. In 1861 a suit brought by this elder son against his father and brother to obtain a declaration of his right to a partition of the ancestral estate was dismissed, on the ground that he had no right in his father's lifetime to compel a partition of moveables; and that, as to the immoveables, the claim failed, because they were situate beyond the jurisdiction of the Court. In a suit by the elder son against his brother after the father's death for a share of the property on the ground that it was ancestral estate:—Held, that this suit was not barred under Act VIII of 1859, s. 2, the proceedings of 1861 not having amounted to an adjudication between the brothers as to their rights in the estate arising on their father's death. LAKSHMAN DADA NAIK v. In 1869 B mortgaged his share to A under a mortgage-deed drawn up in the English form. Later on, in 1869, A brought a suit against B for partition, and in 1870 obtained a decree appointing a commissioner of partition and directing the partition. No return was made to this commission, and no actual partition was come to. In 1873 A obtained a decree for an account, and for payment, or in default, for sale of the property. In 1878 B's share was put up for sale, and purchased by C, and C was put into possession. In 1881 C brought a suit against A for partition. Held, that the decree obtained by A in 1873 put an end to B's right to redeem, unless he paid the amount found due against him, and therefore at the time of the sale to C, B's right to redeem had ceased to exist and the property was no longer subject to partition under the decree of 1870, and therefore the partition asked for under the suit of 1881 could be granted KIRTY CHUNDER MITTER v. 69. ————— Decree in former suit for partition—Partial and general partition—Account. In a previous suit between the plaintiff and the defendant, the plaintiff alleged that there had been a partition of the family property into two parcels, and under a deed of partition drawn up at the time claimed one of these parcels. The deed being held invalid, the suit was rejected, with liberty to the plaintiff to sue for a general partition. In the second suit the plaintiff prayed for a general partition as a member of an undivided Hindu family. Held, that the second suit was not res judicata; for, although the plaintiff might in the first suit have made an alternative case and prayed for a general partition in case he failed to establish the previous partition which he alleged, yet it could not be said that he ought to have done so. Held, also, that in the case of joint enjoyment by the members of the whole family, or enjoyment by different members of different portions of the family property, the Court will not, except under special circumstances, order an account to be taken of past transactions, but will make division of the property actually existing at the date of partition. Lakshman Dada Naik v. I, II. In 1874 the plaintiffs' father filed a suit against the defendants for partition of joint family property. The subject-matter of the suit was referred to arbitration out of Court. The arbitrators made an award to the effect that partition should be postponed till the family debts were paid off. The award was accepted by all the sharers, and so the plaintiffs' father withdrew his suit. In 1880 the debts were paid off. Thereupon the plaintiffs' father demanded partition, but was refused. He therefore filed a partition suit in 1883 against the defendants. In his plaint he made no mention of the award of 1874 but relied on his right as a co-parcener to enforce partition. After the settlement of issues, he applied for amendment of the plaint, so as to include his claim on the award. The Court refused the amendment, on the ground that it would materially alter the character of the suit, and dismissed the suit, as barred under s. 373 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882). Against this decision plaintiffs' father did not appeal. In 1884 the plaintiffs filed the present suit for partition, relying expressly on their title under the award of 1874. Held, that the suit was not barred by the plea of res judicata. *THAKORE BECHARJI RANAJI v. He afterwards sued the defendant for wasilat from the date of the alleged dispossession to the date of the plaint. Held, that wasilat having been claimed in the previous plaint for that period, and there having been an adjudication upon his claim for wasilat and no evidence that wasilat was withheld for the period for which it was now claimed, through inadvertence or by mistake, the case was within Act VIII of 1859, s. 2, excluding from the jurisdiction of the Court causes of action "which shall have been heard and determined by a Court of competent jurisdiction to a former suit between the same parties." *LUTEEOFONISSA BIBEE v. The genuineness of the alleged leases was put in issue in that suit, and was decided by the Subordinate Judge in favour of the plaintiffs, who accordingly obtained a decree. On appeal the District Judge reversed that decree, being of opinion that the alleged leases were not proved. In 1874 the plaintiffs brought the present suit to eject the defendants. In this suit the plaintiffs sued simply as owners, and alleged that the defendants were in occupation as tenants paying rent to the plaintiffs, and that they (the defendants) had refused to give up possession. Held (MELVILL, J., dissentiente), that the plaintiffs were not barred by the judgment in the former suit. The fact of both the suits being against the defendants as tenants of the plaintiffs did not imply that the suits were on the same cause of action. The term "tenancy" may be applied to a great many different relations between the occupier and the owner of property, agreeing perhaps only in the single circumstance of a holding by the one of the property of the other. The test in each case is not whether a tenancy has in both suits been sued on, but whether the particular contract or relation put forward in the first case was the same specific contract sued on in the second. A cause of action reduced to the concrete form in a contest between individuals implied a specific right and a specific infringement of the right; and a judgment that one such specific right had not been made out was not a trial and determination of a cause of action resting on another specific right. The specific rights on which the plaintiffs relied in the two suits were different, and would have to be proved by different evidence. GIRDHAR MANORDAS v. DAYABHAI KALABHAI . . . I. L. A complainant is bound to bring forward in this suit all the grounds of origin of his right. 87. ———— Subsequent suit on different grounds for same property—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 2—Act XXIII of 1861, s. 11. On the 30th June 1855 S, a Lingayat priest, died possessed of moveable and immoveable property. The right of succession to it being disputed, the District Judge placed it under the management of the nazir, under Bombay Regulation VIII of 1827, s. 9. In 1869, B, representing himself as the disciple of S, and claiming as such to be entitled to the whole of the property left by S, brought a suit (No. 962 of 1869) against the defendant to establish his right to the property in question, and to recover possession of it. The suit was compromised by an agreement, upon which the Court passed a decree on the 23rd March 1870, dividing the property of S in certain shares between B and the defendant. When B and the defendant applied for possession of the property in execution of this decree, the nazir, who had it in his charge, resisted them. The execution-proceedings dropped in consequence of the death of B. The plaintiff thereupon (as a disciple of B deceased) and the defendant sued the nazir separately, each claiming the whole property of S. The plaintiff's suit was rejected on the ground that he failed to prove himself the disciple of B. In that suit the plaintiff produced neither the compromise made between B and the defendant, nor the decree passed on it in suit No. 962 of 1869. The defendant succeeded in his suit, and obtained possession of the whole property. The plaintiff then sued, as the disciple of B, to recover from the defendant the portion of the property of S which fell to the share of B according to the compromise on which the decree in suit No. 962 of 1869 was made. Held by WEST, J., that the suit was barred, first, because the plaintiff had been judicially pronounced not to be the disciple of B in his suit against the nazir to which the defendant was a party as the true successor or primâ facie successor represented by the nazir in that suit. It was not open to those who had as heirs sued the official representative of an estate, and failed, to sue the owner, when ascertained, a second time on the same right. Secondly, because the plaintiff, in his suit against the nazir, was bound to bring forward every ground on which he could claim the property; and if the compromise effected by B was such a ground, that compromise and the decree founded on it ought to have been brought forward to sustain the claim, as it would have shut out a ground of defence consisting of the defendant's superior right. As the plaintiff omitted to do so, the more recent decree, which pronounced him not entitled to any part of the property of S, superseded the earlier one, which ineffectually awarded B a moiety of that property as against that person not in possession; and while that decree was unreversed, another decree could not be made awarding to the same plaintiff one-half of the same property in the same right as against the defendant whom the nazir represented in the earlier suit. Held by PINHEY, J., that the property claimed in the present suit had been specifically awarded to B by the decree of the 23rd March 1870, and if that decree were not time barred, B or his legal representative could obtain possession by taking out execution-proceedings on that decree. The present suit therefore was barred alike by s. 2 of Act VIII of 1859 and s. 11 of Act XXIII of 1861, and the fact that execution of the decree in suit No. 962 of 1869 was time-barred did not confer on B or any legal heir of his a new right to sue for the estate of S or any part of it. 88. ——— Suit for same property on different cause of action—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 2. In 1856 the plaintiff, the zamindar of Tarla (who had attained his majority in 1853), instituted suits for the recovery of the two villages claimed in the present suit on the ground that the villages were jera-yati, and had been temporarily alienated, and he claimed a right of resumption. It was decided that the villages had formed a mokasa jaghir from a date prior to that of the permanent settlement, and that, as they did not constitute a portion of the assets of the zamindari at the date of the settlement, there was no right of resumption. Pending those suits, an order was issued by Government which plaintiff construed as a transfer to him of the Government right in the villages, and he founded the present suit upon the lapse of the mokasa to Government, and the order transferring the right to him:—Held, that the present suit was not res judicata. This suit being dismissed on the merits, he instituted another suit, in which he craved a bynamah, or certificate of sale. Held, that the second suit was brought for the same causes and subject-matter as the first, and that the plaintiff was therefore precluded by the dismissal of the first suit from obtaining it. 92. ——— Causes of action identical—Title—Test for determination as to res judicata. The plaintiff purchased certain lands from the heirs of a Mussalman proprietor; the defendant M purchased other lands of the same estate from their co-heirs. In 1864 the plaintiff sued to have the sale to the defendant M set aside. In the course of the suit, however, he admitted that he was in possession of all the lands he had brought, and his claim was therefore rejected. In 1869 the plaintiff brought a suit, in the form of a partition-suit, praying for demarcation of the lands bought by the defendant M and himself. It was treated as substantially an ejectment suit, and rejected on the same grounds as the first suit, namely, his admission as above stated. In appeal to the High Court it was urged by the plaintiff that, since the date of his admission in the first suit some of his tenants had attorned to the defendant M, and thus deprived him of part of his land; but as this allegation had not been made in his plaint, the Court refused to allow the point to be raised. The present suit was founded on the attornment of plaintiff's tenants to the defendant M, alleged to have been made in 1868. The plaintiff contended that, although the cause of action was in existence when the second suit was brought in 1869, yet that it had not been adjudicated upon, and that in appeal he had been prevented from arguing it. Held, that the plaintiff was stopped. The causes of action in the second and third suit were identical. Having striven to establish his title by one means and failed, the plaintiff could not establish the same title by other means which were equally at his command when the previous suit was instituted and which were so connected with the grounds on which he in that suit relied, that they ought to have been submitted together for the consideration of the Court. In determining whether a question is res judicata, the Court will have regard to the substance of the previous suit rather than its form. If the cause of action is based on a right identical in both suits, or on the same group of facts infringing that right, the second suit is barred. HASAM IBRAHIM v. MANCHARAM KALLIANDAS . I. L. But subsequently, owing to domestic quarrels, they lived separately, and the plaintiff was allowed by M a portion of the family property, under an agreement in writing. They were, however, joint and undivided in estate, and continued to be so until the death of M in 1865. In 1866 the plaintiff brought a suit on the agreement and obtained a decree against B, S, D, and R (a lessee of B) for the property mentioned in the agreement. In 1870 the plaintiff brought a second suit as heir of his father and brother, and claimed the whole of the ancestral property. Both the lower Courts rejected his claim as barred by the previous suit. Held, in special appeal by MELVILL and NANABHAI HARIDAS, J.J., that the claim was not barred, inasmuch as the former suit was brought on the agreement, while the latter was instituted to establish plaintiff's general rights as heir of his father and brother. SADU v. 94. ———— Suit on a family arrangement—Second suit for the same subject-matter as co-sharers—Causes of action. The defendant's great-grandfather was uncle of one B H, who was the great-grandfather of the plaintiffs, and they (i.e., the defendant's great-grandfather and his nephew B H) were entitled in equal half shares to a certain vatan property. The defendant and his brothers now represented the former, and were entitled to his half share, and the plaintiffs represented the latter, and were entitled to his half share. The plaintiffs' father, B R, lived with the defendant and the defendant's brothers, M and K, as members of an undivided family up to the year 1845, in which year the plaintiffs' father, B R, being then absent from the village, the defendant's brothers, M and K, executed a deed of partition whereby they divided the ancestral property into two equal shares, one-half of which the plaintiffs' father was to receive, the other half going to the defendant and his brothers. The deed, among other recitals, contained a clause to the effect that the plaintiff's father being then absent from the village, the defendant's brothers would manage his share during his absence, and on his return hand the same over to him on his paying the expenses incurred by them in such management. In 1873 the plaintiffs' undivided brother brought a suit against the defendant and others on an agreement alleged to have been executed between him (plaintiffs' brother) and the defendant and his brothers by which the said brothers had bound themselves to return one-third share to him (the plaintiffs' brother). This suit was dismissed as against the defendant, as he had not been a party to that agreement, and plaintiffs' brother was referred to a separate suit for partition against the defendant. The plaintiffs therefore now brought the present suit claiming their share in the vatan estate. The defendant (inter alia) contended that the suit was barred as res judicata by the former suit, that neither the plaintiffs nor their forefathers had enjoyed the property during the previous 150 years, and that the claim was barred by limitation. Both the lower Courts allowed the plaintiffs' claim. The defendant preferred a second appeal to the High Court. Held, confirming the decree of the lower Court, that the former suit having been brought on an alleged agreement, it did not bar the present suit, which was based on the plaintiffs' hereditary right to sue as members of the family. NILO RAMCHANDRA v. right among male heirs, and thereby sought to recover from her possession of the same lands, and alternatively to obtain a declaration that he was as such heir if then living, entitled to possession of them on her death, and that a deed executed by her alienating a portion of them was valid only for her life-time. Held, that the decision in the former suit that A was entitled to the lands as mother and heiress of her deceased son, was conclusive against B's claim or possession during her life-time, on the ground that she was not the heiress; but that the plaintiff was not barred by the adjudication in the former suit from setting up the family custom with the object of showing that on A's death he would be entitled to succeed her, if living, and was by reason of such heirship entitled to obtain a declaratory decree as to the deed of alienation. *DOORGA PERSAD SINGH v. Some years after the daughter's death, the plaintiff brought a suit to recover the property, on the ground that the deed of gift was a forgery, and that she was entitled to the property as heiress of her husband; but her suit was dismissed, the deed of gift being found to be genuine. 8. 2—Different cause of action. The plaintiffs had brought a former suit to recover possession of certain property which had been mortgaged to the defendants under a zur-i-peshgi lease, and obtained a decree for possession on their depositing the sum which the Court found to be due on the mortgage. The plaintiffs delayed applying for execution till four years after, when they alleged that the money had been paid off by the usufruct of the land. Their application having been refused they brought the present suit for possession, alleging that the debt had been discharged by the usufruct. Held, that the present cause of action within the meaning of Act VIII of 1859, s. 2, was a fresh cause of action as compared with the former one, which was for an adjudication of the state of the accounts between the parties up to a certain date, whereas the latter had reference to the accounts since that date.

ed; and on the 30th December 1871 a decree was again passed against D, in execution of which the same properties were attached on the 9th of August 1872, and purchased as the execution-sale on the 1st August 1874 by R. On the 14th February 1871, D had executed a solehnama and mortgage in favour of G, pledging, among other properties, X and Y as security for a loan made to him by G. D having made default in payment, G obtained a decree against him in terms on the solehnama on the 28th February 1871. Subsequently, D granted another mortgage of the same properties in favour of G. G sold his decree and mortgage to the plaintiff, who in execution of the decree attached properties X and Y. In these execution-proceedings R brought forward the fact of his purchase of the same properties in August 1874, and his claim was allowed, and the properties X and Y released from attachment on the 4th March 1876. The plaintiffs had, on the 8th March 1872, obtained a mortgage from D, on which they had obtained a decree on the 28th September 1874, in execution of which they had attached X and Y; but on R claiming them under his purchase in August 1874, an order was made on the 10th April 1875 releasing X and Y from attachment and in a suit by plaintiff to set aside that order, they failed as to properties X and Y, on the ground that those properties were not included in the mortgage of March 1872. In a subsequent suit brought by the plaintiffs against R and D to set aside the order of the 4th March 1876, and to have X and Y declared liable to be sold under the decree of the 28th February 1871:—Held, that the suit was not barred under s. 2 of Act VIII of 1859 by the decree in the previous suit, nor was it barred by s. 7 of the same Act. Held, also, that the purchase by R in August 1874 was subject to the mortgage to G of the 14th February 1871. 108. ——— Attachment, application to remove—Removal of attachment unknown to applicant—Failure of application—Second attachment—Second application to remove—New cause of action. The plaintiff, mortgagee in possession of certain property, applied for the removal of an attachment placed on it by the defendant in execution of a decree against a third party. In default of payment of Court-fees by the defendant, the attachment was removed, but in ignorance of this fact the plaintiff's application was proceeded with, and ultimately rejected. The plaintiff then brought a suit for a declaration of his right, but it was dismissed, on the ground that the attachment had already been removed. Subsequently the defendant placed a second attachment on the property, which the plaintiff again applied to remove. The defendant contended that the plaintiff's application was barred by the proceedings on the first attachment. Held, that the decision on the plaintiff's first application having no object existing on which to operate, the attachment having then been removed, it could not properly be regarded as res judicata at all, since no one was seriously interested in having it decided in a different way; and that supposing submission to that decision on the part of the plaintiff for a certain time could have given it a final effect, there had, as a matter of fact, been no such submission, the plaintiff having done all that was incumbent on him to get the summary inquiry and orders replaced by a formal trial and judgment; and that there was nothing therefore in these proceedings disentitling the defendant to oppose the second attachment. Held, also, that the second attachment, after the first had been removed, was a new and distinct act, giving rise to a new cause of action, or complaint, to the plaintiff, on which, in any case, he was entitled to a fresh inquiry and decision. *KASHINATH MORSHETH v. 109. ——— Suit for 'declaration' of title—Subsequent suit for possession—Application to remove attachment. B sold to J a turuf of which 3½ kanes were subsequently attached on a decree obtained by M. After objecting unsuccessfully to the attachment, J brought a suit against the auction-purchaser, joining B as a defendant, to have it declared that the 3½ kanes belonged to himself; but failed on the ground that he was holding it benami for B. Subsequently the auction-purchaser bought from B the rest of the talukh and sued her for possession. J got himself entered as a defendant under s. 73, Act VIII of 1859. Held, that there was no identity between the subjects of the two suits, and J's former suit for all that he was then entitled to sue for on the cause of action that he had on the attachment did not deprive him of his right to a fresh and independent judgment in the present case. Held, also, that the former judgment did not create an adjudication of the cause in the latter suit, and if evidence, it was not conclusive evidence or binding on the Judge. *RAM CHUNDER CHOWDHRY v. defendant pleaded, inter alia, that the suit was barred by res judicata, and that the suits decreed having been for rents of the years 1884 to 1887, the present suit brought in 1891 against the additional parties was barred by limitation. Held (per PRINSEP and GHOSE, JJ.), that the suit would lie, and neither the plea of limitation nor the bar of res judicata was applicable to it. Held (per PRINSEP, J.)—Ss. 278 to 283 of the Civil Procedure Code contemplate the liability of the property to sale, because of its being the property of the judgment-debtor or because it is liable to the decree passed against him as sued in a representative capacity; they do not contemplate a suit to establish the liability of third persons. *Nuthoo Lall Chowdhry v. 111. ——— Continuing contract—Suit for damages. A, on the 1st of February 1868, entered into a contract with B to supply him with straw for twelve months, the supplies to be sent as ordered daily. On the 12th of March B brought an action in the Small Cause Court against A for damages sustained by the plaintiff by reason of A's having failed to supply straw as agreed upon. The Judge decided the questions in issue (namely, of the factum of the contract and the authority of the person who executed it in A's behalf) in favour of B, and gave him a decree. On the 21st of April, a second suit was brought by B against A on the same contract. The claim was for damages sustained by the plaintiff by reason of A's having failed to supply straw as agreed from the 20th of February to the 17th April. That suit was dismissed, the Judge holding that the matter was res adjudicata, as he considered that the contract was an entire one, and that B had shown by suing on it for general damages, that he treated it as such, and had elected to rescind it. On the 9th of May a rule nisi was granted for a new trial, and on the 16th of May the rule was made absolute. On the 12th June, at the new trial, a decree was made in favour of B for so much of the damages claimed as had been sustained subsequently to the date of the decree of the 25th March. In an action brought by B on the same contract for damages sustained between the 17th April and the 16th of June, by reason of A having failed to supply straw according to the terms of the same contract, A denied that there had been any such contract and further pleaded that the matter of the contract, if there had been one, had already been adjudicated upon. A second suit was then brought by the judgment-creditor against both sharers, for the purpose of making the share of the co-sharers, who had not been previously sued, available to satisfy the defendant, and praying that the order releasing the property from attachment might be set aside. Held, that such a suit would lie, and would not be barred as res judicata. *NOBIN CHUNDRA ROY v. Before the hearing of the suit, B intervened, alleging that he had purchased a 6 annas share of the patni, and he was made a defendant. A then discovered that his co-sharers in the patni had sold their remaining shares to C. A applied to make C a party to the suit, and subsequently for leave to withdraw the suit. Both these applications were refused, and a decree for the arrears of rent was made. A, alleging that he did not wish to enforce the decree in the previous suit, then instituted this suit against C and the defendants in the former suit, for the purpose of recovering arrears of rent for the years 1874 and 1875 from C in proportion to the share purchased by him. Held, that the relative position of C to the defendants, whose share he had purchased, resembled that which exists between persons who have made themselves jointly and severally liable to perform a particular contract; and that, as a decree obtained against one of the joint and several promisors without satisfaction is no bar to a suit against another, the present suit was not barred by the decree obtained in the suit of 1877. *Nuthoo Lall Chowdhry v. where it was held that a regular suit will lie for a declaration that property mortgaged by a bond on which a simple money-decree had been obtained by the mortgagee under the provisions of Act XX of 1866 continues liable for the decree, though in the hands of a third person.

119. Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 2—Suit on mortgage-bond—Registration Act, 1866, s. 53. A, having a simple mortgage-bond, which was specially registered, obtained a summary decree under the provisions of the Registration Act, and attached the lands under mortgage to him. Prior to A's decree, these lands had been attached by other creditors, and subsequently to A's decree they were sold to B. After such sale A, under his attachment, sold the right, title, and interest of the mortgagor, which he himself purchased. A now sued the mortgagor and B to enforce his mortgage lien against the mortgaged properties. Held, that, according to the decision of Eman Momtazooddeen Mahomed v. Rajcoomar Dass, 14 B. L. enforce a mortgage lien. He obtained only a money-decree on the 26th of August 1871. D, who also held a decree against the same debtor, caused a portion of the property which had been included in the plaintiffs' mortgage to be brought to sale. B instituted a second suit on the 21st of January 1873 to enforce the lien. Held, in accordance with the opinions of TURNER, OLDFIELD, and BRODHRST, JJ. 121. Suit to enforce lien on mortgaged property—First and second mortgages. In 1870 M granted a certain person a lease of a certain zamindari share, for a term of years, at an annual rent, L, as the lessee's surety, hypothecating a mouzah called A as security for the payment of such rent. In 1871, L gave B a bond for the payment of certain moneys, hypothecating mouzah A as security for their payment. In 1872 and again in 1873, M obtained a decree in the Revenue Court against his lessee and L, his surety, for arrears of rent. In execution of the decree of 1872, M caused L's rights and interests in mouzah A to be put up for sale and purchased them himself. In 1874 B sued L and M to enforce his lien on mouzah A. M defended this suit on the ground that he was the holder of a prior lien on the property. The Court gave B a decree in 1875 holding that he was entitled to an order for the sale of the property, but that it would be competent to M to sue to enforce his lien, and that, when he did so, the purchaser under B's decree would have the option of discharging the first incumbrance. The property was accordingly put up for sale in execution of B's decree, and was purchased by B himself. In 1876 M sued L and B to enforce his lien on the property, claiming to recover by the sale thereof the amount of the arrears of rent awarded by the decrees of 1872 and 1873, together with the costs awarded him in the Revenue Court, and interest. Held, affirming the judgment of STURAT, C.J., that the decree of 1875 did not preclude M from claiming to enforce his lien on mouzah A, nor was his claim affected by the circumstance that he had brought to sale in execution of the decree of the Revenue Court the rights and interest of L in that mouzah. All that was then sold was the equity of redemption, which was sold to satisfy the money decree held by M. No doubt, the proceeds of the sale would, after satisfaction of the costs of the decree, go pro tanto to the satisfaction of the sums secured by the first incumbrance, but M, by selling in execution the mortgagor's equity of redemption, did not forego his incumbrance. Held, also, that M could not enforce his lien for the recovery of the costs incurred by him in the Revenue Courts, as the surety-bond did not provide for the payment of such costs; that he could enforce his lien for the recovery of interest, as that bond did provide for the payment of interest; and that the moneys realized by the sale of the equity of redemption of the property in the execution of the Revenue Court's decree of 1872 must be applied, in the first place, in satisfaction of the costs of the suit in which that decree was made, and then in satisfaction of the arrears sued for in that suit, or the balance of that arrear, and of the arrear sued for in the second suit, with interest at the rate agreed upon in the surety-bond from the date of the accrual of those arrears until realization. *BABULAL v. 122. — Suit for possession—Agreement not to appeal—Suit for possession in terms of agreement. A, having sued B for possession of a piece of land and obtained a decree for possession of portion only, entered into an agreement, by the terms of which he was to take a greater part of the land than he was entitled to under the decree upon the condition that he (A) should not prefer an appeal, and that, in the event of his doing so, the whole land claimed in the suit should become the property of B. In contravention of this agreement, A appealed and obtained a decree for possession of the entire piece of land, whereupon B instituted a suit claiming to have possession of the same in terms of the agreement. Held, that the agreement was valid, although its effect was practically to render the former suit inoperative, and further, that the previous suit between the parties was no bar to B's suit, a new cause of action having arisen upon the breach of the agreement. *JATI RAM TALUKHDAR v. 123. — Damages—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 13, 43. In September 1886 the plaintiff sued in a Munsif's Court certain defendants for possession of one bigha of land, and for damages for the cutting and carrying of certain paddy from such land on the 23rd December 1885. This suit was dismissed on the ground that no dis-possession had taken place, the plaintiff being referred to a Small Cause Court for his damages. No appeal was made against this decision. In March 1887 the plaintiff sued these defendants in the Munsif's Court for possession of 5 bighas 6 cottahs of land and for mesne profits, and obtained a decree for possession of 3 bighas 6 cottahs of land with mesne profits; possession of the one bigha, the subject of the suit of 1886, being included in the 3 bighas 6 cottahs decree. He subsequently sued the same defendants in a Small Cause Court for damages for the paddy cut and carried on the 23rd December 1885. Held, that such suit was not barred by either s. 13 or s. 43 of the Civil Procedure Code. *MAHABEER SINGH v. Prior to the cession of the town of Jhansi to the British Government, plaintiff had instituted a suit in the Subah's Court in the Gwalior State on a judgment of the British Court in Jhansi district. After the cession, the suit was made over for trial to the Court of the Assistant Commissioner of the Jhansi district. The suit was dismissed by the first Court as barred by s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure, but remanded by the lower Appellate Court for trial on the merits. Held, that the recital in Part II of Act XVII of 1886 shows that it was intended that suits pending in the Courts of the Gwalior State prior to the cession of the town of Jhansi to the British Government should be continued in the Courts of the Jhansi district after the cession thereof; therefore the present suit which, if it had been originally instituted in a Court of British India, could not have been maintained, being an action on a judgment of a Court of British India, was a good and maintainable action in the Court where it was instituted, and is to be deemed to be a properly instituted suit to which in other respects the law of the Courts of British India may now be applied. *King v. By a settlement executed in 1896, the first defendant agreed, inter alia, to pay maintenance to the plaintiff (his wife) at the rate of R91 per annum. The second defendant signed the deed as surety. In 1898 the plaintiff sued both defendant to enforce her rights under the settlement, and (inter alia) for arrears of maintenance for ten months and sixteen days from the 10th November, 1897. The defendants pleaded that the deed was void for want of consideration. The first Court found that the settlement was not void, and passed a decree against both the defendants, but, as to the payment of arrears of maintenance, the decree was against the first defendant only. The second defendant appealed against the decree, so far as it was against him, contending that the settlement was not in any way binding on him. The plaintiff filed cross-objections to the decree, contending that the second defendant ought to have been held liable for the arrears of maintenance. At the hearing of the appeal, however, the plaintiff withdrew her cross-objections, and the decree of the first Court was confirmed with costs. In 1901 the plaintiff filed this suit against both defendants, to recover arrears of maintenance for two years and nine months, commencing from the 27th September, 1898. The second defendant pleaded that, inasmuch as he had not been held liable for maintenance in the former suit, the plaintiff's claim was res judicata. The lower Courts passed a decree for the plaintiff, holding that her claim was not res judicata. On appeal to the High Court :—Held, confirming the decree of the lower Courts, that the plaintiff's claim against the second defendant in this suit was not res judicata. The only point that was res judicata against her by the former suit was her right to the arrears therein claimed; but that did not bar her right to sue the second defendant as surety in respect of the subsequent arrears claimed in the present suit. It was contended for the second defendant that the pleadings in the former suit operated as notice under s. 130 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872), and put an end to his contract of guarantee. Held, that the denial by the second defendant of his liability in the pleadings in that suit was made for the purposes of pleading, and could not have any other effect than was given to it in the suit itself. It could not operate as notice under s. 130 of the Contract Act. BHIKABHAI RATANCHAND v. BAI BHURI (1903) . I. L. R. 27 Bom. 418

The plaintiff and one Naranji Virji were (it was alleged) cousins and the only members of a joint Hindu family. The plaintiff left Bombay and went to Cutch to avoid the plague, and, in 1900, during his absence, Naranji died; and his widows took possession of his estate. The plaintiff returned to Bombay, and as surviving member of the joint Hindu family sued (No. 124 of 1900) the widows for the property. They alleged that he was not a resident of British India, and obtained an order under s. 380 of the Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882), directing that he should give security for costs, or in default his suit should be dismissed. Being unable to comply with the order, his suit was dismissed under s. 381 of the Code. Having learned for the first time during the course of that suit that, in his absence from Bombay, the deceased Naranji Virji had executed two deeds of settlement, by one of which he purported to settle some of the family property in charity and by the other to settle another portion on his widows, the plaintiff subsequently brought this suit to recover the joint family property from the widows. He made the trustees of the two deeds of settlement defendants to the suit, and prayed for a declaration that Naranji had no right to settle any of the property, and that the deeds should be cancelled. The first and second defendants (the widows) contended that the former suit was for the same relief, and that, it having been dismissed under s. 381 of the Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882), this suit was not maintainable. Held, that the dismissal of a suit under s. 381 of the Civil Procedure Code does not bar a fresh suit for the same cause of action. Per Curiam.—If I had been of opinion that a fresh suit on the same subject-matter could not be brought, I should have held that in respect of all matters included in the deed of settlement it was not a suit on the same subject-matter. HARIRAM MOHANJI v. 4. ———— Decree not in conformity with judgment—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 13—Omission to make reservation in decree though in judgment. It is by the decree and not by the judgment that a question of res judicata must be decided. In 1881 A sued K and others claiming a declaration of his title to certain land and an injunction against interference with his possession. K claimed part of the land by purchase from M. The Munsif decreed for A, and this decree was confirmed on appeal by the District Judge, but in his judgment the District Judge recorded that K's claim was not adjudicated upon, and that he should bring a fresh suit if he had any claim. In 1883 K sued A to recover the land, which he claimed by purchase from M. A pleaded that the claim was res judicata by virtue of the decree in the former suit. The District Munsif and, on appeal, the District Judge held that the claim was not res judicata, and decreed for K. Held, on appeal to the High Court, that as no reservation was made in the decree of K's right to bring another suit, the plea of res judicata was good, but that, under the circumstances, an opportunity should be given to K to apply to the District Court to have the decree in the former suit brought into conformity with the judgment. This having been done, the decree of the lower Courts was confirmed. AVALA v. KUPPU I. L. R. 8 Mad. 77

5. ———— Finding in judgment not embodied in decree—Suit for enhancement of rent—Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), s. 13. N brought a suit against P for enhancement of rent. P's defence was, first, that no notice of enhancement had been given; secondly, that the rent was not enhanceable, as he and his predecessors in title had held it at a fixed rent from the date of the permanent settlement. The suit was dismissed on the ground that no notice had been given; but the Munsif stated in his judgment that he considered the rent enhanceable, because he did not believe in the genuineness of the documentary evidence produced by P. The decree merely ordered that the suit should be dismissed, the portion of the judgment as to the enhanceability of the rent not being embodied in the decree. P therefore had no right of appeal against that portion of the judgment. In a subsequent suit by N against P for enhancement of rent of the same tenure:—Held, that, on the rule laid down by the Privy Council in Soorjeemonee Dayee v. Suddanund Mohapatra, 12 B. L. R. 304, and Krishna Behari Roy v. Bunwari Lall Roy, I. L. R. 1 Calc. 144, P was precluded, by the decision in the former suit, from denying that the rent of the tenure was enhanceable, although the decision on that point was not embodied in the decree. The material findings in each case should be embodied in the decree, and, if they are not, it is incumbent on the parties, to avoid their being bound by decisions against which they have no right of appeal, to apply to amend the decree in accordance with the judgment. *NIAMUT KHAN v. 6. ———— Objections by respondent to decree—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 13, 540, 561, 584. In a suit to obtain possession of certain property, and to set aside a deed called a deed of endowment (wakfnama), on the ground that the defendant had fraudulently obtained its execution, the defendant pleaded (i) that the deed was a valid one, and (ii) that she was in possession of the property in satisfaction of a dower-debt, and her possession could not be disturbed so long as the debt remained unsatisfied. The Court of first instance held that the deed was valid, but that the defendant was entitled to remain in possession of the property till her dower-debt was satisfied and the Court passed a decree which merely dismissed the suit, without embodying the finding as to the deed. On appeal by the plaintiff to the District Judge, the defendant filed objections under s. 561 of the Civil Procedure Code in regard to the first Court's decision that the deed of endowment was invalid. The Judge dismissed the plaintiff's appeal, affirming the finding as to dower, and, refusing to decide the question of the validity of the deed as being unnecessary for disposal of the claim, disallowed the defendant's objections. The defendant appealed to the High Court. Held by the Full Bench (OLDFIELD and MAHMOOD, JJ., dissenting), that if a decree is, upon the face of it, entirely in favour of a party to a suit, such decree being the thing which by law is made appealable, and nothing else, that party has no right of appeal therefrom. If, in the judgment of which such decree is the formal expression, findings have been recorded upon some issues against that party and he desires to have formal effect given to them by the decree, so as to allow of his filing objections thereto under s. 561 of the Civil Procedure Code or of appealing therefrom under s. 540, he must take steps under s. 206 to have the decree properly brought into conformity with the judgment, so that there may be matter on the face of it to show that something has been decided against him; but if he fails to take this course, the decree, though in general terms, will stand good as finally deciding the issues raised by the pleadings upon which the ultimate determination of the cause and the decree itself rested. The findings in a judgment upon matters which subsequently turn out to be immaterial to the grounds upon which a suit is finally disposed of as to the plaintiff's right to any portion of the relief sought by him as declared by the decree amount to no more than obiter dicta, and do not constitute a final decision of the kind contemplated by s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held, also, that in the present case the Judge was right in holding that the question as to the validity or otherwise of the deed of endowment was wholly immaterial. The judgment of STRAIGHT, J. in Lachman Singh v. Mohon, I. L. R. 2 All. 497, approved and followed. Per OLDFIELD, J. (contra), that the decree, to agree with the judgment and fulfil the requirements of s. 206 of the Civil Procedure Code, should contain the material points for determination arising out of the claim and material for the decision thereon; that if this has not been done, the defect is a good ground of appeal, notwithstanding that the decree, on its face, may be altogether in favour of the appellant, and notwithstanding that he may not have applied for amendment of the decree under s. 206, or for review of judgment; and that, in the present case, the defeat in the decree would afford a good ground of appeal. Per MAHMOOD, J., that inasmuch as the provisions of s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code relate as well to the trial of issues as to the trial of suits, and in the present case the validity or otherwise of the deed was a matter directly and substantially in issue between the parties, and was adjudicated upon, the finding of the first Court upon that issue was not a mere obiter dictum, but he would be binding upon the defendant as res judicata notwithstanding the fact that the suit against her was dismissed on the ground that she held possession of the property in lieu of dower; that whatever has the force of res judicata is necessarily appealable; that the word "from" as used in s. 540 or s. 584, and the expression "objection to the decree" in s. 561 refer not only to matters existing upon the face of the decree, but also to those which should have existed, but do not exist there; and that the defendant in the present case was aggrieved or injured by the omission in the decree of the first Court, and was therefore entitled to file objections to it, and for the same reason, to appeal to the High Court from the decree of the lower Appellate Court. Also per MAHMOOD, J., that it was doubtful whether the reliefs contemplated by ss. 206 and 623 were open to the defendant; but that, even conceding that she ought to have sought her remedy under either of those sections, her neglect to do so did not make her incapable of obtaining the same result by the exercise of her right of appeal. *Anusuyabai v. ownership of the lands; defendant No. 2 claimed to be mortgagee in possession. The decree simply dismissed the suit; but the lower Court found, as a fact, that the ownership of the lands was in the plaintiff, although the plaintiff was not entitled to possession of them by reason of the mortgage to defendant No. 2. Defendant No. 1 now appealed on the ground that, although the decree itself was entirely in her favour, she would be prejudiced in any future proceedings if the finding of fact as to the ownership of the lands were left unchallenged. Held, that the appeal would not lie; for the decree is what must be looked to see what was conclusively decided, and there was nothing in the decree actually passed which the plaintiff could afterwards use as res judicata in his favour; and an appeal is not admissible on any point not having the authority of res judicata. An adjudication is only conclusive evidence of the facts established therein or properly tending thereto; hence from a simple judgment against him a party cannot deduce anything in his favour as res judicata, for nothing in his favour can have been essential element of an adverse decree. *ANUSUYABAI v. 8. ———— Collateral issue—Dismissal for want of notice. Where a suit for arrears of rent at enhanced rates for a certain year was dismissed for want of notice, but the Court also found that the patta set up by defendant was not genuine:—Held, that the decision was not bar to a subsequent suit by the same plaintiff for arrears of rent at enhanced rates for a subsequent year. A matter which is directly adjudicated upon by a Court of competent jurisdiction can be treated as res judicata, but not matters determined for collateral or incidental purposes only. *JARDINE, SKINNER & Co. v. ✓ 14. ————— Issue not affirmed and denied—Requisites for res judicata. In order to constitute the bar of res judicata, it is not sufficient merely that an issue on the same point should have been raised in the former suit, although that issue may have been incidentally decided; but it must appear that the matter referred to was alleged by one party, and either denied or admitted expressly or impliedly by the other. SHAMA CHURN CHATTERJEE v. PROSONO COOMAR SANTIKAREE . . . . . 5. C. L. R. 251

15. ————— Suit to set aside will—Question as to validity of will—Suit for possession—Cause of action. C, a Hindu subject to the Mitakshara law, adopted S, and afterwards B, and made a will, where by, after providing for his widow, the family worship, etc., he made a division of his real and personal property between his two adopted sons. Provision was also made for forfeiture by either of the sons in case they disputed the will, in which event the whole estate was to go to the other son. This will was registered and filed in the Collector's Court. S was subsequently disowned by C and declared to have forfeited his right to anything under the will. In 1859 S brought a suit against C, B, and certain persons who claimed portions of the property under deeds executed by C, to cancel those deeds, to cancel the will, to set aside adoption of B, and for maintenance. In this suit he alleged that C had no power to make any of the devises of real estate contained in the will, inasmuch as the whole estate, consisting of property inherited by C and property acquired by him from the income of such inherited property, was ancestral. The only issue raised in that suit referring to the will was whether it was assented to by S. The first Court found that it had been so assented to; that the adoption of B was valid; and that S's conduct justified C in disinheriting him: the suit was accordingly dismissed. S appealed to the High Court, and in his grounds of appeal raised the same contention as before, viz., that the whole of the real property was ancestral, and therefore C had no power to dispose of it without his consent. The High Court in 1863 varied the decree of the first Court, and held that the will must be set aside so far as it affected the right of S in the ancestral property, but that the ancestral property only included that inherited, and not that acquired by C with the income of the inherited property. In a suit brought by S, after the death of B and C, against B's widow and the parties to the former suit, or their representatives, to obtain possession of the whole estate of C on the ground that both the inherited property and the property acquired from the income thereof were ancestral:—Held (reversing the decision of the High Court), that, although the issue as to the assent of S to the will clearly embraced only a portion of the controversy between the parties, the Court had jurisdiction, and indeed was bound, to decide whether or not the will was operative as to all or to any and what portion of the property, and that its decision on that point was binding on the parties. According to the general law relating to res judicata, where a question has been necessarily decided in effect, though not in express terms, between parties to a suit, they cannot raised the same question as between themselves in any other suit in any other form. S. 2, Act VIII of 1859, does not prevent the operation of this general law. The words "cause of action" in that section must be construed in reference to the substance rather than the form of the action. SOORJOMONEE DAYEE v. SUDANUND MOHAPATTER . . . . . 12 B. L. R. P. Thereupon C applied for execution of the decree as A's legal representative, relying upon a will made by A in his favour. At the same time, C filed a suit to recover R140 as mesne profits of the land. The execution-proceedings were stayed till after the disposal of the suit for mesne profits. In this suit B contended that the will in question<sup>7</sup> was not executed by A, and that A was not of sound disposing mind at the time of the alleged execution of the will. The Subordinate Judge found on both these points against B, and passed a decree for mesne profits. This decree was upheld, on appeal, by the District Judge. After the decision of this suit, the Subordinate Judge took up C's application for execution of the original decree obtained by A. This application was resisted by B on the same grounds on which he had defended the suit for mesne profits. He impeached the validity of the will on the grounds of non-execution by, and unsoundness of mind of, the testator. The Subordinate Judge held that the matter was res judicata; he therefore overruled this objection, and ordered execution to issue. The District Judge held that, as the suit for mesne profits was in the nature of a Small Cause Court suit, in which there was no second appeal, the decision passed in that suit did not operate as res judicata in the present execution-proceedings. He therefore reversed the Subordinate Judge's order, and remanded the case for a fresh decision. Held, reversing the remand order, that the question whether C was entitled to execute the decree as A's representative fell within the last clause of s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, viz., "determined in a separate suit." The Subordinate Judge, who had raised an issue as to the validity of the will relied upon by C in the suit for mesne profits, was entitled to act upon his determination of that issue in the execution-proceedings. *BHAVANISHANKAR v. 17. — Suit to set aside adoption—Decree in former suit. In a suit brought to set aside the adoption of the first defendant, to declare plaintiff's title to certain lands and for possession, the first defendant pleaded that the question of his adoption was res judicata in a former suit. In that suit between the present plaintiff's son as plaintiff and his father (the present plaintiff) as the first defendant, and the present first defendant, the alleged adopted son, as second defendant, the latter was found to be the adopted son of the undivided brother of the present plaintiff. Held, that the first defendant's adoption was not res judicata. *Ayyavu Muppanar v. 19. — Suit to set aside adoption. B, as adopted son and heir of G, instituted a suit to set aside certain patni leases under which certain persons claimed to hold land, which had belonged to G. The defence was that B was not the legally adopted son of G, and an issue on this point having been settled, K, who claimed to be the reversionary heir of G, was made a defendant under s. 73 of Act VIII of 1859; and it was eventually decided in that suit that B was the duly adopted son of G. Held, that a subsequent suit by K against B to set aside the adoption could not, on the principles laid down in the case of *Soorjeemonee Dayee v. On A's death, B took possession of the property left by A. In a suit by C against B for recovery of possession thereof as heir to his maternal uncle, the Court of first instance held that B should retain possession of the property during her lifetime without power of waste, and that on her death C should be entitled to the possession thereof. This was reserved by the High Court on appeal, who held that the decree should have been simply a decree of dismissal of the plaintiff's suit. B died, leaving an adopted son, D. C sued D for recovery of possession of the property, the subject-matter of the former suit, on the ground that D was not the adopted son of B, and that C, who came within the class of bandhus, was entitled to succeed to the property left by A and B, there being no nearer heir in existence. Held, that s. 2, Act VIII of 1859, did not bar the suit. *MOHUN LAL BHAYA GYAL v. A competent Court having decided upon an issue directly raised in a suit brought by a person alleging himself to have been adopted that this adoption had not taken place, it was held that the present suit was barred under Act X of 1877, s. 13, as res judicata, having been brought by the son of the defendant in the former suit, claiming through his father, to establish the same adoption; and that the section applied, although the suits related to different properties. The establishment of the adoption alleged in the first suit would have obliged the father of the present plaintiff to share with the adopted son his ancestral estate. That adoption having been negatived, the son, in this suit, ought to be estopped from making title on the ground that the adoption had placed the person, from whom he claimed to inherit, in the relation of father's brother to him. VENKATA MAHIPATI GANGADHARA RAMA RAU v. 22. — — — Issue in former suit—Former decree in favour of plaintiff, but issue as to adoption found against him—No appeal open to plaintiff against that finding—Subsequent suit to recover property on strength of adoption. One S died in September 1878, leaving a widow B. The year before his death his only son (Bala), a child eight years old, had left his home and was never heard of again. A few days before his death, S adopted the plaintiff (his nephew) and executed a deed of adoption, which stated that he had no hope that his son Bala was alive, and that he had therefore adopted the plaintiff. The deed further declared the plaintiff to be the owner of all S's property with all the rights of a natural son, but provided that, in the event of the lost son returning, he should have half. In 1892 the plaintiff, as S's adopted son, brought this suit to recover some of S's property, which was in the hands of the defendants, who claimed it as S's heirs. They (inter alia) impeached the plaintiff's adoption. The plaintiff had previously sued one K, the father of the defendants, in another suit (No. 804 of 1885) to recover certain other lands. In that suit it had been held that the plaintiff was not the adopted son of S, but that nevertheless he was entitled to recover the lands sued for on the strength of the above-stated deed of adoption, and a decree was passed for the plaintiff. Held, that the issue as to adoption in that suit was not res judicata in the present suit. In the former suit the plaintiff recovered upon the deed. He could not have appealed from the decree which was in his favour, not could he, under the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), appeal from the finding upon the adoption issue which was against him. Upon that issue there had not been a final decision. RANGO BALAJI v. MUDIYEPPA

23. — — — Pending suits—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 12 and 13—Malikana—Different reliefs claimed. For the purpose of the rule of res judicata, it is not essential that the subject-matters of the present and the former litigations should be identical. Where a recurring liability is the subject of claim, a previous judgment dismissing a suit between the same parties upon findings which do not go to the root of the title on which the claim rests, but relate merely to a particular item or instalment, cannot operate as res judicata. But if such previous judgment negatives the title and main obligation itself, the plaintiff cannot re-agitate the same question of the title by claiming a subsequent item or instalment. Rajah of Pittapur v. Buchi Sittya Garu, L. R. 12 I. A. 16, referred to. The pendency of litigation regarding rent, malikana, or other demand for one year does not, under s. 12 of the Civil Procedure Code, bar a suit between the same parties in which the same demand is made for a subsequent year, inasmuch as the reliefs claimed in the two cases are different. Ss. 12 and 13 of the Code compared. On the 17th August 1835 a suit was instituted for recovery of an annual malikana allowance for the years 1290, 1291, and 1292 Faslis. On the 5th October 1885 the Munsif dismissed the suit. On the 10th March 1886 the Subordinate Judge on appeal reversed the Munsif's decree, and decreed the suit. On the 21st June 1886 the defendant appealed to the High Court, which on the 4th July 1887 reversed the Subordinate Judge's decree, and restored that of the Munsif, on the ground that the plaintiff had never received and was not entitled to malikana. Meanwhile, on the 8th June 1886, the plaintiff brought another suit against the defendant for recovery of malikana for the year 1293 Fasli, which accrued after the institution of the former suit. By judgments dated respectively the 21st August and 27th November 1886, the lower Courts decreed this suit holding that the Subordinate Judge's decree of the 10th March 1886, in the former suit, operated as res judicata and was conclusive in favour of the plaintiff's title to the malikana. On the 17th May 1887 the defendants appealed to the High Court, and on the 16th May 1888 (the High Court having in the interval dismissed the former suit by its judgment of the 4th July 1887) the appeal came on for hearing. Held, that the trial of the present suit by either of the lower Courts was not barred by s. 12 of the Civil Procedure Code by reason of the fact that, at the time of such trial in August and November 1886, the previous litigation between the parties was pending in second appeal before the High Court. BALKISHAN v. An issue was raised and tried whether the talukh belonged to D S or not; and it was expressly decided that it did not, and that the zamindari was liable to be attached and sold in execution of A G's decree as belonging to R R. Held, that it was not open to D S or to plaintiff claiming under him in a subsequent suit to come into Court and ask for a declaration of his right to a half share of the talukh as against A G. *ABDOOL GUNNEE v. 28. ——— Civil Procedure Code, s. 13, expts. I and II, and s. 44. L was the owner of a 4-anna share in a village. On the 1st March 1880, his childless widow R, and his nephew B, who had separated from his two brothers and lived for some years with both L and R, sold to S one-third of the 4-anna share. The brothers of B sued the vendors and the vendee to enforce a right of pre-emption, alleging that they, as well as B, had acquired and entered into exclusive possession of the estate of L as his heirs. In the second appeal in this suit the High Court held that, as it was proved that the 4-anna share was L's separate estate, and R had succeeded to it and was in possession of it, and thus the plaintiffs had not established a title to, or acquired possession of, any part of the share, the plaintiffs were not in a position to assert a preferential claim to purchase the property in dispute. The plaintiffs also pleaded that the question of the right and title asserted by them as the actual heirs of L should have been tried and determined in the suit; but the High Court rejected this plea on the ground that the suit had been based merely on the allegation of de facto possession, and that their claim was to obtain by purchase one-third share only, and not for any remedy in respect of their right to possession by inheritance of the entire 4-anna estate. Subsequently to this decision, the same plaintiffs, alleging equal rights with B as reversionary heirs of L, sued the same defendants for a declaration of the incompetence of R, the widow, to alienate the property, and that the sale-deed might be declared, as against them null and of no effect. The cause of action was stated to be the execution, on the 1st March 1880, of the deed of sale. Held, that the plea of res judicata failed. The matter now substantially in issue between the parties, viz., the presumptive title of the plaintiffs to possession of the property, had not been "heard and finally decided" in the sense of s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code. Such title was not "alleged and denied" by the parties in that suit, within expl. I, s. 13. It was not matter which "might and ought" to have been made the ground of attack in the former suit, within expl. II. The law does not require a plaintiff at once to assert all his titles to property, or to be thereafter estopped from advancing them. A plaintiff may with the leave of the Court (s. 44, Civil Procedure Code) join causes of action, but he is nowhere compelled to do so. The cause of action in the second suit, although the date of its accrual was the same, was separate and distinct from the cause of action asserted in the previous suit. *SHEO RATAN SINGH v. 29. ——— Issue as to account—Suit for money due on bond—Act X of 1877, s. 13. M sued R in the Court of the Munsif for a bond, alleging that he had satisfied the bond-debt, and for a certain sum which he alleged had been paid by him to R in excess of the bond-debt. On the 24th November 1875 the Munsif, having taken an account and found that R188-7-4 of the bond debt were still due, made a decree dismissing the suit. R appealed to the Subordinate Judge, who on the 16th September 1876, finding that R520-2-2 of the bond-debt were still due, affirmed the Munsif's decree. M appealed to the High Court on the ground that an appeal by R did not lie to the Subordinate Judge, as R was not aggrieved by the Munsif's decree. The Division Bench before which the appeal came, on the 10th August 1877, holding that R was not competent to appeal to the Subordinate Judge, set aside the proceedings of the Subordinate Judge. In deciding the case the Division Bench made certain observations to the effect that the account between the parties was not finally settled, but might be taken again in a fresh suit. In November 1877, M instituted a fresh suit against R to recover the bond on payment of R188-7-4, the sum found by the Munsif in the former suit to be due by him to R. Held, on the question whether the finding of the Munsif in the former suit was final and conclusive between the parties or the account might be again taken, that that finding, being a finding on a matter directly and substantially in issue in the former suit, which was heard and finally decided by the Munsif, was final and conclusive between the parties, and the account could not be again taken. Held, also, that the observations of the Division Bench in the former suit were mere "obiter dicta" which did not bind the Courts disposing of the fresh suit. MOHAN LALL v. RAM DIAL. I. L. R. 2 All. 843

30. — Issue as to satisfaction of money-bonds—Subsequent suit on bonds—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 45—Matter directly and substantially in issue—Meaning of "suit" in Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 13. S sued K for four bonds, alleging that the same had been satisfied. K had formerly sued S on two of these bonds. S had alleged in defence of that suit that those two bonds, as also the other two, had been satisfied. It was decided in that suit that not one of the bonds had been satisfied. Held by PETHERAM, C.J., and OLD-FIELD, BRODHURST, and DUTHOIT, J.J., that the only issue in the former suit which had to be decided being whether the bonds on which that suit was brought had been satisfied or not, the second suit was, under s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code, res judicata only in respect of those bonds, and not in respect of the other two bonds. The Court which tried the former suit had not jurisdiction to try the subsequent suit. Per MAHMOOD, J.—This being so, if the word "suit" in s. 13 were taken literally, it might, with some plausibility be contended that there was no res judicata in respect of any of the bonds. The word "suit," however, must be understood to mean such a matter as might have formed the subject of a separate suit independently of the special provisions of the Civil Procedure Code, such as s. 45, which enables this plaintiff to unite several causes of action in one and the same suit. Adopting this interpretation, it was clear that the two bonds which were the subject of the former suit could not be allowed to form the subject of litigation again. As to the other two bonds, which were not the subject-matter of the former suit, they did not, in the former suit, constitute a "matter directly and substantially in issue" within the meaning of s. 13, and, even if they were "directly and substantially in issue," the decision in the former suit would not support the plea of res judicata, because the Court which tried that suit was not a Court of jurisdiction competent to try the subsequent suit, in which the plea was raised. 31. — Issue as to validity of mortgage—Suit for possession—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 13, expts. I and II. H, the proprietor of a one-third share of a certain undivided estate, made a gift of such share to P. He subsequently, in February 1875, gave a mortgage of such share, in his capacity as P's guardian, to N and S, the two other co-sharers of such estate. In March 1878 P, having attained his age of majority, brought a suit, as a co-sharer of such estate, under such gift, against N and S for possession of certain land appertaining to such estate, on the ground that they were using such land as if they were the sole proprietors thereof.

The lower Appellate Court, observing that such land was the property of the three co-sharers, that the mortgage of P's right to N and S did not affect those rights as such, and that N and S were not justified in using such land as if they were the exclusive proprietors thereof, gave P a decree for possession of one-third share of such land. N and S appealed to the High Court on the ground that P should not have been awarded possession, as they were in possession of such land as mortgagees. The High Court remanded the cases for the determination of the issue thus raised by N and S, and the lower Appellate Court found that N and S were in possession of P's share of such estate as mortgagees under the mortgage made by H above referred to and of such land as such. P did not take any objection to this finding; and it was adopted by the High Court and embodied in its final decree. In October 1879 P sued N for possession of his share in such estate, claiming under the gift from H and alleging that the mortgage of such share by H to N was invalid. Held, that, inasmuch as such mortgage was matter substantially in issue in the former suit, the matter in issue in the second suit was res judicata under expts. 32. — Issue as to interest on instalment bond—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 13—"Subject-matter" of suit. The obligee of a bond payable by instalments sued the obligor for four instalments, claiming, with reference to the terms of such bond, interest on such instalments from the date of such bond. The obligor contended in that suit that, on the proper construction of the bond, the interest on such instalments should be calculated from the dates of default. The obligee obtained the decree for interest as claimed. The obligee subsequently again sued the obligor for four instalments, again claiming interest on such instalments from the date of such bond. The obligor contended again in the second suit that interest should only be calculated from the dates of default. Held, that the question as to the date from which interest due on the defaulting instalments was exigible under the terms of such bond was res judicata. It is the "matter in issue," not the "subject-matter," of the suit, that forms the essential test of res judicata in s. 13 of Act X of 1877. PAHLWAN SINGH v. RISAL SINGH. I. L. R. 4 All. 55

W in her defence to the suit denied that N had any right in the kiln, and that a moiety of the kiln belonged to him. An issue was framed on the point whether a moiety of the kiln belonged to W, which the Court of first instance decided in N's favour. N eventually obtained a decree for a moiety of the kiln, which he claimed by right of inheritance. W appealed, contending, inter alia, that it was not proved that a moiety of the kiln belonged to N. The appeal was decreed, and the decree of the Court of first instance in N's favour was set aside. W subsequently sued N for the value of bricks which he had wrongfully taken from the kiln. N set up as a defence to the suit that a moiety of the kiln belonged to him. Held, that the issue whether a moiety of the kiln belonged to N was res judicata under s. 13, expl. I, of the Civil Procedure Code. WILAITI BEGUM v. NUR KHAN . I. L. R. 5 All. 514

34. — Issue as to possession—Suit for recovery of produce of land—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 12—Matter in issue in former suit. Pending the final hearing in appeal of a suit for confirmation of possession of certain land, and for the recovery of the produce of such land alleged to have been carried away by the defendants, the plaintiff brought a suit again asking for confirmation of possession, but also for the recovery of the produce which had arisen since the institution of the other suit. Held, that the second suit, so far as it sought for the recovery of the produce, was not barred by the previous suit. *BISSESSUR SINGH v. 35. — Issue of law erroneously decided—Decree prohibiting erection of temple—Rights of rival religious sects—Right to open temple for worship. The erroneous decision by a competent tribunal of a question of law directly or substantially in issue between the parties to a suit does not prevent a Court from deciding the same question, arising between the same parties in a subsequent suit, according to law. In a suit in 1850 between the Tenkalais and Vadakalais, rival religious sects, represented by the plaintiffs and defendants respectively, the Vadakalais having endeavoured to open a temple for public worship in a certain public street, were; by the decree of the Sudder Court, prohibited from erecting a temple or instituting public worship on the spot of ground objected to by the Tenkalais and which lay within range of the Tenkalais temple, i.e., within the usual range of the processions conducted in connection with the temple worship. In 1879 the Vadakalais opened a temple for public worship on another site, their private property, in the same street. Held, that the decree of the Sudder Court in the former suit was no bar to the action of the Vadakalais. *PARTHASARADI v. 37. — Issue as to validity of grant—Issue not decided in former suit. In a suit to recover, with mesne profits and other incidents a jerayati village alleged by the plaintiff to form part of the zamindari, and to be wrongfully held by defendant by virtue of the execution of a decree of the late Commissioner of the Northern Circars passed in 1844, the defendant pleaded that he held on a permanent lease subject to a fixed quit-rent, that he and his ancestors had held on that tenure since and previously to the permanent settlement, and that the quit-rent had been received from him by the plaintiff. The Agent dismissed the suit, on the ground that the matter had become res judicata against the plaintiff by a former decree in 1807. Held, that the matter of the present claim was not res judicata, because the question of the existence and validity of the alleged grant, on which the defendant relied, was not determined in the former decree. *VAIRICHARLA SURYA NARAYANA v. As to this plot, the issue, raised was whether the land was held by S under P; the decision, that S did not hold under P, but under N since 1828; the decree, that V's suit be dismissed as to this plot. Held, in a suit brought in 1881 by V against N and S to recover the same plot of land, that the suit was not barred by reason of the previous decision in 1874. *ANANDA RAMAN VATHIAR v. 39. — Issue as to tenancy—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 13—Question decided by decree. A landlord, having tendered a pottah at a certain rate, sued his tenants in the Court of the District Munsif to recover rent for Fasli 1289 (1879-80). The tenants pleaded that they were not bound to accept the pottah tendered by virtue of an implied contract, which entitled them without exchange of pottah and muchalka to hold the land permanently at a lighter rent. The District Munsif and, on appeal, the District Court decided that no implied contract had been proved by the tenants. The suit was dismissed on the ground that the pottah tendered was not one which the tenants were bound to accept under Act VIII of 1865 (Madras). The landlord then sued in the Revenue Court to compel the tenants to accept a pottah for Fasli 1291 (1881-82), and the tenants again put forward the same plea. Held, that the question whether the tenants were entitled to hold permanently at a lighter rate without exchange of pottah and muchalka was not res judicata by virtue of the decree in the former suit. *MUTTUKUMARAPPA REDDI v. 40. ——— Issue as to transferability of tenure—Estoppel—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 13. Plaintiff having brought a suit to recover damages for the removal by the defendants of certain crops, alleging (i) that he was transferee of the jote upon which the crops were, and (ii) that he had purchased the crops, it was objected that the transfer to the plaintiff was invalid. It being found that the crops in question had been purchased by the plaintiff as alleged by him, he obtained a decree for damages for their removal. The plaintiff now brought a second suit as transferee of the jote to recover possession of it from the defendants, who again pleaded that the transfer was invalid. Held, reversing the decision of FIELD, J., that the defendants were not estopped, under s. 13, expl. II, of the Civil Procedure Code, from setting up that defence, inasmuch as the question of the transferability of the jote was immaterial in the first suit and had not in fact been determined, and the question of estoppel was not raised by the parties themselves. 41. ——— Issue as to right of pre-emption—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 562, 588 (28)—Second appeal—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 565, 566—Determination of case by High Court. In a suit for pre-emption, based on the wajib-ul-urz of a village, the Court of first instance dismissed the claim on the ground that no right of pre-emption had been proved to exist in the village. The lower Appellate Court, dissenting from this opinion, reversed the first Court's decree, and remanded the case under s. 562 of the Civil Procedure Code for a decision on the remaining question of fact, viz., the amount of the consideration for the sale. On appeal from the order of remand, the High Court, on the 3rd January 1884, observed that it was not disposed to interfere with the finding of fact that the plaintiffs had a right of pre-emption, and accordingly dismissed the appeal, but added that the Judge was in error in remanding the case under s. 562 of the Code, that his order must so far be set aside, and that he should proceed under s. 565 or s. 566, as might be applicable. The Judge, on receipt of this order, replaced the case on his file, remitted an issue to the Court of first instance, under s. 566, as to the amount of consideration, and, accepting the first Court's finding upon that issue, decreed the plaintiff's claim. In second appeal by the defendants the High Court was of opinion that the Judge had disposed of the case upon a condition of things which the plaintiffs had never asserted, inasmuch as he had treated the right of pre-emption which was in issue as one arising from custom, and not, as alleged by the plaintiffs, as arising from a contract between the ancestors of the parties. All the evidence necessary to the determination of the case was on the record. Held by the Full Bench, that the defendants were not prevented by the operation of the High Court's order of the 3rd

January 1884 from disputing the right of pre-emption, inasmuch as that order was a decision of a merely interlocutory character passed in the same suit, and the questions of fact involved therein were decided only so far as was necessary for the purpose of passing the order, and it could not be regarded as determining the main question in the suit which was still open, and must be decided in the final decree in the suit. Per STRAIGHT, J., that the jurisdiction of the High Court in appeal under s. 588 of the Code from the Judge's order of remand was, like the jurisdiction of the Judge in passing the order, limited by the terms of s. 562; and hence the remark made in the High Court's order, dealing with the plaintiff's right of pre-emption, could only be regarded as an obiter dictum, and not as determining any question as to the pre-emptive right. Thereupon A, who in the meantime had been ousted from possession, brought a subsequent suit in which B and C together with others were co-defendants, in which he claimed an undivided share in the same garden. Held, that, under the circumstances, the doctrine of res judicata did not apply, and that such suit was maintainable. Issues were framed both as to title and as to the letting, but the Munsif, without trying the question of title, dismissed the suit on the ground that the oral lease was not proved. Held, that a fresh suit to recover possession of the land on the ground of title was not barred as being res judicata. M also died leaving a will in favour of B, who accordingly applied for letters of administration with the will annexed. This application was refused by the District Judge, who granted a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 to one G. Upon this B sought his remedy in a suit before the Subordinate Judge, who held that, the property being that of the husband, the widow's will passed nothing to plaintiff, and that, although the evidence in favour of G was doubtful, yet the Court could not say that the was not her heir. In a suit by G against B for the rents of the property accruing since the widow's death, where G contended that the decision of the Subordinate Judge operated as a bar to the questioning of his title:—Held, that the principle of res judicata did not apply. 46. ————— Issue incidentally raised—Suit for possession. In 1852, T acquired a plot of land, X under a Government grant. In 1851 N, claiming to be the owner of the adjoining plot Y, granted a lease of it to R; but in 1853 another lease of the same plot was granted by an agent of N to G. In 1859 G sued T to recover possession of lot X as being part of plot Y, and obtained a decree, against which T appealed to the Privy Council. Pending the appeal, R sued G for possession of plot Y, and obtained a decree against G. Meanwhile, R having failed to pay rent, plot Y was put up for sale, and purchased by the present respondent. In 1872, the respondent, who was unable to get possession of his purchase, obtained leave to be admitted a party respondent in the appeal to the Privy Council, and filed a case averring that the interests of the original respondents had ceased, and that he was, pending the appeal, precluded from enforcing his rights. The Privy Council held that the plaintiff G had not proved that plot Y included plot X, but they stated that they did not adjudicate upon any question of title between the respondents on that appeal, or N or any other person's interest in plot Y. The present respondent subsequently sued T's representative for possession of plot X as being parcel of plot Y. Held, reversing the judgment of the High Court, that the respondent's claim was res judicata by reason of the previous judgment of the Privy Council. ants, the zamindar assessed the jote lands at a certain rent. Subsequently this rent fell into arrear, and under a decree the jote lands were in 1836 sold in satisfaction of the arrears to J, who was put in possession in 1839. Another suit, which was pending between the tenants and their mortgagee, in which a question arose whether these jote lands were included in the mortgage, was decided in favour of the mortgagee in 1841. J, the then jote tenant, was no party to that suit, and continued in possession of his jote lands. Disputes arose, and by order of the Sudder Court in 1845 the jote lands were directed to be put in possession of the mortgagee. In 1856 a suit was brought by J's representative to set aside that order and to recover possession of the jote lands. The Privy Council held that, as J, the jote tenant, was not a party to the suit under which the decree was made in 1841, the decree was not binding upon him or those deriving title through him, and remanded the case in order that the issue whether the land was parcel of the jote or not might be tried. Held, that this order of remand was conclusive that the question of the title of the representatives of J to the jote lands could not be re-opened. 48. ————— Suit for possession dismissed on ground of want of title in vendor—Suit for recovery of purchase-money in which title set up as a defence. On 8th February 1889 the defendant sold to the plaintiff, under a registered conveyance containing no express covenant for title, land of which he was not in possession and the purchase-money was paid. The plaintiff and the defendant sued to recover possession, but failed on the ground that the vendor had no title. The plaintiff now sued on 7th February 1895 to recover with interest the purchase-money and the amount of costs incurred by him in the previous litigation. Held, that the defendant was not entitled to give evidence of his alleged title, and that the plaintiff was entitled to the relief sought by him. 49. ————— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 13—Suit for right to malikana and for registration of names—Decision in previous suit—Court of competent jurisdiction. Previous to 1825 dearah X accreted to mouzah Y, and some time before 1860 the maliks of Y executed two conveyances in favour of A and B respectively. In 1860 A sued B in the Munsif's Court for possession of a share in X, which B claimed under his conveyance. In that suit A succeeded on the ground that B's conveyance did not cover the share claimed by him in X, but merely covered the share in the mouzah itself, whereas by his conveyance A had acquired the right to the share in X, which he claimed. In 1866 the Collector refused to recognize B's right to malikana payable in respect of the share in X which had been the subject of the suit in 1860 or to register his name in respect thereof, but acknowledge A's right thereto, relying on the decision of the Civil Court in the suit between A and B. Subsequently B's representatives, C and D, in 1876 sought to have their names registered in respect of the same malikana, but they were opposed by E, who alleged that A had been acting throughout as his benamidar. Their application was eventually disallowed on reference by the Collector to the Civil Court. C and D thereupon instituted the present suit against E in the Court of the Subordinate Judge for a declaration of their right to the malikana and for a reversal of the order refusing to allow their names to be registered in respect thereof. Held, that the suit was barred as res judicata, on the ground that the right to malikana was substantially the same question as the proprietary right to the share in the dearah, and that this issue had been tried and decided in the suit in 1860 in favour of A, who must be taken to be E. In a suit for malikana the issue between the parties substantially raises the question of the proprietary right to the estate in respect of which the malikana is claimed, and when the question of the proprietary right has been decided in a previous suit between the same parties, a subsequent suit for malikana will be barred as res judicata. GOPINATH CHOBEY v. Afterwards A brought a suit against B for ejectment from the same land. B again pleaded his right of occupancy. Held, that B was not precluded from raising the same plea, inasmuch as the finding in the previous suit upon the issue whether B was an occupancy tenant was not conclusive against him nor could that issue be said to have been "finally decided" in that suit within the meaning of s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code. Run Bahadur Singh v. In a suit brought by a ghatwal to resume, as determinable at will, an under-tenure granted by one of his ancestors of land, part of the ghatwali mehal, it was alleged for the defence that the under-tenure was permanent. A prior judgment upon conflicting claims made by the ghatwal and the under-tenure-holders to receive the above-mentioned compensation-money, which had been paid in respect of lands in part comprised in the under-tenure, determined that the ghatwal was entitled to the money being founded on the under-tenure holders

Under such circumstances, the defendant is as much bound by the adverse decree as if he had set up the defence, and he is equally estopped from setting up that defence, in any future suit under similar circumstances. In a former suit for arrears of previous years in which the defendant pleaded that his tenure was istemrari, the plaintiff obtained a decree for ejectment on non-payment of rent within fifteen days. In that case the defendant saved his tenure by payment within the time stated. Held, that, inasmuch as the defendant might in the former suit, in which the nature of the tenure was put in issue, have urged that his tenure was both transferable and istemrari, he could not in the present suit be allowed to alter his defence and rely upon the tenure being transferable. Woomatara Debia v. In 1871 B sued A for a moiety of the R1,000 which A, in his suit in 1866, had admitted to be in his possession. Held, that such a suit could not be maintained, as the claim on which it was founded must be deemed a res judicata in A's suit in 1866. MAKTUM VALAD MOHIDIN v. 61. ————— Code of Civil Procedure, s. 13—Omission to bring forward in a prior suit what then would have been a defence—Accounts between mortgagor and mortgagee. A mortgage between parties who had accounts together comprised lands which also were leased by the mortgagors to the mortgagees, who in 1878 obtained a decree upon the mortgage, although at the time they owed to the mortgagors a considerable sum for rents. The mortgagors did not then set up the defence that they were entitled to have a general account taken and to have the mortgagee's decree limited to such balance as might be found to exist in favour of the latter. But the mortgagors alleged a specific agreement, which they failed to prove, that the rents were to be set off against the mortgage-debt; and they also stated their intention to sue separately for the rents due. No deduction was made in the decree upon the mortgage on account of these rents, for which, moreover, afterwards the mortgagors did obtain a decree. But the mortgagees executed their decree upon the mortgage, notwithstanding objections (which were disallowed in 1882), and, having obtained leave to bid at the judicial sale, purchased the property. In the present suit brought by the mortgagors to have the judicial sale set aside and to have the mortgage-debt extinguished, by having set off against it the rents which had already accrued, or might afterwards accrue, and for possession of the lands on the expiry of the lease:—Held, that, although an equity had been raised in favour of the mortgagors, that an account would have been taken, and that the rents payable should have been credited against the sums due by them, yet this equity could not be enforced in this suit. The proper occasion for enforcing it would have been in defence of the suit upon the mortgage; the present claim was within the meaning of s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure; and the plaintiffs were now barred from insisting on it, exceptione res judicata. *MAHABIR PERSHAD SINGH v. Pending the appeal to the High Court, two other daughters of the deceased, who had been parties defendants in the suit for partition, brought a suit by which they claimed a large share in the estate of the deceased as part of the dower debt due to their mother. In this suit they impleaded as defendants all the surviving descendants of their deceased father. Held, that the claim for dower should have been made a ground of defence in the former suit by the plaintiffs who had been defendants in the suit for partition, and that, as no such defence had been set up in that suit, the claim in respect of the dower debt fell within the purview of expl. 64. ————— Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), s. 13—Ancestral property—Partition—Omission to insist on property being brought into hotchpot—Property out of the jurisdiction—Subsequent suit for partition. The three defendants, G, R, and K, and their brother M, the grandfather of the plaintiff, were members of one family possessing undivided ancestral property consisting of the villages of B, P, and S, the two former being situated in the Poona Zillah and the latter in the Satara Zillah. In 1866 the three defendants (each in a separate suit) sued M in the Poona Courts for partition of the villages of B and P. They in their plaints alluded to the village of S, stating that it was their own and not subject to partition. M in his answer contented himself with denying the right to partition of the villages of B and P, and made no claim, in the alternative, to a share in the ownership of S. The plaintiff, the grandson of M, now sued the defendants in the Satara Courts for partition of the village of S, contending that he was not concluded from so doing by the former proceedings in the Poona Courts. Held, that the plaintiff's claim was res judicata, and that his suit was concluded under the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), s. 13, expls. I and II. A member of an undivided family, suing his co-parceners for partition of family property, is bound to bring into hotchpot any undivided property in his own possession, in order that there may be a complete and final partition, and cannot claim to withhold any such property on the ground that it is situated without another jurisdiction. That being so, the plaintiff's grandfather M having neglected in the previous suit to make the exception of the village of S a ground of defence, the judgment which followed involved that decision of every claim of title upon the cause of action, and must be taken between the parties as amounting to a positive adjudication of all such claims, including the claim to the village of S. *HARI NARAYAN BRAHME v. 65. ———— Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 13. S and B jointly sued N for the redemption of a mortgage of an 8-anna share of a village, B suing as the purchaser from the mortgagor of a moiety of such share. N did not in defence of such suit assert a right of pre-emption in respect of such moiety, although such right had accrued to him on its sale by the mortgagor to B. S and B obtained a decree in such suit, and the mortgage was redeemed. N subsequently sued B and his vendor to enforce his right of pre-emption in respect of such moiety. Held, that it was incumbent upon N in the former suit to have asserted in defence his right of pre-emption in respect of such moiety, inasmuch as, if that right had been established, it must, so far as B was concerned, have proved fatal to his title to redeem; and that, as he had not done so, the suit to enforce his right of pre-emption was barred by the provisions of s. 13 of Act X of 1877, expl. 66. ———— Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 13. B, who held a decree for money against I, caused certain property to be attached in execution of such decree as the property of his judgment-debtor. M, the wife of I, objected to such attachment, claiming such property as her own. Her objection was disallowed, and she consequently brought a suit against B to establish her right to such property. She died while that suit was pending, leaving by will such property to her sons. That suit proceeded in the names of her sons, who claimed such property under such will. The lower Courts only decided in that suit that such property belonged to M, and not to I, and it was therefore not liable to be sold in execution of B's decree against the latter. They did not consider the question whether M's sons were entitled to such property under their mother's will. In second appeal in that suit B contended that I, as heir to M, was entitled to a fourth share of such property, and such share was liable to be sold in execution of such decree. M's sons did not contend before the High Court that they were entitled to the whole of such property under their mother's will to the exclusion of I. The High Court allowed B's contention. B brought a fourth share of such property to sale in execution of his decree and purchased it himself. Thereupon M's sons sued him for such share, claiming it under their mother's will. Held, that their mother's will was a matter which should have been made a ground of defence by M's sons in the course of the trial of the second appeal in the former suit between them and B, and that, not having been so made, it was res judicata in the sense of s. 13, expl. 69. ———— Question not decided—Hindu widow, power of, to bind reversioners—Chur land—Jungleburi tenure. R, a Hindu widow, granted a jungleburi tenure to certain tenants in respect of a chur belonging to her husband's estate. An amulnama was granted to the tenure signed by a karpardaz of R in respect of the tenure. R died in January 1861, and was succeeded by J and P, two daughters, the last of whom died on the 31st December 1880. On her death, the grandsons succeeded to the estate. On R's death, J and P got possession of all estate papers, and amongst them a dowl granted by the tenants in return for the amulnama. In 1865 proceedings were taken by the tenants to obtain kabulyats on the footing of those documents which proceedings came to an end in 1868. In 1873 J and P instituted suits against the tenants, alleging the amulnama and dowl to be forgeries and seeking to enhance the rents payable to them as well as to have it declared that R's acts did not bind them. In these suits it was found that J and P had all along been aware of the claim made by the tenants that they held a permanent tenur, and the suits were dismissed on the ground that it was too late for J and P, after the lapse of twelve years from R's death, to raise the question. In 1884 D, a receiver, instituted a suit in the names of the grandsons to eject the tenants on amongst other grounds that the grandsons (reversioners) were not bound by R's acts, and that the jungleburi tenure was not binding on them; that the tenants were middlemen and had no right of occupancy; that at all events the plaintiffs were entitled to rent on the area of land then held by the defendants, as there had been large accretions to the amount covered by the amulnama and dowl. The defendant, amongst other things, pleaded res judicata, and that R had the power to grant the jungleburi tenure so as to bind the reversioners. Held, that the suit was not barred by res judicata, as in the suits brought by J and P the question of whether R's acts bound the reversioners was never decided.

70. ——— Specific performance—Decree in favour of plaintiff—Rectification of decree on application of defendant—Motion to set aside decree dismissed—Subsequent application to rectify decree. The plaintiff sued in 1877 for specific performance of an agreement, dated 27th September 1871, by which certain landed properties were to be divided, as specified in the agreement, between them and the defendants. The case came on for hearing on the 13th September 1878. The defendant did not appear, and a decree ex parte was made, which declared that the plaintiffs were entitled to have the agreement of the 27th September 1871 specifically performed, and referred the suit to the Commissioner for the preparation of conveyances, etc. The decree was sealed on the 9th October 1878. No further steps were taken by any of the parties for six years, and in September 1884 the matter was first brought before the Commissioner. He then directed the defendants to lodge with him all the title-deeds of the properties which by the agreement were to go to the plaintiff as their share. The defendants thereupon applied that the plaintiffs should be directed to lodge the title-deeds of the properties which by the agreement were to go to them, but the Commissioner refused to make this order, being of opinion that he was not authorized to do so under the decree which contained no direction to him in respect thereof. The defendants on the 10th November 1884 gave notice to the plaintiffs that they would apply to the Court—(i) “to set aside or vary its order of the 13th September 1878 so far as it related to the lodging of title-deeds, etc.; (ii) to appoint a receiver of certain properties mentioned in the agreement; (iii) to order the plaintiffs to deliver up to the defendants the properties which belonged to their share under the agreement; (iv) to order certain accounts to be taken.” This motion was not brought on until the 10th September 1885, on which day it was dismissed with costs, the Judge holding that the defendants had not shown sufficient cause to justify the setting aside of the decree under s. 108 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). The plaintiffs having still kept possession of certain of the properties which by the agreement were to go to the defendants, notice was given by the defendants to the plaintiffs on the 28th April 1887 that they would apply to the Court for an order that the plaintiffs should perform their part of the agreement of the 27th September 1871, so far as it remained unperformed by them, by giving up to the defendants possession of certain properties and by accounting for the rents thereof, etc., etc. At the hearing of this motion, counsel for the defendants asked that the decree should be rectified by directing that the agreement should be specifically performed by the plaintiffs and defendants respectively. The defendants contended that the application was barred by lapse of time, and that the question was res judicata by the order of the 10th September 1885. Held, also, that the motion was not res judicata by reason of the previous order of the 10th September 1885. Although the notice of motion then served by the defendants on the plaintiffs included matters in respect of which the defendants sought relief by their present application, the Judge in making the order dealt with them as ancillary to the first and main point raised in that motion, viz., the defendants' right to set aside the decree under s. 108 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). Having decided that point against them, he did not really consider the other points at all, and did not adjudicate upon them, and therefore the present application in respect of these matters was not res judicata. The plaintiff had claimed the value of the standing crop or damages for the same. The Court found that the plaintiff had paid the purchase-money, but had not got possession, and ordered defendant to execute a deed of sale. On failure of the defendant to do so, the Court executed a deed of sale in plaintiff's favour under s. 262 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). The plaintiff thereupon brought the present suit to recover possession on the strength of the deed of sale. Defendant pleaded that this second suit was barred under s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held, that the suit was not barred by s. 13, and that expl. 2 of that section was not applicable, because the object of that explanation would seem to be to compel the plaintiff to rely on all grounds which were open to him in support of the claim made by his plaint, which in the first suit was confined to obtaining a regular deed of sale. *NATHU PANDU v. One or other of the brothers then for some years managed the estate as shebait, and the survivor of them was succeeded by his son one of the defendants in the present suit, which was brought by the testator's only daughter as heiress to his estate, claiming that the Court should determine "those provisions which were valid and lawful, and those which were invalid and illegal." She claimed possession and an account, and also to be the shebait. In a previous suit the present shebait had obtained a decree, to which the daughter, now plaintiff, was a party defendant, affirming the validity of the will and the rights of the members of the family to be maintained under it. Held, that the question of the validity of all the provisions of the will having been substantially decided in the decree in the former suit, which pronounced that the will was wholly valid, passing the entire estate of the testator to the deb-sheba and maintaining the rights of members of the family under the will, this suit was barred under s. 13 of Act X of 1877 as to all but the claim to be shebait. *KAMINI DEVI v. The decree is usually insufficient for showing this, as, according to the Code, it only states the relief granted, if any, or other disposal of the suit, without the ground of decision and without affording information as to what may have been in issue and decided. The suit was to establish a right to land, and for possession, against two defendants, who alleged their rights retrospectively. The claimant had previously obtained a decree against one of the defendants, and in that decree the land now claimed had been excepted. Held, that the matter now in issue, not having been directly and substantially in issue in the prior suit, the present suit was not barred under s. 13. In the present suit the same plaintiff, as nearest reversioner, claimed possession of the property from the daughter of the mother, the latter having died since the prior suit; the daughter alleging title through her:—Held, that the judgment in the prior suit was admissible, and ought to be examined in the present suit, in order to see what that suit decided as to the reversioner's title. Kali Krishna Tagore v. Secretary of State for India, L. R. 15 I. A. 186; I. L. R. 16 Calc. 173, referred to and followed. 75. ——— Suit for redemption—Decree for redemption without proviso for foreclosure of payment within a fixed time—Subsequent suit by mortgagee for sale—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 13, expl. II. A decree for redemption which does not provide for payment of the mortgage-debt within a fixed time, or for foreclosure in case of default, operates of itself as a foreclosure decree, if not executed within three years, after such a decree is passed, it is not open to the mortgagee to file a suit to recover the mortgage-money by sale of the mortgaged property, his right of sale being barred under s. 13, expl. II, of the Code of Civil Procedure. On 12th November 1883 A obtained a decree for redemption on payment of a certain sum of money to B (the mortgagee). The decree contained no direction as to foreclosure or as to the time within which the payment was to be made. On 26th November 1884 B, the mortgagee, sued to recover the mortgage-debt by sale of the property mortgaged. On 8th April 1885 A paid into Court the sum directed to be paid by the redemption decree. B refused to accept the payment, and insisted upon his right of sale. Held, that the mortgagee having neglected to obtain a provision for sale in the redemption suit, as he might and ought to have done, if he wished to preserve the right of sale that right must be held, under expl. II of s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure, to have been a matter directly and substantially in issue in the former suit, and to have been in effect negatived by the judgment. MALOJI v. SAGAJI. I. The suits were tried together upon the same evidence, and were disposed of by a single judgment, but by separate decrees. In one of the suits the pre-emptor obtained a decree in the terms of s. 214 of the Civil Procedure Code. In the other, the pre-emptor obtained a decree, subject to the condition that, in the event of the first pre-emptor, failing to execute his decree, the second pre-emptor should be entitled to execute it. The decree in the first suit was not appealed, and became final. The second pre-emptor appealed from the decree in his own suit, upon the grounds that the amount ordered to be paid was excessive, and that the first pre-emptor had lost his right, and the decree in the second suit should not have been made subject to the condition above stated. Held, that, the appellant, if he desired to get rid of the decision regarding the first pre-emptor's preferential right, should have appealed against the first pre-emptor's decree, but that, that decree having become final, the question between the two pre-emptors could not be reopened on appeal from the second pre-emptor's decree. *CHAJJU v. their share of the rent of a certain piece of land which had formed part of the family estate. The plaintiffs relied in that suit upon a memorandum or agreement of partition executed in 1864. The defendant in that suit, however, contended that the family was still joint, and that the plaintiff could not claim a share of any particular piece of land, but must sue for partition of the whole property. At the hearing of that suit an issue was raised as to whether partition had taken place. The Court found in the affirmative and awarded the plaintiff's claim. In the present suit the plaintiffs sued the defendants (the sons of the defendants in the former suit) to recover possession of certain property which they alleged formed part of the share awarded to them at the partition of 1864, but of which they had been dispossessed by the defendants in 1873. The defendants denied that there had been any partition of the family property. Held, that the question of partition was res judicata and could not be raised again by the defendants. The question had been directly and substantially in issue in the former suit. No doubt, the dispute in that suit was as to a different piece of land, but there was no allegation that that land was held on any different tenure to the land now in suit. The plaintiffs there as now alleged that there had been a partition, and that they had a separate share. The defendants there contended, as the defendants now contended that there was no partition, and that the family estate was joint. The decree in that suit depended on that issue, and where the decree depends on an issue, the finding on that issue is binding as res judicata. The status of the family, having been thus tried and determined in the former suit, was binding on the parties in subsequent suits. ANANTA BALACHARYA v. DAMODHAR MAKUND

The plaintiff had a daughter named M. Both plaintiff and defendant had since H's death filed separate suits, in which they respectively claimed parts of his estate. In 1879 the defendant had filed a suit (No. 616 of 1879) against the executors of her father-in-law's will to recover certain money belonging to her husband. She obtained a decree, and the suit was referred to the Commissioner to make enquiries. In 1882 the present plaintiff F and her daughter M filed a suit (No. 227 of 1882) against the present defendant A, claiming a share of the estate of her deceased husband H. In that suit she alleged that she had been lawfully married to H and ever since cohabited with him, and that her child M was his legitimate daughter; and she prayed, inter alia, for declaration that she was the lawful wife, and that M was the lawful daughter of H. In the written statement filed by A in that suit, she alleged that F was not the lawful wife of H, but only his kept mistress, and she denied that F was entitled to a share in his property. On the 3rd May 1882, an order of reference was made by which both the above suits, viz., No. 616 of 1879 and No. 227 of 1882, "and all matters in difference therein" were by consent of all parties thereto referred to arbitration. The arbitrators were the respective attorneys of the parties. Awards were duly made, and on the 1st October 1883 decrees were passed in both suits in accordance with the said awards. By the decree and award in suit No. 227 of 1882 F was to be paid by A a sum of Rs55,000 in full satisfaction of all the claims of F and her daughter M upon the estate of H, the rest of the estate being declared the sole property of A. The material part of the decree was as follows: "This Court doth by consent pass judgment according of the said award . . . and doth order that the said A do pay for the said F to her attorneys, Messrs. Tyabji and Dhyabhai, within seven days after the date of this decree, the sum of Rs55,000 in full settlement of all and singular the claims and claim of the said F and M or either of them against or upon the estate of the said H whatsoever and whatsoever . . . and doth declare that upon the payment of the said sum of Rs55,000 by the said A to the said F as aforesaid, all claims whatsoever of the said F and M or either of them upon the estate of the said H in the hands of any person whatsoever or upon the said A as heir of the said H personally or otherwise howsoever, shall be considered to have been fully satisfied by the said A and absolutely waived for ever by the said F and M; and both further declare that the said A is entitled absolutely to all the rest of the estate and effects of the said H as her sole property as against the said F and M." The defendant A in 1882 also filed another suit (No. 198 of 1882) against her father-in-law's executors, and recovered certain ornaments which she alleged to be her stridhan. In October 1886 A married again, and in December 1887 F filed the present suit against her, alleging that by the law and custom of Cutchi Memons A had by reason of such second marriage forfeited all rights and interests to, and in the property of, her first husband H, and also to the ornaments which she had recovered in the last-mentioned suit, and she claimed that the said property and ornaments now belonged to her (F) as sole surviving widow of the said H. She prayed for a declaration that A had by her second marriage forfeited her right to the said property and ornaments, and that she (the plaintiff) was now entitled thereto; that the defendant might be ordered to deliver, etc., etc. The defendant A filed a written statement in which (inter alia) she contended that the plaintiff was never the wife of H, but had been merely his kept mistress; that in suit No. 227 of 1882 she (the defendant) had denied that the plaintiff F was the widow of H; that the award and decree in that suit were not made upon the basis of her (F's) being such widow, and she (the defendant) submitted that the said award and decree were a bar to the present suit. It was contended for the defendant (i) that the plaintiff had in the former suit prayed for a declaration that she had been the lawful wife of H; that the decree in that suit contained no such declaration, and that her prayer must therefore be taken to have been refused under s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), and that she was consequently not now entitled to sue as his widow—her claim to be his widow being res judicata; (ii) that the decree in suit No. 227 of 1882 expressly declared that the Rs55,000 awarded to the plaintiff by that decree was in full settlement of all her claim; and that she was therefore precluded from claiming against the estate in any possible contingency; and that therefore the defendant's re-marriage gave her no right to sue; (iii) that the latter part of the decree amounted to a release and assignment by the plaintiff F to the defendant of all her (the plaintiff's) right to the property in question. Held, that the status of the plaintiff as widow of H was not res judicata. The question of the plaintiff's marriage with H had not been controverted before the arbitrators and finally decided in a manner sufficient to establish res judicata. An award can only operate as an estoppel in respect of questions properly brought before and considered by the arbitrators. Expl. III of s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) does not apply where the Court is silent on a head of relief only claimed as ancillary to the main relief, and which by implication is rather granted than refused. It only applies where the Court is silent on an independent head of relief claimed and duly controverted. But held, that the award and release contained in the decree constituted a binding agreement, by which the plaintiff F for the sum of Rs55,000 waived all her rights against A, including the claim made in the present suit, which existed at the time of the award as a present right dependent on a contingency, and the suit therefore should be dismissed. FATMABAI v. AISHABAI

Held, on appeal, affirming the decision of Scott, J., that the present suit was not barred under s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) by reason of the former suit No. 227 of 1882. Although F litigated in the former suit as widow of H as she did in the present suit, the matters "substantially in issue" in the two suits were quite distinct. In the former suit she claimed her share in the estate of H as one of his lawful heirs entitled to succeed to him on his death. In the present suit her claim was based on a subsequent event, by reason of which she contended that A's share was by law and custom forfeited, and reverted to the estate of H. Held, also (affirming the decision of Scott, J.), that the status of plaintiff as widow of H was not res judicata. The plaint in suit No. 227 of 1882, no doubt asked for a declaration that she was the widow of H, and no such declaration had been made. But the declaration was not sought for by way of specific relief, but simply as the ground for the real and substantial relief to obtain which the suit was instituted, viz., the payment by A of F's share of H's estate. Expl. III of s. 13 was not intended to apply to such a case. Held (reversing the decision of SCOTT, J.), that the declaration in the former decree, that the Rs5,000 were paid to the plaintiff in full settlement of all her claims upon the estate, did not bar the present suit. The words of the award and decree were to be read with reference to the character in which the parties were litigating as widows of the deceased H claiming to succeed to his property on his death. Such general language was to be controlled by the circumstances of the case. Upon the proper construction of the award there was no such clear intention shown to include in the settlement a contingent claim of the special nature now made as to preclude the plaintiff from setting it up in the present suit. FATMABAI v. AISHABAI

80. ———— Claim in part included in former suit which was dismissed—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 13, 42, 43, and 212—Reference to pleadings and judgment to explain decree—Omission of portion of claim in former suit—Mesne profits—Oudh Rent Act (XIV of 1868), s. 111. That a claim has been included in a previous suit without its having been directly and substantially put in issue and decided, does not upon the dismissal of that suit preclude a subsequent suit upon it. A consent decree of 1873 decided that alluvial land belonged to the plaintiff's village Sipah. The area was judicially determined in 1876 on a map of 1874, but actual possession was not obtained from the defendant, who owned villages on the opposite side of the river. The decree-holder in 1877 included a claim for part of the same land in a suit for an accretion to another of his riparian villages, Khasapur, and the latter suit was wholly dismissed. To get possession of the land decreed in 1873, he then brought rent-suits against two tenants upon it, the defendant intervening under s. 111 of the Oudh Rent Act, 1868. Both the rent-suits were dismissed; and according to the right reserved in the latter section the plaintiff, to establish his title in the competent Court, brought the present suit, including in it the land which he had made part of his claim in the dismissed suit of 1877. Held, on the question whether the dismissal of the suit of 1877 precluded a further suit for that part of the land which had been included in it, that it did not, and that s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code was inapplicable. The pleadings and judgment in the suit of 1877 were referred to, showing that what belonged to Sipah had not been in issue, and that nothing respecting it had been heard or decided. Held, also, as to the rest of the land claimed in this suit, that there was no bar on account of its omission from the suit of

81. ———— Suit for land identical with land given in previous decree—Proof of identity where decree did not specify boundaries—Long possession. The proprietary possession of alluvial land was claimed upon the averment that, having been gained as an accretion to the plaintiff's village, it had been wrongly excluded from settlement with the latter, in consequence of a prior decree which, however, had not decreed the land to the defendants, as they alleged it to have done. In pursuance of that decree, which was made in 1865, the land had been, according to the evidence taken by the defendants in whose possession it was in 1868; from which date till 1883, when the present suit was brought, that land had been treated, alike by the Government authorities and by the defendants, as belonging to the latter. Had the question been one of limitation, the possession of the defendants for a period of twelve years would not have been sufficient to exclude this claim by the plaintiff, the Government, to recover whatever could have been shown to be its property. The question, however, was not one of limitation; and the fact of the possession having been retained for so long a period was used by the defendants, not to make a title, but to define or identify the land which the decree of 1865 had awarded to them. Although the specification of the boundaries (which had been merely by reference to the plaint which mentioned adjoining villages) had been ineffectual, the acts of the parties had been such as to fix the meaning of the terms used; and it was established by the evidence that the land now claimed was identical with that which had been made over under the decree of 1865, to which it related. *SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA v. 82. ———— Transfer of interest—Civil Procedure Code, s. 13—Appointment of a creditor as agent to collect rents and appropriate part towards the debt. In a suit to redeem a kanom on certain land, the jenm of a devasom in Malabar, it appeared that the plaintiff held a melkanom in respect of the same land executed to him (subsequently to the date of the kanom sought to be redeemed), by defendant 3, the samudayam of the devasom. Defendant 3 represented one C, in whose favour the uralers had in 1741 executed a document appointing him samudayam and stating that they had received from him a kanom of 18,000 fanams on the devasom properties, and providing that he should appropriate part of the rents towards the loan. It appeared that in a suit to eject tenants, the uralers had sued as co-plaintiffs with the samudayam; in subsequent suits, however, two of the uralers had sued other tenants for rent and the samudayam for an account; both of these suits were dismissed on second appeal, and in the judgments of the High Court the samudayam was described as a mortgagee in possession. Held, (i) on its appearing that no opinion was expressed in the former suits as to the construction of the document of 1741, that the former decisions had not the force of res judicata; (ii) in view of the conduct of the parties and on the terms of the document of 1741, that the samudayam was not thereby constituted a mortgagee in possession, and that the melkanom set up by the plaintiff was invalid. KRISHNAN v. VELOO . . . I. L. R. 14 Mad. 301

83. — Creditor of a devasom placed in possession as samudayam—Civil Procedure Code, s. 13. In a suit brought by the uralers of a devasom in Malabar to recover certain land in the possession of the defendant it appeared that the defendant held under an instrument dated 1741, whereby his predecessor in title was appointed samudayam, and was authorized to appropriate part of the rents of the devasom properties to the interest on a loan made by him to the uralers. Two of these uralers had brought a previous suit against the defendant for an account of the rents received by him and for an injunction; that suit was dismissed on second appeal when the High Court described the defendant as a mortgagee in possession, but the question whether or not he was a mortgagee with or without possession was not then directly and substantially in issue. Held, that the status of the defendant was not res judicata by reason of the judgment in the previous suit. RAMAN v. SHATHANATHAN . . . I. L. R. 14 Mad. 312

84. — Matter which should have been ground of attack in former suit—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 13, 43. The widow daughter and divided brother of a deceased Hindu executed an instrument which provided for the distribution of his property, both moveable and immoveable, as to which they had disputed. The document was not registered. The widow set up a will made by the deceased in her favour; the brother sued the widow for a declaration that the will was a forgery, but the Court held that it was genuine. He now sued the widow and daughter on the above instrument to recover his agreed share of the moveable property of the deceased. The widow set up the will, which the plaintiff averred was invalid according to the custom governing the family. Held, that the plaintiff was not precluded by the decree in the former suit from impugning the validity of the will. THANDAVAN v. VALLIAMMA . . . I. L. R. 15 Mad. 336

85. — Question as to whether decree is binding—Decree amended after execution to conform with judgment—Decision in suit to set aside sale under amended decree. In a suit for money against the karnavan and two anandravans of a Malabar tarwad, the judgment directed a "decree for the plaintiffs as prayed," but the decree ordered payment by one anandravan only. Property of the tarwad was attached and sold. The decree was then amended and brought into conformity with the judgment. Other members of the tarwad sought to have the sale set aside, but it was found that the judgment-debt had been contracted for proper tarwad purposes, and that suit was dismissed. Application was now made for the attachment of other property of the tarwad in further execution of the amended decree. Held, that the members of the tarwad were not entitled to contend that the decree was not binding on them, that matter being res judicata. CHATHAPPAN v. PYDEL I. L. R. 15 Mad. 403

86. — Usufructuary mortgage—Suit by mortgagee for possession—Decree for possession—Subsequent suit by mortgagor for redemption. In 1864 the lands in dispute were mortgaged under an agreement that the mortgagee should hold the lands and apply the profits towards the satisfaction of the mortgage-debt. In 1869, the mortgagor having obstructed the mortgagee, the latter filed a suit for removal of the obstruction and for confirmation of his possession. He obtained a decree ordering that he should retain possession till the debt was paid off from the usufruct. In 1885 the mortgagor filed a suit for redemption. The defence to this suit was that it was barred by the decree in the former suit. Held, that the suit was not so barred, the relative rights of mortgagor and mortgagee not having been adjudicated upon in the former suit. NARSINHA MANOHAR v. BHAGVANTRAY I. L. R. 14 Bom. 327

87. — Suit by purchaser against mortgagee for possession—Issue raised by mortgagor impeaching bonâ fides of sale—Decree for plaintiff without recording finding on issue—Subsequent suit for redemption by mortgagor against mortgagees impeaching sale as fraudulent and void. In 1874 the plaintiff mortgaged certain property to R D and R L. In 1877 the mortgagees sold it by auction to one K who in the following year sued the mortgagor for possession. The defendants in that suit filed a written statement impeaching K's title under the alleged sale—and at the hearing an issue was raised as to whether the plaintiff (K) was the purchaser of the premises bonâ fide and for valuable consideration. The plaintiff (K) obtained a decree in that suit, but no finding on the said issue was recorded. The plaintiff in the present case was the son of the mortgagee, and he now sued to redeem the property and for a declaration that the alleged sale by the mortgagees was fraudulent and void as against him. He contended that in the former suit he did not intend to allege that the sale was not bonâ fide, but merely that it took place without due notice and was impeachable on that ground, and he relied on the fact that there had been no finding on the issue. Held, that the present suit was barred by the issue and decree in the former suit. In that suit the plaintiff (K) had given evidence that he was the bonâ fide purchaser of the property. Though no actual finding on that issue was recorded, the decree passed for the plaintiff necessarily involved the finding of the issue in the affirmative. RAMKRISNA JAGANNATH v. VITHAL RAMJI I. L. 88. ——— Cross-appeals heard separately—Civil Procedure Code, s. 13. The plaintiff and defendant in a suit each appealed separately and defendant's appeal first came on for hearing, and an issue as to whether the plaintiff or the defendant had title to the land in dispute was decided on the facts by the Appellate Court adversely to the defendant. Subsequently, the plaintiff's appeal, involving the same issue, came on for hearing before the same Court. Held, that, although s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code did not apply, still the principle of res judicata applied, and the finding on the former appeal barred the trial of the same issue in the latter. Ram Kirpal v. Rup Kuari, I. L. R. 6 All. 269; L. R. 11 I. A. 37, referred to. RAM LAL v. CHHEB NATH . . . I. L. R. 12 All. 578

89. ——— Finding in judgment in conflict with terms of decree—Civil Procedure Code, s. 13—Immaterial issue in suit. The decree in a suit gave the plaintiff an unrestricted right to the property claimed by him, but in the judgment on which that decree was based it was stated the finding apparently not being a finding on any material issue in the suit, that the defendants were entitled to certain rights in respect of the property decreed to the plaintiff. No application was made to bring the decree into conformity with the judgment, and the decree as it stood was affirmed on appeal. Held, that the defendants, as plaintiffs in a subsequent suit between the same parties relating to the same property, could not plead the finding in their favour in the judgment as constituting res judicata in the face of the clear wording of the decree. INDARJIT PRASAD v. RICHHA RAI . . . I. L. R. 15 All. 3

90. ——— Decree not in accordance with judgment—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 13, 244—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), ss. 88, 89—Interpretation of decree. Where a mortgagee in suing upon his mortgage included in his plaint certain property which was not included in the mortgage-deed, and this fact was apparently overlooked by the defendant who defended the suit, and where, while the judgment declared "that a decree be given against the hypothecated estate," in the decree the property affected was described as "the property specified in the plaint." Held, that the decree must be held to mean the hypothecated property mentioned in the plaint, and that neither s. 13 nor s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure concluded the defendant from subsequently suing to recover the property wrongly included in the plaint. *RAM CHANDER v. 91. ——— Contentions not raised by way of defence in former suit—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 13, 43. In a suit to recover possession of the impartible zamindari of Sivaganga, it appeared that the istimrar zamindar died in 1829, and that after an interval of wrongful possession by his brother and his descendants, his daughter established her title to succeed him and was placed in possession in 1864. She died in 1877, leaving the present plaintiff, her son, and three daughters her surviving. A suit was then brought by the father of the present defendant, who was the son of her elder sister (deceased), against the present plaintiff and the daughters of the late Rani for possession of the zamindari, to which he claimed to be entitled by right of inheritance. A decree was passed for the plaintiff in that suit, under which he obtained possession of the zamindari and retained it until his death in 1883, when he was succeeded by the present defendant. The plaintiff now sued as above, claiming that the right to the zamindari had devolved on him, and not on the defendant, on the death of the plaintiff in the former suit. Held, (i) that the defendant's father had not succeeded to a qualified heritage nor to a mere right of management of joint family property in which the plaintiff had a right of survivorship, but that he had succeeded to the estate as full owner and had therefore become a fresh stock of descent; (ii) that accordingly nearness or remoteness of relationship to the istimrar zamindar was immaterial, and the defendant's right of succession was not affected by the fact that the whole class of the istimrar zamindar's daughters' sons had not been exhausted. Held, also, that the plaintiff was not precluded from raising the contentions to which the above rulings relate by reason of their not having been raised by way of defence to the suit brought against him by the defendant's father. *MUTTUVAIDUGANATHA TEVAR v. 92. ——— Execution-proceedings—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 13, 272—Matter which ought to have been raised as a ground of defence. A and B obtained a decree against X and Y, on which about R9,000 was due. Z obtained a decree against A and B, on which about R9,400 was due, and in execution attached the first-mentioned decree. A and B first alleged in the matter of the execution of their decree for the first time that the suit against them had been instituted really by X, though in the name of his son Z, and consequently contended that the decree amount, which they paid into Court, was the property of X and so liable to satisfy their claim. The above allegation was substantiated, and Z's claim on the money in Court was disallowed on appeal. Held, (i) that A and B were not precluded from asserting their claim to the money in Court by reason of the above allegation not having been made by way of defence to the suit of Z; (ii) that A and B were entitled to enforce any claim which X might enforce, for the purpose of satisfying their decree, and accordingly that Z's claim on the money in Court was rightly disallowed. *ATCHAYYA v. 93. ——— Question substantially in issue in former suit—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 13, expl. 2—Reversioner. A widow purported to charge land which she held for her widow's estate with payment of a debt, and afterwards surrendered her estate to the next heir, or reversioner, on condition that he should pay all her debts, and a suit was brought by the creditor after the death of the widow against the reversioner to recover the debt. This suit had been preceded by another one brought by the creditor against both the widow, then alive, and the reversioner, the cause of action against the latter being that in his hands was the property chargeable. That suit was dismissed as against him, but decreed against the widow. In the present suit payment was claimed from him of a balance of the deceased widow's debt, on the ground that he had agreed, on taking the surrender of the estate from her, to become responsible for her debts. Held, that this "might and ought to have been made ground of attack" in the former suit within the expl. 2 of s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code, and must accordingly be deemed to have been directly and substantially in issue in the former suit, and therefore that this suit was barred. The Acts of 1877 and 1882 did not alter the previous state of the law. KAMESWAR PERSHAD v. RAJKUMARI RUTTAN KOER. I. L. R. 20 Cal. 79. L. R. 19 I. A. 234

94. ——— Matter which might have been a ground of defence in a former suit—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 13, expl. 2. A defendant in a suit for the recovery of possession of immovable property pleaded only a right to the proprietary possession of the property in suit in himself. This defence failed, and a decree was given in favour of the plaintiff. Subsequently the plaintiff sold a portion of the property so decreed to them, and the quondam defendant brought a suit for pre-emption. Held, that the suit must fail, inasmuch as the plaintiff's claim was one which he might have made when defendant in the former suit as an alternative to his defence of title. *Moottoo Vijaya, etc. v. 95. ——— Unnecessary issue—Finding on an unnecessary issue inserted in decree—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 13. The plaintiff attached certain property in execution of a decree obtained by him against one J, the widow of one R. The defendant G intervened and claimed the house as having been purchased by him from one S, to whom, he alleged, J had sold it before the date of the decree against her. The plaintiff's attachment was removed, and the plaintiff thereupon brought a suit (No. 670 of 1886) to establish his right to sell the house in execution. The Court found that the house was not J's and dismissed the suit on that ground, but it also recorded a finding that the sales set up by the defendant were fraudulent and collusive. Subsequently the plaintiff obtained a decree against M, the son of R, and in execution again attached

the house. The defendant again intervened, alleging that the house was his, and the attachment was removed. Thereupon the plaintiff filed this suit to establish his right to sell in execution. The defendant again pleaded that he was owner of the house by reason of the sales set up by him in the former suit. It was argued that these sales had been proved to be collusive and fraudulent in an issue raised in that suit, and that the defence in the present suit was therefore res judicata. Held, that the defence was not res judicata. The former suit had been decided on the finding that the property in question was not J's. The finding in that suit on the issue as to the sales to the defendant was not necessary for the determination of the suit. Where an issue is not necessary for the decision of the suit in which it is raised, the decree couched in general terms does not cover the finding on that issue, nor can the insertion of such finding in the decree give it the force of res judicata. The Civil Procedure Code does not contemplate findings on issues being inserted in it (see ss. 2 and 6 and sch. IV), and there is no section in the Code which makes it necessary to appeal from the decree, because such finding has been inserted in it. GHELA ICHHARAM v. SANKALCHAND JETHA. I. L. R. 18 Bom. 597

96. ——— Finding in judgment not embodied in decree and not essential to the making of the decree as framed—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 13. A finding in a judgment to operate as res judicata, the Court being a Court of jurisdiction competent to try the subsequent suit must be material and necessary to support the precise and particular ground or grounds on which the decree or some operative part of it was made, otherwise the finding must be considered either as superseded by the decree, or as entirely immaterial, or as no more than incidental and subsidiary to the main question in the suit, although in the latter case the finding may have been necessary to the decision of the suit. The finding of fact to operate as res judicata need not have been the sole finding of fact upon which the decree was made, but it must have been a material and necessary finding of fact, material and necessary in the sense that the fact must have been found as it was found in the judgment, and could not have been found otherwise, for the decree as it was made to have been a good result in law from the fact or facts so found. Further, if there were two findings of fact either of which would justify in law the making of the decree which was made, that one of such two findings of fact which should in the logical sequence of necessary issues have been first found, and the finding of which would have rendered the other of such two findings unnecessary for the making of the decree which was made, is the finding which can operate as res judicata. A matter cannot be said to be "directly and substantially in issue" within the meaning of the first paragraph of s. 13 of Act XIV of 1882 unless and until it is, or becomes, material for the decision of the suit to find as to it. The framing of issues

under s. 146 of Act XIV of 1882, on which at that stage of the suit the right decision of the case appears to depend, does not of itself make the matter to which such issues relate "directly and substantially in issue" within the meaning of s. 13, although when the finding upon any one or more of the issues is sufficient for the decision of the suit, it may be desirable that the Court should state in its judgment its finding or decision upon each separate issue which it had framed. In a suit brought by one A against C for damages for not removing certain offensive matter from his land, the questions raised were, whether there was notice, and whether the defendant was bound to remove the filth from the plaintiff's property. The Court having found that there was no notice, which in its opinion was a ground sufficient for dismissal of the suit under s. 363 of the Bengal Municipal Act and also upon the merits, having come to the conclusion that the defendant was not bound to remove the offensive matters from the plaintiff's land, dismissed the suit. In a subsequent suit between the same parties, the plaintiff claiming the same relief as in the previous suit, the defence was that the suit was barred as res judicata. Held, that, inasmuch as the matter directly and substantially in issue in the subsequent suit was directly and substantially in issue in the previous suit, and as it was finally heard and decided between the same parties, notwithstanding the fact that the previous suit failed by reason of the decision of the Court upon some other matter as well, the subsequent suit was barred as res judicata. *Shib Charan Lal v. expl. 2—Suit for declaration of baradari rights—Subsequent suit for assertion of khadimi rights. S. 13, expl. 2, of the Code of Civil Procedure, applies only to cases in which the plaintiff, having on a former occasion sued for certain relief on the strength, of one title, afterwards claims the same relief on the ground of another title of which he might have availed himself in the former suit. It does not apply to cases where the subject-matters of the two suits are different. The plaintiffs, in the year 1881, instituted a suit for a declaration of private baradari rights in connection with the daily receipts and offerings at a certain Mahomedan place of worship, alleging that the defendants had dispossessed them on the 27th September 1881; but they did not assert any claim as khadims. The suit was decreed, but the decree was reserved on appeal. On the 7th March 1892, the plaintiffs instituted a suit for a declaration that they were the khadims of a certain durga and, as such, entitled to perform the duties attached to that office for 21 days in each month, and during that period to receive the offerings made by worshippers at the durga. They also claimed an injunction restraining the defendants from interfering with them in the exercise of that office. The plaintiffs claimed their khadimi rights partly by inheritance and partly by purchase, a custom of transferability by sale having been long recognized. Held, that the relief claimed in the second suit was not res judicata, the subject-matters of the two suits being distinct. Denobundhoo Chowdhury v. Kristomonee Dossee, I. L. A suit was brought by A against B and others for rent; and the matter directly and substantially in issue was as to what the share was for which A was entitled to rent. The plaintiff obtained a decree for the whole rent. In a subsequent suit by B and others against A for declaration of title to land purchased by them in execution of their mortgage decree, the defence was that the former decree for rent operated as res judicata. Held, that, as the issue in the rent suit was for what share the plaintiff was entitled to rent, and not to what share of the property was the plaintiff entitled as owner, the question of title could be said to have been in issue in that suit only incidentally and not directly, and it could not have been entertained in the form in which it was now

In a previous suit brought by the plaintiff for rent the defendant denied the relationship of landlord and tenant, but he did not plead that the plaintiff was a mere benamidar. The plaintiff obtained a decree. In a subsequent suit by the same plaintiff against the same defendant for rent for subsequent years, the defendant, inter alia, contended that the plaintiff was a mere benamidar. The plaintiff objected that the previous decree was a bar to defendant's contention. Held, that, even if the matter in issue might and ought to have been made a defence in the former suit, yet as it was not finally heard and decided by the Court within the meaning of s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the defendant was not precluded in this suit from raising the objection that the plaintiff was a mere benamidar. *KAILASH MONDUL v. In a subsequent suit by the plaintiff against the same defendants for khas possession of certain land, the defence was that the land in dispute was their lakhiraj land, and that the judgment in the previous suit operated as res judicata. Held, that, though the previous suit was one for rent, yet the issue upon the question whether the land was mâl or lakhiraj was raised directly in that suit, and therefore the subsequent suit was barred as res judicata. *Radhamadhub Holdar v. In 1882 the minor sued by his next friend to have the consent decree set aside on the ground that it had been obtained by fraud practised on the guardian ad litem. That suit was dismissed. In 1884 an application was unsuccessfully made in the original suit objecting that the compromise had been entered into without the sanction of the Court. The minor, having attained majority, now sued to have the consent decree set aside on the ground that it had not been sanctioned by the Court under Civil Procedure Code, s. 462. Held, that the suit was barred by the decree in the suit of 1882 for the reason that the want of sanction might and ought to have been made a ground of attack in that suit. *ARUNACHALAM CHETTY v. respectively by the plaintiff and the defendant. Long previously to 1872, the defendant's branch got into sole possession, and in that year a family settlement was arrived at by which it was arranged that the offices should be held in rotation and the lands in equal shares; and, in accordance with this settlement, a certain village forming part of the endowment was delivered to the plaintiff's branch of the family. In 1889 the defendant brought a suit to recover a moiety of that village, and an issue was raised whether he enjoyed the offices and the landed property in his independent right or as a servant for wages. His suit was dismissed on the ground that the offices and emoluments were indivisible and went by right to the older branch of the family. The plaintiff now sued in 1895 to establish his right to the entire offices and to recover possession of the other village. Held, that it was open to the defendant to assert in this suit a title by adverse possession as that had been made a ground of attack, though not the basis of his claim in the former suit. *ALAGIRISAMI NAICKAR v. Suits by different partners for specific sums of money on adjustment of accounts—Partnership—Accounts adjusted by Ameen appointed in previous suits—Civil Procedure Code, s. 13, expls. 2 and 3, and s. 43—Contract Act, s. 265. After dissolution of a certain partnership, two separate suits were brought in 1889 by different partners for specific sums of money due to them, and, in the alternative, for such other amount as might be found due on an adjustment of accounts. Objections were raised against these suits on the grounds, inter alia, (i) that the suits were barred by the provisions of s. 265 of the Indian Contract Act; (ii) that separate suits for the same matter were not maintainable; (iii) that the suits would not lie in the Munsif's Court; and (iv) that, accounts having been already adjusted, there was no cause of action. The Munsif overruled the first three objections, and held, as regards the fourth that the adjustment pleaded had been ratified by the plaintiffs; he appointed an Ameen, who examined the accounts and ascertained the respective claims of the partners, and the plaintiffs in those suits obtained decrees on the basis of the Ameen's adjustment of account. The present suits were brought in 1891 by certain other partners, who were defendants in the suits of 1889, on the allegation that the partnership account had been already adjusted by the Ameen appointed in the suits of 1889, and that the debts and dues of all parties had been determined by the Court. The plaintiffs prayed for recovery of the amount due to them under the Ameen's adjustment, and, in the alternative, for such other relief as might be deemed proper by the Court to grant them against any of the defendants. Held, by NORRIS and BANERJEE, JJ. (RAMPINI, J., dissenting).—That neither s. 13 nor s. 43 of the Civil Procedure Code was a bar to the present suits, the issue now in suit not having been determined in the former suits.

107. Ground of defence not raised in previous suit—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 43—Relief not asked for in previous suit—Circumstances giving right to such relief not known at date of previous suit—Constructive notice of possession. The plaintiffs, who were the junior members of a Malabar edom, of which defendants Nos. 3 to 5 were the senior members, sued to recover with mesne profits possession of certain property offering to pay the amount of a kanom advanced by defendant No. 1. It appeared that the land had been the subject of a kanom demise in 1865, and that defendant No. 3, the then karnavan, had obtained in 1878 a decree for its redemption, the right to execute which he assigned to a stranger, who executed it, and took possession of the property, taking from the karnavan a new kanom deed. Subsequently defendants Nos. 4 and 5 obtained a decree for possession and the cancellation of both the assignment and the kanom deed; but this decree was attached in execution-proceedings in another suit and purchased by defendant No. 1, who executed it, purchased the property, deposited the kanom amount, and took possession on the 8th March 1884. The plaintiffs, who had meanwhile taken abortive proceedings to defeat the first defendant's title, instituted a suit in August 1884, praying for a decree that the sale to him be set aside without praying for possession. It was now found that the plaintiffs at that time were not aware that defendant No. 1 was in possession, and he did not plead that fact as a defence to the suit for a declaration merely. Held, that the plaintiffs were not affected by constructive notice of the defendant's possession in 1884 by reason of the fact that their karnavan, with whom they were not acting, was aware of the defendant's previous application for execution, and that the suit was not barred by the Civil Procedure Code, s. 43. Semle: That apart from the question of the plaintiffs' notice of the first defendant's possession, since he had not pleaded possession in the suit of 1884, he could not fall back upon the fact that his possession dated from March 1884, as a ground of defence to the present action. *SANKARAN v. Plaintiff now brought the present suit for the amount, framing his claim as for the enforcement of a lien for unpaid purchase-money. Held, that the suit was barred by Explan. The fifth defendant in that suit now sued, as plaintiff in the present suit, for a declaration that a sale of the same mortgaged property was invalid. His present claim was based on the allegation that his mortgage had priority over the mortgage on which the decree had been obtained, in execution of which the property had been sold; and that mortgage was held by one of his co-defendants in the previous suit. The Court held that the whole mortgage-debt had been paid off in 1883, and awarded possession to the plaintiff, but made no order as to surplus profits. The defendant appealed. The plaintiff did not appeal, nor did he file objections to the decree, which was confirmed by the Appellate Court. suit by the mortgagee to recover profits of the mortgaged property for period between recovery of possession by mortgagor and payment of amount of appellate decree—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 13, Expl. II. On the 25th September, 1893, a decree in a redemption suit directed the plaintiffs (mortgagors) to pay to the defendant (mortgagee) Rs. 200 and costs within six months from its date, and to redeem the mortgaged property. The plaintiffs paid Rs. 200 and costs on 4th December 1893, i.e., within the six months, and obtained possession in March, 1894. In the meanwhile the defendant preferred an appeal, and the judgment in appeal, dated the 2nd September, 1895, varied the decree by substituting Rs. 9,809-9-9 for Rs. 200, and directed that the six months' time should run from its date. The balance of Rs. 1,609-9-9 was paid by the mortgagors in March, 1896. Subsequently the legal representatives and heirs of the mortgagee brought the present suit against the representatives of the mortgagors to recover the profits of the mortgaged property for the period intervening between the date at which they obtained possession (March, 1894) and the date at which they paid the full amount ordered by the appellate decree (March, 1896). The first Court allowed the claim, but on appeal by the defendants the Judge varied the decree by reducing the amount awarded. On second appeal:—Held, that the matter was res judicata and the suit was barred, the question raised being one arising directly out of the mortgage transaction which was the subject-matter of the litigation in the former suit. *VINAYAK SHIVRAO DIGHE v. that B had been dealing with the lands as if he (B) were the owner, and had mortgaged them to C. C was made a defendant in the suit. B pleaded that he was the owner of the land, and not merely agent of A. C also pleaded that B was owner, and he produced the mortgage-deed and stated that if he were paid his debt he would not dispute A's claim. The term in C's mortgage-deed was one year, at the end of which, if the debt were not paid, C was to be at liberty to enforce his charge. A prayed merely for possession, and no issue was raised or relief asked in respect of C's mortgage. The Court held that B was agent, not owner, and gave A a decree for possession. Subsequently, on the expiration of the year allowed in the mortgage-deed, C sued A and B to enforce his mortgage, alleging that, even though B might not be owner, A had allowed B to deal with the land and to hold himself out as owner, and that thus the mortgage was valid. Both the lower Courts held that the suit was res judicata, under Expl. II of s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code, on the ground that C's present claim might and ought to have been made a ground of defence in the former suit brought by A. Held, reversing the decisions of the lower Courts, that the suit was not barred, as no relief was asked or granted as against C in the former suit, though he was a party to it. *RAMDAS v. 117. ———— "Subjects in dispute"—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 13 (Expl. II), 42, 43. The phrase "the subjects in dispute," in s. 42 of the Code of Civil Procedure, signifies the jural relation between the parties to the suit, for the determination of which the suit is brought. The object of the section is to require the plaintiff to bring forward his whole case as to the matter of litigation on the question of right involved in the suit, and not to require him to unite all the causes of action which he may have against the defendant in respect of the corpus or object-matter of the suit. Though the subject of res judicata is dealt with more comprehensively in the present Code than in the former Code, yet ss. 42 and 43 are not exhaustive of the law of res judicata. That law has been the same under both the old and the new Codes, and it is substantially the same as the English law. The decision of the Privy Council in Kameswar Pershad v. Rajkumari Ruttan, 1. L. R. 20 Calc. 79, explained. Neither of the decisions of the Privy Council in Woomatara Debia v. Unnopoorna Dassee, 11 B. L. R. 158, and Kameswar Pershad v. Rajkumari, 1. L. R. 20 Calc. 79, supports the proposition that a plaintiff who seeks to redeem a specific mortgage or to eject on a specific lease, and fails in such because the mortgage or lease is not proved, is thereby precluded from seeking to redeem the same property or a portion thereof from another specific mortgage, or to eject on the strength of his title the person in possession. The real test is whether the cause of action or transaction on which the two suits are based is the same, and not whether the transaction is sought to be established in different modes or by different means. In a previous suit the present plaintiff, claiming as the legal representative of a deceased mortgagor, sued substantially the same defendants to redeem a usufructuary mortgage alleged to have been executed in 1856 over about 50 cawnies of land. The defendants denied the genuineness of the mortgage, and pleaded that 14 out of the 50 cawnies had been usufructuarially mortgaged to them in 1853, and they claimed that these 14 cawnies, as well as the remaining 36, had been sold to them subsequently. That suit was dismissed on the ground that the mortgage sued on had not been proved (the question of plaintiff's position as legal representative, which was challenged, not being decided). In 1897, plaintiff brought the present suit to redeem the 14 cawnies on the footing of the mortgage of 1853 which had been pleaded by the defendants in the previous suit. Held, that the suit was not barred by s. 43 or s. 13, Expl. II, of the Code of Civil Procedure. Arunachalam Chetty v. Meyyappa Chetty, I. L. R. 21 Mad. 91, and Rangasami Pillai v. Krishna Pillai, I. L. R. 22 Mad. 259, discussed. Guddappa v. Tirkappa, I. ✓ 118. — Suit for rent—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 13—Khoti Settlement Act (Bom. Act I of 1880), s. 33—Suit to recover thal (rent in kind) for 1898-99—Previous suit to recover thal for 1897-98. The plaintiff, a khot, sued to recover thal (rent in kind) from the defendants for the year 1898-99. He also claimed rent for the betel-nut trees growing on the land. The defence was that, under the botkhat (statement) prepared by the Settlement-officer under the Khoti Settlement Act (Bom. Act I of 1880), the plaintiff was not entitled to claim any rent in respect of the betel-nut trees. A previous suit (No. 718 of 1898) had been brought by the plaintiff against the defendants to recover thal for the year 1897-98. In it the plaintiff had claimed (inter alia) rent (thal) in respect of the same betel-nut trees, alleging that the present defendants were "liable to pay thal to the plaintiff according to practice." The defendants appeared, and applied for time to put in their written statement, but their application was refused. The only issue raised in the case was whether the abharani (estimated produce) was proved. The Judge held it proved, and decreed the claim. It was contended in the present suit that the decision in that suit (No. 718 of 1898) operated as res judicata. Held, by FULTON, J., that the decision in suit No. 718 of 1898 did not bar the defence based on s. 33 of the Khoti Settlement Act (Bom. Act I of 1880). The mere fact that in the former suit thal, or the produce of betel-nuts, may have been wrongly awarded could not alter the provisions of the law, and therefore, under the circumstances, no question of res judicata arose. Held by CHANDAVARKAR, J., that the claim in respect of the betel-nut trees was not res judicata by the decision in the previous suit. The plaintiff, in his plaint in that suit, did not allege what was the rate according to practice, or that according to practice the defendants were liable to pay thal in respect of betel-nuts. He merely specified betel-nuts as one of the items in respect of which thal was payable to him for the year 1897-98, and the rate at which it was payable that year. The question of defendants' liability in respect of betel-nuts, not only for the year 1897-98, but for all years, according to practice was not alleged, and was therefore not directly and substantially in issue in the previous suit. All that the former suit decided was that thal was payable in respect of betel-nuts for the year 1897-98 as alleged and claimed in the plaint, and not according to practice. Held, also, on the merits, that, having regard to the Collector's botkhat (statement), the plaintiff was not entitled to recover rent in respect of betel-nuts. The rule of English law, that where the allegation on the record is uncertain there is no res judicata, is also the rule embodied in Expl. I to s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). VISHNU VASUDEVA JUVEKAR v. RAMLING BHILING GURAV (1901) . . . I. L. R. 26 Bom. 25

In a previous suit brought by the defendant's husband against the plaintiff, for a declaration of his title to a moiety of a garden purchased from the ancestors of the plaintiff, and for partition, the suit was not defended, and an ex parte decree was passed. In a subsequent suit by the plaintiff, to have his title to the said garden declared, to have the sale to the defendant's husband set aside as having been made without legal necessity and to recover possession, the defence was that the suit as regards the moiety of the land was barred by the operation of s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held, that the question of the validity of the sale to the defendant's husband ought to have been raised by way of defence to the previous suit, and it must therefore, by virtue of Expl. II to s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code, be treated as having been directly and substantially in issue in that suit, and was consequently res judicata. Sundar v. Parbuti, I. L. R. 12 All. 51 : I. In a previous suit for rent against a permanent tenure-holder in a permanently-settled area : Held, following a ruling of the High Court that the plaintiff could recover interest on the arrears only at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum, as s. 67 of the Bengal Tenancy Act controlled s. 179 of the Act and was a bar to his recovering at the higher rate mentioned in the kabuliat. The ruling referred to was subsequently overruled by a Full Bench. In a subsequent suit between the same parties on the same kabuliat for rent for a subsequent period: Held, that the case must be decided upon the law as it stood when judgment was pronounced and that the plaintiff could recover the larger sum for interest; the decision in the previous suit would not be res judicata. The subsequent suit having been brought on a fresh cause of action, no question as to the construction of the kabuliat had arisen, and the law since the decision of the former suit had been determined by judicial decision to be otherwise than what it was formerly regarded to be. A point of law may constitute res judicata. Parthasaradi Ayyangar v. Chinna Krisna Ayyangar, I. L. R. 5 Mad. 304; Chamanlal v. Bapubhai, I. L. R. 22 Bom. 669; Yenku v. Mahalinga, I. L. Where the plaintiff in a suit for recovery of rent claimed certain cesses, which the defendant had stipulated to pay in his kabuliat and which the defendant said he was not liable to pay, inasmuch as in a previous suit for recovery of rent of a previous period, it had been held that the same was not recoverable according to law:—Held, that the present claim was barred by the rule of res judicata. *PADMANAND SINGH v. 122. ———— Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 13—Joint trial—“Matter directly and substantially in issue”—“Former suit”—Suits disposed of in one judgment—Title. M and J, two Mahomedan co-widows, brought two separate suits for recovery of their dowers from the estate of their deceased husband. A question was raised in these suits, whether two houses belonged to the estate of the husband. By consent of parties the Subordinate Judge tried both the suits together and disposed of them in one judgment, it being found that the two houses belong to M, as her separate property. But two separate decrees were drawn up in accordance with that judgment. J preferred an appeal to the District Judge against the decree in her own suit mainly on the ground that the conclusion arrived at by the Subordinate Judge in the suit of M, respecting the title of the two houses, was erroneous; but no appeal was preferred in M's suit. At the hearing of this appeal a question was raised on behalf of M, the respondent, that the judgment in M's suit not having been appealed against operated as res judicata. The District Judge overruled this plea, and allowed the appeal of J. On second appeal to the High Court:—Held (RAMPINI, 123. ———— Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 13—Consent decree—Fraud—Defence—Limitation. On the 4th June 1893, the defendant signed an acknowledgment (Ruzu) for R11,534-15-0 in favour of the shop of Bakhatram Nanuram, represented in the suit by the plaintiff. On the 19th June, 1894, the defendant paid R400 cash, and a hundi for R600 and for the balance R10,534-15-0 he passed an instalment-bond payable at yearly instalments of R1,000 with interest at 6 per cent. on overdue instalment. The hundi for R600 was dishonoured in 1895 and the firm sued the defendant for its amount plus R45 interest in Suit No. 249 of 1895. The defendant pleaded want of consideration for the hundi, and further said that the acknowledgment had been passed in ignorance of the true state of accounts and because the facts had been concealed and misrepresented. A Commissioner was appointed to examine the plaintiff's account. He reported that the debt really due on the 4th June, 1893, was R3,016-3-0 and not R11,534-15-0 as stated in the Ruzu. Upon this the claim in the suit was decreed without an adjudication of other questions raised by the defendant. In 1897, the firm sued the defendant for the first and second instalments, which had become due under the instalment-bond. This was Suit No. 105 of 1897 and was for R2,000 and interest. The defendant admitted the claim, which was decreed accordingly by consent. In 1898, the defendant instituted Suit No. 412 of 1898 against the Bakhatram firm for cancellation of the instalment-bond alleging that it was obtained by misrepresentation and fraud, and was void in law having been passed in respect of wagering transactions and that nothing was due under it. The final decision in the case was passed by the High Court, who, without giving any decision on the merits, dismissed the suit as time-barred. Pending the above proceedings, the plaintiff filed this suit in 1902 against the defendant on the instalment-bond to recover the 3rd, 4th and 5th instalments amounting in all to R3,000 and interest. The defendant pleaded inter alia that the instalment-bond and prior Ruzu were obtained from him by fraud and misrepresentation and that the debt due was one arising from wagering contracts unenforceable by law. No findings were recorded on these points, as the Subordinate Judge held that the defendant was precluded by the decrees in suits Nos. 249 of 1895 and 105 of 1897 from raising any of these contentions. The claim was decreed with costs. On appeal, the District Judge also came to the conclusion that the bar of res judicata operated against the defendant, but held that the claim as to the 3rd and 4th instalments was barred by limitation. Both the parties preferred appeals to the High Court.

Held, by ASTON, J.—(i) that, unless it be established that the pleas, which the defendant had raised in the present suit and had not been allowed to prove if proved in the Hundi Suit No. 249 of 1895, have reduced the amount actually due by him in June, 1893, to less than R600, plus the R400 paid in cash, the decision in the hundi suit could not operate, as res judicata in respect of the said pleas, for the matter which might and ought to be made a ground of defence in the hundi suit must be a ground of defence to “the claim actually made” in the said former suit; (ii) that the plea that the consideration for the instalment-bond partly failed, because of the reasons set up in the pleas aforesaid, would have been irrelevant in the later suit No. 195 of 1897 for the first two instalments of R1,000 due under that bond, unless by setting up these pleas and proving them the claim in that later suit for R2,000, the amount of the first two instalments, would have been reduced. Held, by SCOTT, J.—(i) that before the present suit was brought the issue as to consideration had not been raised, except with reference to the hundi and had been heard and determined in suit No. 249 of 1895 with reference to that document alone. The defendant was, therefore, not barred by res judicata from pleading in this suit that the bond was no longer supported by consideration; (ii) that the lower Court was wrong in holding that the defendant was barred by s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) from raising the questions of fraud or wager as vitiating the bond as a security for the payment of the remaining instalments. The issue in suit No. 249 of 1895 was a sufficient issue for the disposal of the case on the hundi and in that suit the defendant's liability under the hundi was the only matter in issue. In suit No. 105 of 1897 there was no hearing and disposal of any matter in issue and the provisions of s. 13 had, therefore, no application. Regard must be had to the reason and scope of the consent decree. A defendant is entitled to resist a claim made against him by pleading fraud, and he is entitled to urge that plea though he may have himself brought an unsuccessful suit to set aside the transaction, and is not under certain circumstances like those in hand precluded from urging that plea by lapse of time. *Rangnath v. District Judge against the decrees of the Munsif, a compromise was filed and decrees made thereon. The plaintiffs then applied for review of the decrees alleging that their pleader had no authority to agree to the compromise. The District Judge rejected the application on the ground that the pleader had the requisite authority. The plaintiffs obtained rules from the High Court against this order, but they were discharged. Plaintiffs now instituted a fresh suit in the Court of the Subordinate Judge praying that the compromise and the decree made thereon be set aside on the ground that the pleader had no authority to compromise and that the terms of the compromise went outside the subject-matter of the suit. Held, that in order to have the compromise-decree set aside it was open to the plaintiffs to proceed either by way of suit or by an application for review the latter being the more regular mode of procedure. Ashutosh Chandra v. Tara Prosanna Roy, I. L. R. 10 Calc. 612, followed. That the effect of the discharge of the rules issued by the High Court was to leave the order of the District Judge undisturbed. That the question regarding the pleader's authority to compromise was directly and substantially in issue in the proceeding for review and was heard and finally decided by the Court of the District Judge which was a Court of jurisdiction competent to try the present suit. The suit in consequence is barred by the rules of res judicata. Koylash Chandra De v. Tarack Nath Mandal, I. L. R. 25 Calc. 571; Bhagwanbuttee Chowdhurain v. A. H. Forbes, I. L. R. 28 Calc. 78, relied on. An independent suit would not lie merely because a ground is alleged for setting aside the decree, which was not taken in the application for review. The plaintiffs having elected to proceed by way of review, ought to have raised upon their application all the grounds upon which they relied for setting aside the decree. RAM GOPAL MAZUMDAR v. 125. — Property not included in the former suit—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 13, Explanation II—Right as heir decided in the former suit with respect to other property—The decision does not bar the second suit. K brought a suit against A and others to recover some property as heir of one S praying for a partition of the properties specified in the plaint and for allotment to him of S's share therein. A denied K's heirship and asserted himself to be heir of S. It was decided that A was the heir of S and the suit was dismissed. A then brought another suit against K to establish his right as S's heir to property not included in the plaint in the first suit. The lower Appellate Court negatived the claim upon the ground that as A failed to make the omission by K to include the property in dispute in the previous suit for partition a ground of defence, A's right to the property was in the second suit barred under Explanation II to s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882). On appeal to the High Court, held, that A's right to maintain the suit was not barred by res judicata. Explanation II to s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) must be read in conjunction with and as part and parcel of the leading provisions of the section itself. According to those provisions, several conditions are necessary to constitute a matter res judicata. Two of those conditions are: (i) that the matter must have been in the former suit directly and substantially in issue; and (ii) that it must have been heard and finally decided in that suit. The explanation does no more than lay down that if a matter, which might and ought to have been made a ground of defence in the former suit, is not made such a ground, it shall be dealt with as falling within the first of the abovementioned conditions. That is, the omission shall have the same effect given to it as it would have had if it had been made a ground of defence. But to constitute res judicata, a second condition is necessary—it must have been finally decided and if the former suit went off on a preliminary ground not calling for adjudication on other grounds of defences whether raised or not, those grounds remain undecided. The same effect must be given to a matter which might and ought to have been, but has not been, made a ground of defence in the former suit, as must be given to it if it had been made a ground of defence in the former suit. *ABDULLAKHAN v. The words "the matter directly and substantially at issue has been directly and substantially in issue in a former suit" cannot and do not lay down that both the issues and the subject-matters of the two suits must be the same before Explanation II can be applied. *Sarkum Abu Torab Abdul Waheb v. 4. ———— Judgment in rem—Decree obtained by fraud—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 13—Evidence Act, s. 44. Where a decree in a suit has been honestly obtained without fraud it cannot be subsequently disputed by the parties thereto or their privies, or by persons who were represented by such parties. Strangers to the suit, (i.e., persons neither privies to, nor represented by, the parties thereto) are not bound by such a decree if it be a decree inter partes; but if it be a decree in rem and passed by a competent Court, they are bound by it and cannot controvert it. Where a decree has been obtained by means of the fraud of one party against the other, it is binding on parties and privies, and on persons represented by the parties, so long as it remains in force, but it may be impeached for fraud, and may be set aside if the fraud is proved. In the case of judgments in rem the same rule holds good with regard to persons who are strangers to the suit. Where a decree has been obtained by the fraud and collusion of both the parties to the suit, it is binding upon the parties. It is also binding upon the privies of the parties,—except, probably, where the collusive fraud has been on a provision of the law enacted for the benefit of such privies. But persons represented by, but not claiming through, the parties to the suit may in any subsequent proceeding, whether as plaintiff or defendant, treat the previous judgment so obtained by fraud and collusion as a mere nullity, provided the fraud and collusion be clearly established. The same rule applies with regard to strangers where

5. ————— Decree against Hindu widow—Fraud—Reversioner. Upon the death of R, a Hindu, who was separate from his brother S, his widow G became life-tenant of his estate, and his daughter B became entitled to succeed after G's death. In 1882 a suit was brought by S and G against V to recover the value of a branch of a mango tree wrongfully taken by the defendant, and for maintenance of possession over the grove in which the tree was situate. The suit was dismissed, and it was decided that R was not the owner of the grove, nor was G the owner. In 1885 B brought a suit against G, S, V, and A, to whom V had sold some of the trees, claiming a declaration of her right and possession of the grove, upon the allegation that the proceedings of 1882 were carried on in collusion between S and G on the one hand and V on the other, for the purpose of improperly preventing her from asserting her rights. Held, that, if the suit of 1882 was a genuine suit and was properly contested by the then plaintiffs, though S might have been improperly joined as plaintiff any decision then passed against G would be binding upon the present plaintiff, and estop her again litigating questions which were then decided. Held, also, that, if the plaintiff's specific allegation of fraud and collusion in the proceedings of 1882 were established, and even if the decree of 1882 did dispose of the question now sought to be re-opened, the decision in that suit would not be binding on the plaintiff under the circumstances. Katama Natchiar's Case, 9 Moo. 7. ————— Reversioner. On her husband's death, a Hindu widow obtained possession of his estate as his heir, and, in a suit against her for possession thereof by certain persons claiming to succeed to the estate as rightful heirs, a decree was obtained by them. Held, that such decree was a bar to a new suit against those persons by the daughter claiming the estate in succession to the widow, the decree having been fairly and properly obtained against the widow. NAND KUMAR v. 8. ————— Decree in suit by Hindu widow—Reversioners, suit by—Alienation by life-tenant—Adverse possession. A daughter succeeded to a share of her father's estate, and transferred it in full property by a formal instrument or ikrarnama, dated March 1849, to her granddaughter, expressly naming her and treating her as her heiress,—the transfer being in the nature of a release, reserving maintenance and other advantages to the donor. Upon the application of the granddaughter before the Collector for the mutation of names according to the terms of the ikrarnama, the reversioners (collateral heirs of the father) affected to contest the unauthorized nature of the alienation, but dropped their opposition. In 1857 the diaras, or alluvial lands attached to the estate, were perpetually settled with the granddaughter. The alienor quarrelled with her granddaughter, and in 1857 brought a suit against her to set aside the ikrarnama, upon the ground of the non-performance of a condition subsequent. The plaintiff succeeded in the first Court, but the judgment was reversed (October 1858) on appeal to the Zillah Judge. Pending the appeal, the plaintiff died (February 1858), and reversioners applied to be, and were, admitted as her heirs to conduct the appeal. The granddaughter remained in possession from the date of transfer until 1866, when she died. In April 1867 the present suit was brought by the surviving reversioner, who claimed to be entitled to recover possession of the property by right of inheritance from the alienor's father. He was one of the reversioners who had been admitted to conduct the appeal in the former suit upon the death of the alienor. Held (on special appeal and review), that there had been no adverse possession; the instrument enured as a transfer of the donor's lifetime only; the judgment in the former suit brought to set it aside did not bind or affect the reversioners, who in that suit merely represented the interest of their predecessors, the life-tenant. RAJ KUNWAR v. Before the introduction of the Civil Procedure Code, this was so equally with regard to litigation as to other transactions, and it was not then obligatory, or even customary, for a Hindu manager to set forth that he sued in a representative character (as now required by the Code, s. 50), or to add the co-owners as parties to the suit (as required by English law). A suit therefore brought in 1856 by the manager of a joint Hindu family consisting of himself and the plaintiff, and no fraud or collusion being alleged, bound the plaintiff, though then a minor,

He had been dispossessed by the defendants under a decree declaring their title to the land against the plaintiff's elder brother, who claimed it on behalf of the Vadasheri illam. Held, that the plaintiff was not estopped by the former decree from recovering the land. Per INNES, J.—The question whether a decree obtained against the karnavan of a Nayar tarwad or of a Nambudri illam in Malabar is binding on the family is purely one of procedure. The dictum in Varanakot Narayanan Namburi v. Varanakot Narayanan Namburi, I. L. R. 2 Mad. 328, that in the absence of fraud or collusion a decree against the karnavan, as such, is binding on the anandravans of the tarwad, is not warranted by any provision of the Code of Civil Procedure. Every member of the tarwad is entitled to be made a party, or to have notice under s. 30 of the Code of Civil Procedure, in any suit the object of which is to affect the tarwad property. Expl. 5 of s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure does not refer to bonâ fide defences, but to bonâ fide claims, and does not make a decree binding on a person not a party to it where the actual defendant was jointly interested with such person in the subject-matter of the suit and defended the suit bonâ fide. *Hazir Gazi v. Subsequently, in 1875, C and D, the nephews of B, brought a suit against A and B for their shares in the land, alleging that there was collusion between A and B in the previous suit. It was found that C and D and their uncle B had lived together as members of an undivided Hindu family at the time of the former suit, and that he (B) was the manager of the family and assisted by his nephews, C and D, in defending the former suit. C and D made no allegation in their plaint that they were minors at the time of the former suit, nor did they assign any reason for not asking to have been made co-defendants in it. Their allegation of collusion between A and B was not proved. Held, that the plaintiff's suit, under those circumstances, was barred by the former suit under s. 2 of Act VIII of 1859. *Jogendra Deb Furkut v. His claim was registered as a suit under s. 331 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The plaintiff contended that the defendant was concluded by the decree obtained against the father and brother. Held, that a Hindu son in a joint family becomes entitled by reason of his birth and in his own right, a right which he can enforce against his father; he does not claim under his father within the meaning of s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held, also, that the defendants in the former suit did not claim any right in common for themselves and others within the meaning of expl. governed by the Mitakshara law, after the attachment of a property, part of his ancestral estate, to which he and his minor son B were jointly entitled as members of a joint Hindu family, conveyed by a deed of gift the whole of his interest in the ancestral property, including the property under attachment, to B. Five days after the execution of the deed of gift, the property was sold in execution for the decree of the attaching creditor C, and was purchased by C at such sale. Ten days after the sale, A instituted proceedings under s. 256 of Act VIII of 1859 to set it aside on the ground of irregularity. These proceedings were afterwards continued in the name of A, but virtually on behalf of the minor B, under the control and direction of the Collector, who had taken charge of his estate, and appointed a manager under Act XL of 1858. These proceedings terminated in 1874 by the application to set aside the sale being dismissed, and the sale was therefore confirmed, and C took possession of the property. In 1877 a suit was instituted on behalf of D by the manager appointed by the Collector against C and A to recover possession of the property, on the grounds—(i) that when it was sold it was not the property of A, the judgment-debtor, and (ii) that the property of a joint Hindu family could not be sold or alienated by, or taken in execution of, a decree against a single member of that family. Held, that the fact that the plaintiff, through his guardian, had actively intervened in the proceedings under s. 256 of Act VIII of 1859, was no bar to the institution of the present suit on his behalf. H brought a suit in his minor son's name against N, the mortgagee of such estate to redeem the same. N set up as a defence to such suit that such sale was invalid under Hindu law, as such estate was a share of certain undivided property of which he was a co-sharer, and had been made without his consent. It was finally decided in that suit that such estate was a share of such undivided property and not the separate property of G, and that such sale was invalid, having been made without the consent of N, a co-sharer of such undivided property. G subsequently redeemed such estate, and, having done so, sold it a second time to K. N thereupon sued K to set aside such sale on the same ground as that on which he had defended the former suit. Held, that the issue in such suit whether such estate was a share of undivided property or the separate property of G was res judicata, inasmuch as K, though not in name, yet

In 1867 G brought his suit as one of the heirs of S, to set aside the will and made his brother N a co-defendant. The Principal Sudder Ameen dismissed the suit, finding on the evidence that the will was genuine. In 1869 N brought this suit for his share as heir of S against M. The first Court found that the will was a forgery, and gave the plaintiff a decree. On appeal, the Judge held that N's claim was barred by the decision in the former suit brought by his brother and reversed the decision of the first Court. Held, on special appeal, that it was not barred by the finding of the Court in G's suit, as N was no party to that suit, and he could not in any manner have availed himself of a decree in that suit to enforce a claim to his share. NABIN CHANDRA MAZUMDAR v. In a former suit to which all the present mirasidars were parties, either actually or as privies to those through whom they claim, it was decided that no right existed in any individual shareholder of the village to have allowed to him a distinct portion of the common lands in proportion to his share or shares. Held, that the former decree declaring the impartibility of the common land of the village was conclusive in the present suit between the present shareholders upon the same question of right. SITARAMAIYAR v. 26. — Decree in suit to establish right—Subsequent suit for possession—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 2—Suit between same parties. The plaintiff sued to recover possession of certain houses and grounds as belonging to his zamindari, setting forth that the premises in question had been occupied by his paternal grandmother, on whose death the defendants had taken wrongful possession. The defendants claimed to be legally entitled to the premises in question, and contended that the plaintiff's suit was barred under s. 2, Act VIII of 1859, by reason that the plaintiff had already, during his grandmother's lifetime, brought a suit against her and the defendant's father as a co-defendant, to establish his right to the same premises, which suit had been dismissed. The defendants also pleaded limitation. It appeared that in the former suit the relief sought by the plaintiff was substantially to restrain his grandmother from acts of waste in alienating property which had belonged to her deceased husband by assigning it to her co-defendant; but that, as regards the property now claimed, although it was mentioned in the plaint, no charge had been made that she had assigned it, or intended to assign it, to her co-defendant, nor any allegation to show that the co-defendant had any interest in it. Held, reversing the decisions of the lower Court, that under the circumstances the decision in the former suit was not a decision in a suit between the same parties, or parties under whom they claimed, and that the cause of action in the present suit was not.

determined in the former suit. Held, also, that the defendant's plea of limitation could not be determined without a finding as to whether the plaintiff's grandmother, who died within the period of limitation, had held the premises with the plaintiff's leave, or as a trespasser. *ZAMINDAR OF PITTAPURAM v. 27. ———— Decree in suit by first mortgagee for sale of mortgaged property—Second mortgagee not made a party—Subsequent suit by second mortgagee on mortgage—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 13—Meaning of "between parties under whom they or any of them claim." Upon the death of G, a Mahomedan, his estate was divisible into eight shares, two of which devolved upon his son, A, one upon each of his five daughters, and one upon his widow, B. The name of B only was recorded in the revenue registers in respect of the zamindari property left by G. In 1876 A and B gave to X a deed of simple mortgage of 2½ biswas out of a 5-biswas share of a village included in the said property. In 1878 A and B gave to S a deed of simple mortgage of the 5 biswas, which were described in the deed as the widow's "own" property. In 1882 X obtained a decree upon his mortgage for the sale of the mortgaged property, and it was put up for sale and purchased by X himself in January 1884. In February and November 1884 the daughters of G obtained ex parte decrees against A and B in suits brought by them to recover their shares by inheritance in the 5 biswas. In 1885 S brought a suit upon his mortgage of 1878, claiming the amount due thereon and the sale of the whole 5 biswas. To this suit he made defendants A and B, G's daughters, and X, alleging that the decrees of February and November 1884 were fraudulently and collusively obtained; and as to the auction sale of January 1884 that the 2½ biswas were sold subject to his mortgage, he not having been made a party to the suit brought by X upon the deed of 1876, and therefore not being bound by any of the proceedings taken therein or consequent thereto. On behalf of the daughters it was contended (inter alia) that the decrees obtained by them against A and B in February 1884 were conclusive, by way of res judicata, against the plaintiff, who, as mortgagee from A and B, claimed under a title derived from them. Held, that, there being no evidence to show that the decrees of February and November 1884 were fraudulently and collusively obtained, the Court of first instance was right in exempting the shares of the daughters from the lien sought to be enforced by the plaintiff; and that, inasmuch as the deed of 1876 was prior in date to the plaintiff's deed of 1878, and there was no allegation of fraud or collusion in regard to it, the decree and sale in enforcement of the former deed would defeat the rights of the plaintiff under the latter. Khush Chand v. Kalian Das, I. L. R. 1 All. 240, and Ali Hasan v. Dhirja, I. L. R. 4 All. 518, referred to. Per MAHMOOD, J. The decrees of February and November 1884 did not operate as res judicata against the plaintiff, inasmuch as a mortgagee cannot be bound by a decision relating to the mortgage property in a suit instituted after his mortgage, and to which he was not a party. After a mortgage has been duly created, the mortgagor, in whom the equity of redemption is vested, no longer possesses any such estate as would entitle him to represent the rights and interests of the mortgagee in a subsequent litigation, so as to render the result of such litigation binding upon and conclusive against such mortgagee. The plaintiff in the present suit could not be treated as a party claiming under his mortgagors within the meaning of s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code, and that section must be interpreted as if, after the words "under whom they or any of them claim," the words "by a title arising subsequently to the commencement of the former suit" had been inserted. *Duma Sahu v. 28. ———— Illegitimacy, question of—Execution of decree—Act XXIII of 1861, s. 11. The questions which, under s. 11, Act XXIII of 1861, may be determined by a Court executing a decree, must be between parties to the suit in which the decree was passed, and must relate to the execution of the decree. A person who was not on the record when the decree was made does not constitute himself a party to the suit by applying for execution and a question as to his legitimacy is consequently not one which the Court executing the decree is competent to entertain. A declaration by a Court in execution-proceedings, that a person not a party to the suit applying for execution is legitimate, since it is made without jurisdiction, cannot, under s. 2, Act VIII of 1859, be pleaded as a bar to a regular suit in which it is sought to establish the illegitimacy of the applicant. *ABI-DUNNISSA KHATUN v. She only denied A's right to inherit, who claimed as K's adopted son; admitting the right of S, who claimed as her lawful son by K, and that of B and C, who claimed as wife and daughter respectively of K. S supported his mother's claim. A, B, and C denied that M had been lawfully married to K, and alleged that S was the son of M, not by K, but by another person. It was decided in that suit that M had been lawfully married to K; that S was the lawful son of K by M; and that A was not the adopted son of K. In 1880 S sued A for possession of C's share in such estate, C having died, claiming as C's step brother and heir. A set up as a defence that M was not K's wife, nor was S K's son. Held, that, inasmuch as, although in the former suit A and S stood together in the same array, they were in fact opposed to each other, S being on the side and supporting the case of his mother, and A being the true defendant, such suit was one between the same parties as the second, and the matter of S's legitimacy, having been raised and finally decided in the former suit by a competent Court, was res judicata, and could not be again raised in the second suit. *SHADAL KHAN v. 30. ————— Party as representative.—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, ss. 13, 244. In 1872 A brought a suit on a mortgage against the mortgagor, a Hindu widow, who died pending the suit. A then applied that the suit should be revived against B as the representative of the defendant. B denied that he was such representative, but the Judge refused to go into the question, made B a party, and gave A a decree for the sale of the mortgaged property. B subsequently brought a suit to have it declared, inter alia, that the mortgage and decree only covered the widow's life-interest. Held, that the suit was not barred either as res judicata or under the provisions of s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. *KANAI LALL KHAN v. 31. ————— Mortgage—Purchaser of mortgagor's interest—Sale in execution of decree—Omission to revive suit. A mortgagee brought a suit on his mortgage against his mortgagor and against A, a person who had purchased the right, title, and interest of the mortgagor in execution of a money-decree obtained against him subsequently to the mortgage. Pending the mortgage-suit and before decree, A died, but the suit was not revived against his representatives. The usual mortgage-decree was passed in favour of the mortgagee, who, in execution thereof, sold a portion of the mortgaged property to B. In a suit brought by B against the representatives of A for the property purchased and for general relief:—Held, that the decree in the mortgage-suit was not binding on the representatives of A; nor, under the provisions of Act VIII of 1859, did the failure to revive such mortgage-suit prevent B from bringing the second suit against A's representatives. BEPINBEHARI BUNDOPADHYA v. BROJONATH MOOKHOPADYA

32. ————— Suit for ejectment—Lessor and lessee. An ejectment suit by B's tenant against the defendant having been dismissed, a second ejectment suit was subsequently, after B's death, brought in respect of the same land against the defendant by the successor in title of B. Held, that inasmuch as a lessor cannot be considered as claiming under his own lessee, the principle of res judicata did not apply. RAMBROHO CHUCKERBUTTY v. BUNSI KURMOKAR . 11 C. L. R. 122

33. ————— Former decree declaring status of occupiers of holding—Suit not between same parties. An attempt having formerly, on the cessation of the services rendered by some palki-bearers, been made to oust them from certain chakran lands which they had held for many years and which they had claimed to hold rent-free for the future; and it having been held on that occasion that, though theirs was not a rent-free tenure or an uninterrupted tenure from the time of the decennial settlement, yet they had clearly acquired a right of occupancy:—Held, on a suit being brought by the zamindar against the same bearers for recovery of rent, that, although the former suit had not been brought by the zamindar personally, but by the persons to whom he had attempted to transfer the lands, yet the decision in that suit clearly established, as between the zamindar and the palki-bearers, a relation of landlord and tenant, which empowered him to recover arrears of rent from them. SUROOP SIRDAR v. BEER CHUNDER MANIKHYA

34. ————— Suits between representatives—Document found conclusive. Where A sued B for moneys alleged to be due under certain documents, and B pleaded that the demands had been included in a settlement of accounts, embodied in a document which he set forth in his answer, and the suit was dismissed, on the ground that, being included in the settlement, the demands no longer existed as causes of action:—Held, that A's representative was not estopped from disputing the document in a subsequent action brought by him against the representative of B. *Eastmore v. persons, claiming by right of inheritance to C, sued B, N, A, K, and others for possession of certain immoveable property, and on appeal to the High Court in August 1876 their claim was decreed in full. In the course of the litigation which ended in that decree, Z purchased certain immoveable property from B, N, A, and K. Z was subsequently dispossessed of such property in execution of the decree of August 1876. He thereupon sued the holders of that decree for possession of the same, alleging that his vendors had inherited it from D; that the figures of the total of C's property given in the plaint in the former suit were erroneous; that the property now in suit was not affected by that decree and that he had been improperly dispossessed of it. It appeared that there was, in fact, a mistake in the total of the extent of C's property as stated in the plaint in the former suit. Held, that the plaintiff, having purchased pendente lite, was bound by the decree of the High Court against the persons through whom he claimed; that the claim in the former suit having been decreed in full, the property now in suit was then decreed to the present defendants; and that the claim of the plaintiff to go behind that decree could not be entertained. *HUKM SINGH v. 36. — Suit by son not claiming through his father—Gift to Hindu widow—Separate property. C, a Hindu, subject to the Mitakshara law, died leaving a widow, R, but no issue. In his lifetime he had transferred to R by gift mouzah R, a portion of his real estate. After his death, J and P, his brothers, sued R for the possession of C's real estate, on the ground that it was ancestral property. This suit was dismissed, it being held by the Sudder Court that C's real estate was separate property, to which his widow would be entitled to succeed by inheritance. The Sudder Court determined that R had acquired mouzah R by gift from C, and that R took under the gift a life-interest in the property only. J and P having died, R made a gift of mouzah R to her agent as a reward for his faithful services. N, the son of J, sued as the heir of his uncle C, to set aside this gift to the agent as illegal. Held, that the decision in the former suit did not make the question as to the interest R took under the gift from her husband res judicata, inasmuch as N did not claim through his father when suing as heir to his uncle. *RUDI NARAIN SINGH v. 37. — Representation of the estate of a Hindu talukhdar by his widow in a suit for the succession—Act 1 of 1869—Act XXIV of 1870, s. 25. Issues substantially the same as those raised in the present suit, relating to the succession to a talukhdari estate, had been decided in a former suit, in which an order of Her Majesty in Council declared who had the right to succeed. Held, that a claimant, whose interest was such as would vest in him only upon the death of the widow of the last talukhdar, was bound by the order so made, on the ground that he was privy to the former suit, the whole estate, for the purpose of representing it, being vested in the widow, who was a party to that suit. Ka'ama Nachiar v. Raja of Shivagunga, 9 Moo. I. A. 539, referred to and followed. That order declared that a will made by the last talukhdar, whereby a power to appoint a successor in the talukhdari had been given to the widow, had been revoked, and determined the right to succeed as upon intestacy. The person whom the widow had appointed by her will, now contending that he was not bound by the order, having been, when the former suit was instituted, a minor, without any duly appointed guardian, it was held that, whether he had, or had not, by acts after attaining full age (having been nominally a party), become estopped from setting up the above, he was, at all events, bound by the order; on the ground that the widow, holding an estate at least as large as that of the Hindu widow in her husband's property, was the full representative of the estate in the former suit; the appointment made by her being such as would operate only on her death. Held, also, that, although a manager of the estate had been appointed under the provisions of Act XXIV of 1870 (the Oudh Talukhdars' Relief Act), but had not been made a party to the suit, this omission did not, under s. 25, affect the validity of the decree between the parties. *PERTABNARAIN SINGH v. 38. — Benami proceedings—Decision in former suit. In execution of a decree of the Revenue Court in a suit brought by K for arrears of rent of a certain patni, the patni was put up for sale and purchased in the name of G. The rent having again fallen into arrear, K took proceedings against G under Bengal Regulation VIII of 1819 for the sale of the patni, but the arrears having been paid the patni was not sold. In a suit for arrears of rent of the same patni subsequently brought by K against G, P, and B (the wife of P) jointly, on the allegation that the patni had been purchased by G benami for P and B:—Held, that the suit was not barred by the former proceedings instituted by K against G under Regulation VIII of 1819. *PROSONNO COOMAR PAL CHOWDRY v. 39. — Suit for confirmation of possession and declaration of title. A brought a suit for a debt against B, obtained a decree, and attached certain land in execution. C intervened, claiming the property as his, but on the 28th March 1868 his claim was disallowed, on the ground that in two suits previously brought against C and others for possession of the same property, on the 30th December 1863, by X and Y, whose interest had, pending the suit, been purchased by B, it had been decreed that the land belonged to B. The decrees in these suits were dated 13th and 19th January 1864; they were in favour of B, and ran in his name alone. C had purchased a moiety of the property at an auction sale on the 7th March 1859; X and Y claimed under a pre-existing mortgage over the same property, the equity of redemption under which had been foreclosed. C now brought a suit against A and B for confirmation of his possession and a declaration of his title to the property. He alleged that B was his servant, and had purchased the interest of X and Y in the property benami for him; that he (C) had made the purchase with his own money in the name of B; that the suits originally brought by X and Y had really been compromised; that while the decrees of the 13th and 19th January 1864 were nominally in favour of B, they were really in his (C's) favour; and that the suit brought by X and Y had been allowed to proceed in B's name, in order that C's title might be strengthened by a decree in his favour, B being only nominally the decree-holder. C also stated that, since his purchase on 7th March 1859, he had always been in possession, and he dated his cause of action from the 28th March 1868, when his claim to the property which had been attached by A in his suit against B was disallowed. The Subordinate Judge gave a decree in favour of the plaintiff C. B alone appealed to the High Court. Held, that C, not having been disturbed in his possession, and seeking a declaration of his title only and no relief, should have stated clearly and precisely what that title was; that as against A, who had not appealed, the decision of the Subordinate Judge was final; that as between B and C the matter was res adjudicata; that C could not go behind the decrees of the 13th and 19th January 1864 which had been passed in favour of B, and show that the purchase by B and subsequent decrees were really benami for C and in his favour. 40. ———— Civil Procedure Code, s. 13—Suit by benamidar. In a suit to recover a parcel of land, the plaintiff's case was that it had been purchased by him benami in the name of his brother, who had sued the present defendants to obtain possession in 1887, but had been negligent in the conduct of the suit, which was consequently dismissed. It was found that there had been no negligence in the conduct of the suit, and that it had been instituted with the plaintiff's knowledge. Held, that the plaintiff was bound by the decree in the former suit, and could not recover on his secret title. session of the whole. The sister died, and after her death her husband, on behalf of himself and grandson, sued the widow to obtain the shares to which the deceased sister was entitled, and obtained a decree for payment of the same, after satisfaction of the widow's lien for dower, in certain proportions to himself and grandson. The husband's interest in the decree was subsequently confiscated by Government for having taken part with the enemy in the Mutiny. He subsequently died leaving his grandson. The widow died during the Mutiny, and her brother was put into possession of the property by the Government as her heir. The grandson now sued the widow's brother to recover his own and his grandfather's share, alleging that the lien for dower had been satisfied. Held, the suit was not barred by Act VIII of 1859, s. 2. 42. ———— Auction-purchaser—"Representative." A purchaser at an execution-sale is not as such the representative of the judgment-debtor within the meaning of s. 115 of the Evidence Act. A Hindu, governed by the Mitakshara School of Law, died on the 12th May 1867, leaving him surviving a widow B and a brother R who was admittedly the next reversioner. In July 1867 B purported to adopt a son D to A, and subsequently in September 1867 obtained a certificate under Act XL of 1858. In 1872 B obtained a loan from the plaintiff M of R9,000, and to secure its repayment executed a mortgage of seven mouzahs in favour of M as guardian of D. The money was advanced and mortgage executed at the instigation of R and with his consent, and upon his representation that D was the duly adopted son of A, and it was admitted that the money was specifically advanced for, as well as applied towards, the payment of decrees obtained against A in his lifetime and against his estate after his death. B died in 1878. On the 14th August 1880 M instituted a suit against D upon his mortgage, and in that suit he made S a party-defendant as being the purchaser of the mortgagor's interest in one of the mouzahs included in his mortgage. On the 26th June 1882 M obtained a decree declaring that he was entitled to recover the amount due by sale of the mortgaged mouzahs. In the proceedings taken in execution of that decree M was opposed by L, who was afterwards held to be a benamidar for S, who claimed that he had, on the 8th November 1880, purchased five out of the seven mouzahs at a sale in execution of certain decrees against R. On the 29th February 1884 L's claim was allowed, and on the 11th August 1884, M brought this suit against L, S, R, and D, and the decree-holders in the suits against R, for a declaration of his right to follow the mortgaged property in the hands of S. It was found as a fact that the adoption of D was invalid; that the advance by M to B was justified by legal necessity; and that L was the benamidar of S. It also appeared that M had himself become the purchaser of one of the mortgaged mouzahs. The lower Court gave M a decree declaring him to be entitled to recover the full amount of the mortgage-money from the five mouzahs in the hands of S. L and S appealed, and M filed a cross-appeal, alleging the adoption to be valid and binding on S. It was contended that S, as the representative of R, was estopped from denying the validity of D's adoption, and that, having been a party to M's first suit, the question as to the liability of the mouzahs to satisfy the mortgage lien was res judicata as against him. Held, that, as S was merely a party to M's original suit as purchaser of one mouzah, and as he, subsequently to the institution of that suit, acquired R's interest in the five mouzahs, and as R was not a party to that suit, nor was his interest represented in any way, the decree was in no way binding against R, and therefore S was not barred by res judicata from setting up the interest of R in the five mouzahs so acquired by him. *LALA PARBHU LAL v. 43. Suit by a judgment-creditor to establish his judgment-debtor's right to property so as to make it subject to attachment in execution of his decree—Dismissal of such suit—Judgment-debtor not represented by judgment-creditor in such suit—Subsequent suit by judgment-debtor to recover the same property. A judgment-creditor of the plaintiff having obtained a decree against the plaintiff, attached the house in dispute. The defendant intervened in 1878, and set up a previous purchase of the house by himself from the plaintiff. The attachment was removed. The judgment-creditor brought a suit against the defendant for a declaration that the property belonged to the plaintiff, and, as such, was liable to be attached and sold in execution. At the hearing of this suit the judgment-creditor did not appear. The defendant appeared and produced a sale-deed, which the Court found proved, and dismissed the judgment-creditor's suit. The plaintiff now brought the present suit against the defendant to recover possession of the house. The defendant contended (inter alia) that the dismissal of the former suit brought by the plaintiff's judgment-creditor operated as res judicata under s. 3 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). Both the lower Courts disallowed the defendants' contention holding that the suit was not barred. On appeal by the defendant to the High Court:—Held, confirming the lower Court's decree, that the dismissal of the former suit did not operate as res judicata in the absence of any evidence to show that the judgment-creditor, in point of fact, represented the plaintiff so as to constitute him a party to the suit. *SHIVAPA v. execution to a house which had been attached was dismissed, and the claimant then sued the decree-holder to establish her title to it. It appeared that the house had been previously attached in execution of another decree obtained by A against the same judgment-debtor and his father (since deceased); that the present plaintiff had then preferred a claim, which was allowed; that the judgment-debtor had taken no steps to have the order allowing the claim set aside; and that a suit filed by A with that object had been dismissed. Held, that the plaintiff's claim was not res judicata, although she had been a party to the former proceedings, and the defendant, not having been a party to the former proceedings, was not estopped from contesting it. GNANAMBAL v. PARVATHI

45. Suit against de facto manager or trustee by de jure trustees—Dismissal of such suit as barred by limitation—Subsequent suit against same defendant with sanction of Advocate-General—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 539. In 1887 certain persons, alleging that they had been appointed trustees of a temple and its property by its founder Purshotam, brought a suit to evict Purshotam's son from the premises, alleging that he had been their gumasta, that they had dismissed him, and that he refused to give up the property. The High Court dismissed that suit on the ground that it was barred by limitation. In 1892 the plaintiffs brought the present suit with the consent of the Advocate-General, under s. 539 of the Civil Procedure Code, against the same defendant, alleging that after Purshotam's death the defendant had entered into possession of the property and for some years had carried out the trusts created by his father Purshotam; but that latterly he had claimed the property as his own and refused to perform the trusts. They prayed that trustees might be appointed and the property made over to such trustees. The defendant contended that the plaintiffs in both the suits were the same, viz., persons representing the same cestues que trustent, i.e., the devotees of the temple or the general public; that they sued in the same right, and as the plaintiffs in the former suit were held barred by limitation, the plaintiffs in the present suit were also barred. Held, that the present suit was not barred. The plaintiffs in the former suit had no general warrant, such as is conferred on plaintiffs suing under s. 539 of the Civil Procedure Code, to represent the public, the objects of the charity. They based their title to sue on their particular appointment by Purshotam, and when it was found that they had by limitation lost their rights to the title derived from that appointment, they ceased to represent the public just as though they had been removed from their office. The de jure managers and trustees of a public charity losing their right by limitation to oust the de facto trustee does not confer on the latter immunity from suit on the part of the Advocate-General

V.* Where the uraima right over a certain devasam was vested in five trustees representing different illams, and a suit was brought by one of the trustees to recover certain property alleged to have been illegally alienated by three other trustees to a stranger and dismissed:—Held, that the decree in such suit was a bar to a second suit brought for the same purpose by the fifth trustee, who had not been a party to the former suit, on the ground that he must be deemed to claim under the plaintiffs in the former suit within the meaning of s. 13, expl. At that time the zamindar was a minor under the Court of Wards, and he was represented at the enquiry by the manager of his estate appointed under s. 8 of Regulation V of 1804. In a suit brought by the zamindar to recover the land it was contended that the decision of the survey officer was not binding on the zamindar because he was not properly represented by his guardian at the enquiry. Held, that the decision of the survey officer was binding on the zamindar, and that the matter in dispute was res judicata, no appeal by way of suit as provided by the Boundary Act, 1860, s. 25, having been brought. Prior to that assignment, namely, on the 3rd of June 1887, a suit had been commenced by the lambardar against B and one K for possession of other property alleged to have belonged to M in her lifetime, and in this suit it was ultimately found, but subsequently to the above-mentioned assignment in favour of N, that K, and not B, was the heir to M. Held, that the suit commenced on the 3rd of June 1887 did not operate as res judicata in respect of the present plaintiff N's claim under her assignment from B. *Foster v. 51. ——— Party for purpose of discovery only—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 13, 43—Joint wrong-doers—Judgment against one of several—Contract Act, s. 43. Prior to and in the year 1865 the defendant's brother B carried on an extensive business in Bombay and China. The defendant and another brother A carried on a separate business under the name of A H. In December 1866 B became insolvent, and his property vested in the official assignee. The present suit was brought in 1887 against the defendant by the official assignee to recover certain property which he alleged belonged to the insolvent, and ought to be distributed amongst his creditors. The plaintiff alleged that in 1865 the insolvent was possessed of a very large amount of property, and that, being unwilling to meet his liabilities, he and his son and his two brothers, viz., A and the defendant B, fraudulently concealed his property from his creditors, and in September 1866 he himself went to Damar beyond British jurisdiction. In 1881 the plaintiff, having obtained information that some of the insolvent's property was in the possession of his brother A, filed a suit (473 of 1881) against A to recover it. That suit was referred to arbitration, and the plaintiff obtained a decree for Rs. 3,60,000. The plaintiff now alleged that, shortly before the hearing of that suit, and subsequently, he had obtained information which led him to believe that the defendant had obtained some of the insolvent's property for which he was accountable. The defendant had been made a party to the former suit (473 of 1881) for the purpose of discovery only, and it was in the course of such discovery being given that some of the above information had been obtained. The plaint then set forth, in detail, the various items of claim in respect of which the plaintiff sought to make the defendant liable. The defendant pleaded that the said claims had been in issue in the former suit (473 of 1881), and were adjudicated upon, and that this suit was therefore barred by s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code; that the plaintiff was barred by s. 43 of the Civil Procedure Code, the plaintiff having omitted to include these claims in the former suit, to which defendant was a party; that the decree in the former suit (473 of 1881) was (inter alia) in respect of the matters alleged in this suit, and that, as according to the plaintiff's allegation the defendant in that suit was a joint wrong-doer with the defendant in this suit in respect of these matters, the said decree was a bar to this suit. Held, by SCOTT, J., that the suit was not barred either by s. 13 or s. 43 of the Civil Procedure Code. The defendant was made a party to the former suit for certain limited purposes only. No relief was asked from him; no decree was made against him. He was merely a nominal defendant. He was not a party to the former suit in such a way as to bring the present suit within the section. Held, also, that the rule of King v. Hoare, 13 M. & W. 491, applies in India, viz., that a judgment recovered against any one of several joint-debtors merges the remedy for the joint debt, and is a bar to an action against a co-debtor upon the joint liability; and, similarly, in a matter of tort-feasance, a judgment against one of several wrong-doers is a bar to an action on the same matter against the others. Such of the wrongs therefore alleged in the present suit as were of a joint character, and were adjudicated upon the previous suit, were extinguished by the former judgment. Applying the above rule, the Judge disallowed some of the items of the plaintiff's claim, and allowed others, and directed an account in respect of the latter. The Court of appeal confirmed the decree of the Court of first instance RAHMUBHOY HUBIBBHOY v. TURNER and purchaser at sale in execution of decree. Where all the conditions prescribed by s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure as necessary to bar the trial in a subsequent suit of an issue adjudicated upon in a previous suit exist, the fact that in the first suit the defendant was an execution-creditor, and in the second he is a purchaser at an execution-sale, makes no difference as to the second suit being res judicata. A privity exists between an execution-creditor and a purchaser at a Court-sale, the latter representing the former in so far as he had a right to bring the property to sale in execution of his decree. Thus, when the plea of estoppel is available to a decree-holder, it is likewise available to the purchaser at the execution sale, as his representative or as one claiming under him. *Sarat Chunder Dey v. To support a plea of res judicata it must appear from inspection of the record that the person whose interest it is sought to bind was in some way a party to the suit. A mortgagor, of an undivided share may redeem the entirety, if the mortgagee does not object and may be compelled to do so, if required by the mortgagee. Therefore the fact that a suit for redemption of the entire property instituted by such a person was dismissed cannot affect the right of a co-sharer, who was not a party to that suit. In a suit for redemption it was ordered that the mortgagor should recover possession on depositing the mortgage-money in the Government Treasury. The money was deposited, but before it could be made over to the mortgagee, the Sepoy Mutiny broke out and the Treasury was looted:—Held, that the decree having become incapable of execution owing to vis major, a fresh suit for redemption was required to give effect to the rights of the parties and do justice between them; and such a suit was not barred under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code. *CHAUDHURI AHMED BAKSH v. ## (b) INTERVENORS.

61. ———— Intervenor added in former suit—Suit against other parties. A suit to recover possession of land, on the ground of purchase from the admitted owners, is not barred by Act VIII of 1859, s. 2, simply because plaintiff's claim as against the same defendant was dismissed in a former suit in which he (defendant) appeared as an intervenor. TUKHEA v. DEO NARAIN SINGH 24 W. R. 248

62. ———— Reservation of intervenor's rights—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 2. In a former suit against a party and his vendor, in which an intervenor was made a defendant, plaintiffs obtained a decree with a reservation of intervenor's rights. The decree was not a res judicata in a subsequent suit by a purchaser from the intervenor against the said vendee, the reservation being a mere obiter dictum. BUKSH ALI v. NITYANUND DOSS 5 W. 63. ———— Suit for rent—Enjoyment of and receipt of rent, proof of. Plaintiff sued for rent of land alleged to be a 3 annas 15 gundahs share held by him on a defined right. Defendant admitted the claim. An intervenor appeared, alleging that the land was situate in the 7 annas share of the talukh, and that he had purchased 3 annas 15 gundahs of this share, for which a decree had been given to him, and that he held it is a joint co-parcener. Held, that, as the decree did not state patently the subject-matter to be that of this suit, the principle laid in the case of Syud Ahmed Reza, 5th August 1863, did not apply; and that, as it did not clearly adjudicate against the plaintiff's right, the principle laid down in the case of Tarinee v. Bamundoss Moakhef, 1 W. R. 331, had no bearing. 65. ———— Judgment in suit for rent. In a suit by plaintiff for arrears of rent against one set of tenants defendant intervened, claiming a moiety of the whole estate. His claim was dismissed in lower Courts, and the case came up on special appeal. Meanwhile plaintiff brought suits against another set of tenants on the same estate, in which defendant again intervened on the same ground as before. Held, that the decision in the former set of cases, unless and until set aside in special appeal, was binding on the intervenor, even though the estate was of such value that the Court which passed the decrees in the rent suits would not have jurisdiction to try the title which was in dispute. PRAN NATH SANDYAL v. RAM COOMAR SANDYAL . . . . . 2 C. L. R. 33

66. ———— Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 2—Suit for rent. The plaintiffs brought this suit to establish, as against the defendants, their title to certain land in the occupation of a tenant. In a previous suit instituted by one of the present defendants against the tenant for rent, one of the present plaintiffs (representing the right now claimed by all of them) intervened as a defendant, on the ground that he was the person entitled to the rent, and failed to establish his claim. Held, following the Full Bench case of Hurri Sunker Mookerjee v. Muktarum Patro, 13 B. L. R. 238, that the plaintiffs in this suit were barred by the judgment in the former suit. When once it is made clear that the self-same right and title is substantially in issue in two suits, the precise form in which either suit was brought, or the fact that the plaintiff in the one case was the defendant in the other becomes immaterial. 81. ————— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 13. Two-thirds of a village were sold by T, P, and B. B was the widow of S, her name being recorded in respect of the property formerly recorded in his name, and what she sold was his one-third share in the village, the other one-third being sold by T and P. The vendors having refused to give possession of the property, the purchasers sued them for possession of it and joined as defendants to the suit C, D, and M, to whom belonged the remaining one-third share in the village. These latter persons contended, inter alia, that the family was a joint one, and that B was not competent to alienate her deceased husband's share in the village. The Court decided that the family was joint. After B's death, her daughter K, whose name had been recorded in place of her mother's, made a usufructuary mortgage of another village in which her deceased father had formerly owned a share. A suit was brought by certain persons who had purchased the right in the same village of the representatives in interest of C, D, and M against K, her mortgagee, and their vendors, to set aside the mortgage and recover the interest which they had purchased. They contended that the family was joint, and that the question whether it was joint or divided was res judicata by reason of the decision in the former litigation. Held, that the question whether the family was joint or divided had not, in the former suit, been determined among the defendants inter se, but simply as against the plaintiff, and could only be res judicata against him or parties claiming under the same title; and the decree in that suit was therefore not binding against K in the hands of the present plaintiffs, who were not the assignees of the plaintiff in the former suit, but of persons who were arrayed in it as defendants along with B, K's mother, and on the same side. *Shadal Khan v. J set up as a defence that M had waived his right of pre-emption. The suit was dismissed on the ground that the sale had never taken place. Held, that the finding as to the alleged sale was one between the plaintiff and the defendants in the suit, and not between the defendant-vendor and the defendant-vendee, who were not litigating and would not bar adjudication of the matter in issue between them in a suit brought by the latter for the establishment of the same. *JUMNA SINGH v. P V denied the will, and alleged that the property was ancestral and had vested in him by survivorship. L N set up title to the property under a will in writing executed by N and denied the title both of B and of P V. The question whether P V was divided or not from N was tried. It was found that the will in writing was valid, that P V was divided, and that B's title was not proved. In a suit by L N against P V to recover certain land granted to her by the will executed by N:—Held, that the question whether P V was divided from N was res judicata under s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure by reason of the decision in the former suit, although in that suit P V and L N were both defendants. *VENKAYYA v. The tenant was dispossessed by the present karnavan, and in 1886 sued him and the plaintiff to recover possession of part of the land. That suit was dismissed on the ground that the above allegations of the plaintiff were unfounded. She now sued the present karnavan for possession of the entire land. Held, that the claim of the plaintiff was res judicata so far as it related to the land in question in the former suit, but not as to the rest. MADHAVI v. 86. ————— Plea raised in former suit. A Mapilla, alleging that certain "family property" had been enjoyed by herself and the defendants (who were her relations on the mother's side) in common till one year before suit, when she was excluded from possession, now sued to recover the share to which she claimed to be entitled under the Mahomedan law of inheritance. It appeared that the property had been acquired in the lifetime of the plaintiff's maternal grandfather, who had died more than thirty years before suit, and that one of his sons had obtained a decree for his share of it in a suit to which, among others, the plaintiff and the father of the present contesting defendants were parties as defendants, and that a plea then raised by the latter to the effect that the property had been acquired by him was overruled. The present claim was sought to be resisted on the same ground, which was the subject of the second issue; and it was held by the lower Courts that the defendants were estopped from raising the plea, but there was no evidence as to whether this matter had been in controversy between the present plaintiff and her uncle in the former suit, which was decided ex parte as far as she was concerned. Held, on second appeal, without finding on the question of res judicata, that in the absence of evidence no

87. ————— Plaintiff and defendants co-defendants in former suit decreed against them ex parte. In a suit to recover the plaintiff's share of lands appertaining to an agra-haram, the defendants pleaded that the lands in question were their own and were not subject to partition. It appeared that in a previous suit brought by a third party against the present plaintiff and defendants and others to recover his share of the agra-haram lands it was held that the lands now in question formed part of the lands of the agra-haram, and they were divided in execution of the decree in that suit. Against the present plaintiff that suit was decreed ex parte. Held, that the defendants were precluded under the Civil Procedure Code, s. 13, from raising the above plea. LATCHANNA v. The property had previously belonged to the father, since deceased, of the first defendant's wife, and her sister, defendant No. 2. Shortly after the father's death, a suit for maintenance was brought by his sister-in-law against his widow and two daughters, in which the then defendants alleged that the property now in question had been given by him to the wife of the plaintiff's vendor, and the Court recorded a finding that the gift was valid. Defendant No. 2 now raised a plea that the gift to her sister had not been accompanied by possession and was invalid, and she asserted title in herself under the will of her mother, under which title she had been in possession for ten years. Held, that the second defendant was not precluded by the proceedings in the former suit, in which defendant No. 2 and the wife of defendant No. 1 had been co-defendants, from raising the plea above referred to. RAMANUJA AYYANGAR v. That suit was decreed with costs, the whole of which were realized from G. In a suit for contribution brought by G against S and A the lower Appellate Court found that G, S, and A had conspired in setting up a false defence in the former suit in order to defeat P's claim. The only evidence on which the lower Appellate Court had acted as establishing such collusion was the finding of the Court in the former suit (gathered from the grounds of appeal in that suit). Held, that that finding was inadmissible in evidence, as laid down in Sunder Nath Pal Chowdhry v. Brojo Nath Pal Chowdhry, I. L. ## 9. COMPETENT COURT.

(a) GENERAL CASES.

1. ——— Court without jurisdiction

—Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), s. 13. The decision of a Court, in order to be conclusive in another Court, must have been that of a Court which would have had jurisdiction to decide the question raised in the subsequent suit in which the decision is given in evidence as conclusive. The words "Court of competent jurisdiction," used in s. 13 of the Court of Civil Procedure, include the meaning that the first Court must not have been precluded by the pecuniary limit of its jurisdiction from deciding the question raised in the other. The two Courts must exercise such concurrent jurisdiction in regard to the pecuniary limit of their powers that the subject-matter of the second suit would not have been beyond the powers of the Court which disposed of the prior one. The defence made to a suit on a bond for R12,000 and interest thereon, in a Court having no pecuniary limit of jurisdiction, was that in a prior suit for R1,665, balance of interest, brought in a Court with power to try suits not exceeding R5,000 in value, the principal sum due on that bond had been decided to be R4,790. Held, that the issue as to the amount of principal due on the bond had not been heard and finally decided by a Court of competent jurisdiction within the meaning of s. 13. MISIR RAGHO BARDIAL v. proposition, stated in the judgment in Edun v. Bechun, 8 W. R. 175, and affirmed by the Judicial Committee in Misir Raghobardial v. Sheo Baksh Singh, I. L. R. 9 Calc. 439, is applicable equally to cases under Act VIII of 1859, s. 2 (as supplemented by the general law), and to cases under the more complete enactment in Act X of 1877, s. 13, which is not to be construed as having altered the former law. A suit was brought in the Court of a Subordinate Judge by a Hindu against the widow of a deceased brother, claiming his property by right of survivorship, the issue being whether, at the death of the latter, the ownership of the brothers was joint or separate. An order under Act XXVII of 1860, granting a certificate to the widow, did not, on the above issue, operate as res judicata in the widow's favour, being a proceeding of representation, and not otherwise of title. Held, also, that a decision of the same issue in a Munsif's Court in a rent suit brought by the widow, the surviving brother, on his application, having been made a party defendant under s. 73 of Act VIII of 1859, did not constitute res judicata in her favour. Krishna Behari Roy v. Brajeswari Chowdhurani, L. R. 2 I. A. 283, referred to and followed. Held, also, that the brother having appealed against a decree dismissing the suit as res judicata (the judgment which that decree followed having nevertheless found that the widow was disentitled by reason of the brothers having been in fact joint in estate), the widow could have supported the decree without filing a cross-appeal as to that finding on the ground that the decree had been rightly made (though not for the reason given) in her favour. RUN BAHADUR SINGH v. 3. ——— Courts without concurrent jurisdiction—Court not having jurisdiction to decide question of title. Where the Court trying the case, in which the judgment is set up as res judicata, has not concurrent jurisdiction with the Court trying the subsequent case, the principle of res judicata cannot apply. So the judgment in a suit before the Deputy Collector which decides merely questions of rent—in other words a rent-suit—pronounced by a Court not having jurisdiction to decide the question of title to the property itself cannot be regarded as amounting to res judicata in a subsequent suit brought to decide the question of title to that property. Run Bahadoor v. 4. ——— Court without power to make final decision—Issue decided in a suit not subject to appeal—Same issue raised in a subsequent suit subject to appeal—Small Cause Court suit—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 13—

Meaning of the words "competent to try such subsequent suit." In 1879 the plaintiff brought a suit against the defendants to recover R119 which he alleged had been wrongfully exacted from him by the defendants as enhanced rent of certain land in his occupation. He claimed to be owner of the land subject to a quit-rent payable to the defendants. The defendants denied his ownership, and asserted their right to levy the enhanced rent. The lower Court held that the defendants were entitled to the enhanced rent, and dismissed the plaintiff's claim, and the decree was confirmed on appeal by the District Court. The plaintiff appealed to the High Court, which held that the plaintiff's claim being for an amount less than R500 and within the cognizance of a Court of Small Causes, no second appeal lay. In 1883 the plaintiff brought the present suit in the District Court to recover from the defendants the sum of R689 alleged to have been wrongfully exacted from him by the defendants as enhanced rent of the land in question. He made the same allegations as in the former suit. The District Judge dismissed the suit, holding it to be res judicata. The plaintiff appealed to the High Court. Held, that, although the material question in both suits was the same—viz., as to the defendant's right to enhance the plaintiff's rent,—yet the decision of the District Court upon that point in the previous suit was not res judicata so as to prevent the question being again raised between the parties. From the decision in the former suit there was no appeal by reason of the suit being one for an amount less than R500. Had that suit been for a larger amount, the decision of the District Court would have been subject to an appeal to the High Court. It could not have been intended by the Legislature that a decision should acquire a conclusive importance from the fact of its being made in a suit for a small amount which it could not have had if the amount was larger. The former decision could not be appealed against to the High Court, and thus, though the District Court which gave that decision was in one sense "competent to try" the second suit, and did try it, yet it was not competent to try the second suit with final effect, as it had tried the earlier one. In s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) the words "competent to try such subsequent suit or issue" must mean "competent to try the suit or issue with conclusive effect." The District Court could not in the present suit have tried with conclusive effect, and disposed of the issue tried in the first suit, and hence the prior decision was not res judicata. BHOLABHAI v. ADEsang. BHOLABHAI v. COLLECTOR OF KAIRA I. L. R. 9 Bom. 75

5. ———— Court not of competent jurisdiction. A brought a suit against B for R3,152, that is, for one instalment due under a bond. The suit was heard and decided by a Subordinate Judge of second class, who had been deputed to assist a Subordinate Judge of the first class. A obtained a decree for the amount claimed. A then brought a second suit against B in the Court of a Subordinate Judge of the first class to recover R6,525, being the amount of two instalments due under the bond. In this suit B raised the same contentions as in the former suit. Held, that the decision in the first suit did not operate as res judicata in the second suit, as the Court that tried the first suit had no jurisdiction to try the second suit. RAMDAYAL v. JANKIDAS I. L. R. 24 Bom. 456

6. ———— Decision in superior Court of suit cognizable by inferior Court—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 13. In a suit for possession of immoveable property before the Subordinate Judge, it was objected that the suit ought to have been instituted before the Munsif, the value of the property being less than R1,000. An issue having been framed on this point, other issues were also framed as to the sanity of the plaintiff, his having had possession of the property, and evidence upon all the issues was gone into. The Subordinate Judge dismissed the suit on the first issue, but expressed his opinion that the other issues ought also to have been decided against the plaintiff. In a subsequent suit by the plaintiff for the same relief in the Court of the Munsif. Held, that the questions depending on the issues raised, other than the issues as to the valuation of the suit, were not res judicata. RAM GOBIND JHA v. MUNGAR RAM CHOWDHRY 13 C. L. R. 83

7. ———— Powers of Court deciding suit—Decision on question of title—Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), s. 13. When a question of title has to be, and is, decided by a Court of competent jurisdiction with reference to the value of the subject-matter in dispute, such decision, or the ultimate decision upon the appeal from such decision is final, and the question of title becomes res judicata as between the parties to the suit, although it may have the effect of determining the title to an estate or estates the value of which exceeds the jurisdiction of the Court in which the suit was instituted. Per WHITE, J.—In considering, on the hearing of an appeal, the competency of a Court for the purpose of deciding upon a question of res judicata, the powers of the Court in which the suit was instituted, and not those of the Court in which the suit was decided on appeal, must be looked to. *TOPONIDHEE DHIRJ GIR GOSAIN v. 8. ———— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 13—Decree of competent Court. In 1875 P sued in Munsif's Court to eject a tenant from a house and to recover arrears of rent. S intervened and claimed the house under a deed of gift. The value of the property comprised in the deed of gift exceeded the limit of the pecuniary jurisdiction of the Munsif's Court. The suit was dismissed, but on appeal the claim of S under the deed of gift was adjudicated upon and rejected, and P obtained a decree for the land. In 1882 S sued P to recover all the property comprised in the deed of gift. Held, that S was estopped by the decree in the former suit from claiming the house. It was contended by P that the deed of gift was invalid. Held, that, as to validity of the deed of gift, the decree of the Munsif's Court was not the decree of a competent Court within the meaning of s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, and therefore that S was not estopped from showing that the deed was valid and claiming the rest of the property comprised therein. PATHUMA v. SALIMAMMA

9. ——— Jurisdiction of Court at time suit is brought—Decision of Munsif—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 13. In a suit for malikana the issue between the parties substantially raises the question of the proprietary right to the estate in respect of which the malikana is claimed; and when the question of the proprietary right has been decided in a previous suit between the same parties, a subsequent suit for malikana will be barred as res judicata. The fact that the previous suit had been brought in a Munsif's Court, whereas the present suit was brought before a Subordinate Judge did not affect the question, inasmuch as the property was the same, and it was not shown that the present suit, if brought in 1860, would not have been within the jurisdiction of the Munsif, nor was it alleged that the suit in 1860 was beyond his jurisdiction. In s. 13 of Act XIV of 1882 the words "in a Court of jurisdiction competent to try such subsequent suit" refer to the jurisdiction of the Courts at the time the first suit is brought. Thus, when the first suit is within the jurisdiction of a Munsif, and the subsequent suit, by reason of an increase in value of the property, is beyond his jurisdiction, such subsequent suit would nevertheless be barred, inasmuch as, if the subsequent suit had been brought at the time when the first suit was brought, the Munsif would have been competent to try it. *GOPI NATH CHOBEY v. 10. ——— Decision of Deputy Collector—Civil Procedure Code, 1882 s. 13—Meaning of the words "Court of jurisdiction competent to try such subsequent suit." The words of s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code, "in a Court of jurisdiction competent to try such subsequent suit," refer to the jurisdiction of the Court at the time when the first suit was brought. Where therefore a suit was brought and decided in 1867 in the Court of a Deputy Collector, that Court being at the time of suit the only Court competent to try suits of the nature of the one brought, and subsequently a second suit, regarding the same subject and between some of the same parties and the representatives of others, was brought in 1881 in the Court of a Munsif, which latter suit, if it had been brought in 1867, would have been cognizable by a Deputy Collector alone:

In a subsequent suit brought by B in the Court of G against A for the land to which the subject of the former suit had been found to be an accretion:—Held, that the holding in the former suit necessarily decided that the land claimed by B was in the district of S, and therefore that the Court of G, under Act VIII of 1859, s. 14, had no jurisdiction. *PAHALWAN SINGH v. In 1834, by an order of the Governor General, it was ordered that no appeal should lie from the orders of the Agent to the Sudder Court. Held, that an order of an Agent within the districts to which the Regulation applied, made previous to the passing of the Regulation, declaring A to be the rightful heir of B, was not affected by the Regulation, and was not judicial in its nature; and that therefore, in a subsequent suit relating to the inheritance to the same property, the heir of A could not set up the order as conclusive. *BINODE KOOMAREE v. 17. ——— Joint contract—Liability of partners—Joint liability—Judgment recovered against one partner—Judgment of a foreign Court—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 13 and 14—Consent decree. The defendants were partners trading in the name of Vishnuram Gopinath and Company. On 6th July 1895, at Ahmedabad the first defendant borrowed from the plaintiff, for the purposes of the partnership business a sum of R10,000 and passed a khata in the name of his firm. On 25th April 1896, at Baroda he passed another agreement to plaintiff, under which the plaintiff was to recover the debt due to him from the partners jointly and severally. On 2nd October 1896, plaintiff obtained a decree on an award against the first defendant in the Civil Court at Baroda for R13,909-4-0, and in execution of this decree he recovered a sum of R7,000. In 1897 plaintiff filed this suit in the Court of the First Class Subordinate Judge at Ahmedabad to recover the balance, viz., R6,909-4-0, from all the partners (defendants Nos. 1 to 8). Defendants Nos. 6 to 8 resided in Baroda territory, the rest in British India. Defendants Nos. 2, 3, and 4 defended the suit. The rest did not appear. The Subordinate Judge dismissed the suit, holding, on the authority of King v. Hoare, 13 M. & W. 491, that the judgment of the Baroda Court against one partner (the first defendant) was a bar to a fresh suit against the other partners on the same cause of action. The plaintiff appealed to the High Court. Held, that the principle of King v. Hoare did not apply, and that the suit was not barred. The Baroda Court had no jurisdiction over the defendants, who were British subjects

18. ——— Foreign Court—Judgment of a Native Court—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 13, expl. VI—Meaning of the words "a Court of jurisdiction competent to try such subsequent suit." The words in s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), "a Court of jurisdiction competent to try such subsequent suit," mean a Court having concurrent jurisdiction with the Court trying the subsequent suit, whether as regards the pecuniary limit of its jurisdiction, or the subject-matter of the suit, to try it with conclusive effect. Reading expl. VI with the earlier part of s. 13, the term "Court of competent jurisdiction" includes a foreign competent Court. The plaintiff sued as the adopted son of O to recover certain property in British territory. The defendants disputed the plaintiff's adoption. The plaintiff relied on a decree of a Native Court which he had obtained against defendant No. 2 in a suit for possession of certain other property belonging to O and situate within the territorial jurisdiction of the Native Court. In that suit the question of plaintiff's adoption had been raised and decided in plaintiff's favour. In the present suit both the lower Courts, without attaching any weight to this decree of the Native Court, held that the plaintiff's adoption was not proved, and dismissed the suit. Held, on second appeal, that the question of plaintiff's adoption was res judicata as between him and defendant No. 2, the judgment of the Native Court being one on the merits and conclusive between the parties within the territory of the Native State. *BABABHAT v. 19. ——— Pecuniary valuation of suit—Civil Procedure Code, s. 13. A suit for two declarations filed in a Subordinate Court was valued by the plaintiffs at a sum in excess of the pecuniary jurisdiction of the District Munsif. It was pleaded that the matter in dispute was res judicata by reason of decrees passed in District Munsif's Courts. No objection was taken in the Subordinate Court to the valuation of the suit. Held, that the plea of res judicata failed. GANAPATI v. CHATHU

20. ——— Finality of order—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 241. S S brought a suit under a mortgage-bond, making R S, a subsequent incumbrancer, a defendant, and obtained a decree for a sale of the whole of the mortgaged premises. After the decree, a compromise was effected between all the parties, with the exception of R S, by the terms of which, in consideration of the judgment-debtors (mortgagors) undertaking to do certain acts, S S promised to execute his decree against only a 3 annas 12 dams share of the mortgaged premises. The judgment-debtors (mortgagors) having failed to carry out the compromise, S S applied for a sale of the whole of the mortgaged premises, but on the petition of R S setting out the terms of the compromise to which he was no party, the Subordinate Judge, by an order of the 7th September 1885, held that under the agreement S S was entitled to sell only a 3 annas 12 dams share of the mortgaged premises, which was accordingly directed to be sold. That order was not appealed against, but subsequently, in March 1886, S S made a fresh application for a sale of the remainder of the premises, R S objecting. Held, that the order of the 7th September was one which the Court was competent to make under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure and by reason of that order not being appealed it became final. *BASUDEO NARAIN SINGH v. 21. — Separate suit on disallowance of objection to execution—Evidence Act, s. 44. In execution of decree the defendant, who was sued as the representative of her deceased brother objected under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure to the attachment of certain lands to which she set up independent title. The objection was disallowed, and the land was sold. She then sued the execution-purchaser to set aside the Court sale, and obtained a decree, against which no appeal was preferred. She now sued for possession. Held, that, as against the execution-purchaser, the decree in the former suit was res judicata and therefore final. Per Curiam: The words "not competent" in s. 44 of the Evidence Act refer to a Court acting without jurisdiction. *KETILAMMA v. 22. — "Court of competent jurisdiction"—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 13, 98, 103—Landlord and tenant—Suit for damages against lessor—Joinder of one of two co-lessees as defendant—Suit dismissed against such lessee. In 1883 A, the trustee of a certain charity, executed in favour of X and Y an agricultural lease for nine years and delivered over possession of the lands comprised in it, being part of the trust property. The lease contained a provision that it should be cancelled on default being made in payment of the rent and kist, and it contained no express covenant for quiet enjoyment. In 1887 default was made in payment of the rent and kist. A thereupon cancelled the lease and sued X and Y in a subordinate Court and obtained a decree for the arrear, the total amount of his claim being R2,807. In that suit X alleged that Y was merely a name lender for A, who desired to benefit himself at the expense of the charity, and also that certain raiyats setting up a false claim had evicted X from the lands demised at the instigation of A, who had subsequently sought unsuccessfully to obtain further advantages for himself. The Subordinate Judge framed an issue on each of these allegations and recorded findings in the negative. In the same year X filed a suit for damages for breach of contract against A and Y in the High Court, repeating in his plaint the above allegations. When that suit came on for hearing, it was dismissed for default, Y being the only party who appeared. X now sued A again on the same cause of action, making the same allegations. Y was subsequently brought on the record as being a necessary party to the suit, being joined as second defendant, but he applied to be and was struck off the record on the ground that the dismissal of the former suit in the High Court was final as against him. Held, that the matters put in issue in the subordinate Court were not res judicata by reason of the decision of that Court; and that the plaint disclosed a good cause of action against the lessor. VITHILINGA PADAYACHI v. VITHILINGA MUDALI

23. — Suit against a Sovereign Prince—Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), ss. 13, 433. A suit for a declaration of the title of the plaintiffs' tarwad to certain land was filed in a District Court against the Maharaja of Cochin and others, including the trustees of a devasom. It appeared that the same land was the subject of a suit instituted in a subordinate Court on the 6th August 1877, to which the representatives of both the plaintiffs' tarwad and the devasom were parties, and that the land was then found to be the property of the devasom, and a decree was passed accordingly. It was contended that the present claim was not res judicata by reason of that decree, because, under the provisions of Act X of 1877, s. 433, which came into operation during the pendency of that suit, no Sovereign Prince could be sued in any Court subordinate to a District Court, and the Court which passed that decree was not therefore "a Court of jurisdiction competent to try" the present suit within the meaning of Civil Procedure Code, s. 13. Held, that, although these words, must be taken to refer to the jurisdiction of the Court at the time the suit was heard and determined, yet the present claim was res judicata, since the title to the land was a matter in issue within the cognizance of the Subordinate Judge and was adjudicated on by him. KUNJI AMMA v. RAMAN MENON. I. L. R. 15 Mad. 494

24. — Munsif, jurisdiction of—Valuation of suit—Evidence Act, s. 44—Power of guardian to alienate land—Compromise of litigation. In 1882 the daughter of a deceased Hindu brought a suit in the Court of a District Munsif for a declaration that the defendant was not the adopted son of her father (deceased) as he claimed to be. It was found that the alleged adoption was valid, and the suit was dismissed. The then defendant now brought in 1889 a suit in the same Court to recover possession of land from the then plaintiff alleging that it had been wrongfully transferred to her by way of gift by his adoptive mother. The defendant denied the adoption and asserted that the transfer was valid as having taken place in accordance with an arrangement made by her father in his lifetime. It was admitted that the value of the whole property, to which the plaintiff was entitled by virtue of his adoption, if it was a valid adoption, exceeded R2,500. The Court of first appeal held that the question of the adoption was not res judicata, and observed that the transfer to the defendant was apparently made to induce her to abandon her litigation as to the adoption. Held, that the defendant was not at liberty to question the plaintiff's adoption, that matter being res judicata, and that the Court should try whether the transfer was made bona fide by the plaintiff's mother as his guardian for his benefit. *VENKATARAGHAVA v. This objection was allowed, and the plaintiff then sued for establishment of his right to possession of the land jointly with the objector, making the former judgment-debtor and the objector defendants to the suit. The Subordinate Judge in first appeal held that the Munsif had acted under s. 331 of the Code and applying s. 13 of the Code dismissed the suit. Held, on appeal, that under the circumstances the Munsif had no jurisdiction to act under s. 331, and therefore his order was not a res judicata in the proceedings. *MAHABIR PRASAD v. Issues as to both of these matters were decided in favour of the defendant, and the suit was dismissed in 1874. The obligee brought a suit in the former Court to recover the principal and interest due on the bond against the obligor personally, on the covenant to pay contained in the bond, and prayed also for sale of the property hypothecated. That Court dismissed that suit so far as it related to the property, and also so far as the claim for principal was concerned, but awarded the plaintiff the interest claimed against the defendant personally. Subsequently the obligee brought a suit in the Court within the jurisdiction of which the property was situate for recovery of the principal money due on the bond by sale of the hypothecated property. Held, that the latter suit was not barred by reason of the former suit, either under s. 13 or under s. 43 of the Civil Procedure Code. *NARASINGA RAU v. 32. ———— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 13. In a suit for arrears of rent brought against A in a Munsif's Court, B intervened as a defendant, alleging that he, and not A, was the true tenant in possession. B succeeded in the first Court, but on appeal it was decided that B had no right in or possession of the tenure. In a second suit for arrears of rent brought against A, the tenure was sold in execution of decree, and the landlords purchased and took possession of it. B brought the present suit (valued at more than R1,000) in the Court of the Subordinate Judge for declaration of his right and recovery of possession. The lower Court of appeal held that the decision in the former suit, in which B intervened, operated as res judicata upon the question of title raised in the present suit, and in support of that decision it was contended that the word "suit" in s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code included an appeal, and that, as the District Judge who tried the appeal in the former suit had jurisdiction to try the present suit and it was the decision of that Court which was pleaded in bar, the defence on the ground of res judicata was good and valid, Held, that the contention was not right, and the present suit was not barred by res judicata, the former suit having been brought in a Court which was not a Court of jurisdiction competent to try the present suit. *Run Bahadur Singh v. The property of the tarwad was valued by plaintiffs at R3,000, and this was held to be a true valuation, but it appeared that the value of the plaintiffs' interest in it was R2,000 only. In a previous suit between the parties, which had been brought in the Court of a District Munsif it had been held that the parties belonged to the same family; and this finding had been upheld on appeal. Plaintiffs did not ask, by way of further relief, for possession of a portion of the property, which was in the enjoyment of the defendants. Held, that the suit was barred, both as res judicata, and by s. 42 of the Specific Relief Act. a month after the date of the bond. Held, that, as the Small Cause Court could not have jurisdiction to decide as to the lien, its decree would only be relevant as showing that the defendants at the time owed the money to the plaintiff, and that it would be open to the defendant to question the execution and bona fides of the bond as affecting the property which he had taken by conveyance. *POHOLI MULLICK v. The defendants pleaded that the validity of the agreement was res judicata for the reason that they had brought a previous action upon it against the plaintiffs and had obtained a decree for Rs. 75. Held, that the validity of the agreement was not res judicata, because the previous suit was of a Small Cause nature. *SRIKANGACHARIAR v. s. 278 of the Civil Procedure Code is "an order made in a suit" within the meaning of s. 37 of the Presidency Small Cause Court Act (XV of 1882), and is final, subject only to the right to apply for a new trial. Ismail Solomon Bhamji v. Mahomed Khan, I. L. R. 18 Calc. 296, followed. The words of s. 28 (Act XV of 1882), "for the purpose of execution," must mean for all purposes of execution, inclusive of the purpose of determining objections made to attachments. Tiled huts for all the purposes of execution are therefore moveable property under that section. The Small Cause Court has full power and authority to determine the question of title under a mortgage over attached property, and that question is therefore res judicata. *DENO NATH BATABYAL v. This defence was upheld by the Court of first instance and on appeal. In 1899 A brought the present suit against B, C, D and E, in the same Court, on the same deed of lease; this time claiming possession of the same land together with rent for less than two years. It was contended that the suit was not barred under s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure, inasmuch as the Court which had tried the former suit was not a Court competent to try the present suit within the meaning of the section referred to, for the reason that the former suit was cognizable by a Small Cause Court, whereas the present suit was for the recovery of land, and a second appeal would lie from a decree passed in it. Held, that the Court which had tried the former case was a Court competent to try the present suit, within the meaning of s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure. *Subbammal v. ## (c) REVENUE COURTS.

In early decisions it was held that a decision of a Revenue Court in a case under the Rent Act, 1859,

was in some circumstances binding in a Civil Court. WOOMESH CHUNDER SOOTEE v. RAM CHUNDER MOWREE . . . . . 4 W. R., Act X, 40

OOMA CHURN DUTT v. BECKWITH

5 W. R., Act X, 3

EESHOOREE SINGH v. HUNTER . . . . . 2 N. W. 53

45. ———— Decision of Revenue Court—Suit for rent—Jurisdiction of Collector. The decision of the Collector in a suit for rent of certain land is conclusive in a subsequent suit between the same parties in a Civil Court for a declaration that the land is liable to pay rent. MOHESH CHUNDER BUNDOPADHYA v. JOYKISHEN MOOKERJEE

46. ———— Suit for resumption of invalid lakhiraj—Act X of 1859, s. 28—Beng. Reg. II of 1819, s. 30. That a rayat's holding was of a date prior to 1790 once decided in the zamindar's suit under s. 28, Act X of 1859, must be considered as res judicata in a subsequent suit under s. 30. Regulation II of 1819. KALLEE PERSHAD HOLDAR v. SOOBHOGEA DABEA

1 W. R. 218

Most of the later cases, however, decided that a decision of the Revenue Court was not conclusive on a matter of title in a subsequent suit in the Civil Court.

47. ———— Decision of Collector on question of possession. The decision of a Collector on a question of possession and of the right to receive the rent does not bar an action in the Civil Courts to try the title of the parties. KALIDASS GHOSE v. CHANDRAMOHINI DAS 8 W. R. 68

48. ———— Entry in revenue record under order of Collector—Suit in ejectment to determine title—N.-W. P. Land Revenue Act (XIX of 1873), s. 102. An entry in a revenue record which is based solely on the fact of possession cannot operate as res judicata on a question of title subsequently raised in a civil suit. Dukhna Kunwar v. Unkar Pande, I. L. R. 19 All. 452, referred to. KALIANI v. DASSU PANDE

I. L. R. 20 All. 520

49. ———— Suit for declaration of title after suit for rent in Revenue Court. A, suing B for arrears of rent on the allegation that B held an utbundee jote from him on certain lands of plaintiff's jote jumma, obtained a decree for rent for one year, the period for which he sued. B then brought an action in the Civil Court for a declaration of his right to the jote jumma in question, alleging that he held the land direct from the zamindar, and was not A's raiyat; A pleading that the Civil Court had no jurisdiction after the Revenue Court had declared B to be his raiyat. Held, that the Revenue Court's decree was not conclusive as to the question of title, i.e., as to whose right it was to have the particular jote jumma as his property. DHONAYE MUNDUL v. ARIF MUNDUL . . . . . 9 W. R. 306

50. ————— Decree of Revenue Court for arrears of rent—Suit for declaration of title as lakhirajdar. A decree of a Revenue Court awarding arrears of rent for a certain year under a kabuliat against a raiyat does not bar the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts in a suit brought by him for a declaration of his title as lakhirajdar in the same land. TARA CHAND MYTEE v. NILAMBUR MUNDUL . . . . . 3 W. R. 227

51. ————— Suit for possession after ejectment—Jurisdiction of Collector. In a suit to recover possession on the ground of illegal ejectment, a Collector has no jurisdiction to inquire into any matter having reference to the rights of the parties so as to bar a subsequent suit for them. SHEEB CHUNDER MAHNEEAH v. BROJONATH ADITYA 14 W. R. 301

52. ————— Suit in Revenue Court under s. 23, Act X of 1859—Title—Subsequent suit for possession. A decision in a suit to recover occupation where the plaintiff is found to have been illegally ejected under Act X of 1859, s. 33, cl. 6, does not bar a regular suit for possession by the defendant in the former suit grounding his claim on title, and in which the question of title is to be tried. SOORJEE KANTO ROY v. FORLONG 1 Ind. Jur. N S. 382: 6 W. R., Act X, 44

53. ————— Decision of Deputy Collector in suit for ejectment. Where a Deputy Collector declined jurisdiction in a suit for ejectment under s. 28, Act X of 1859, and the appeal against this decision to the Judge was dismissed:—Held, that that decision was no bar to a suit for ouster in the Civil Court, either in the way of res judicata or otherwise. BASER MAHOMED v. SUDDER GHAZEE . . . . . 7 W. R. 97

54. ————— Possessory suit under Rent Act. A possessory suit under cl. 6 of s. 23 of the Rent Act, 1859, by a raiyat against his zamindar did not bar a suit for confirmation of title by the intervenor in that suit. TARA CHAND GHOSE v. RADHAMONEE DOSSEE . . . 7 W. R. 469 reversing on review . . . . . 5 W. R., Act X, 9

55. ————— Suit for rent—Jurisdiction of Collector. In a suit for rent under Act X of 1859, the Collector had no jurisdiction to decide a question of mokurari title otherwise than so far as it might be incidental to the determination of the amount of rent, if any, due; and his decision on such a question was therefore not binding in a subsequent suit to establish the mokurari right. BABUR ALI v. DOWLUT ALI 15 B. L. R. 242: 19 W. R. 217

that reference to the Collector in a suit pending before the Deputy Collector was irregular, and his opinion and order on such reference had no weight at all, and could not amount to a decision which, not having been appealed against, would operate as a bar to the adjudication on the point referred. SAHIB SINGH v. PUT RAM . . . . . 1 Agra Rev. 17

57. ————— Same parties in different character. The decision in a suit under Act X of 1859 against the defendants as the plaintiff's tenants did not bar a suit brought in the Civil Court against the same defendants as the plaintiff's vendees, the parties being accidentally the same persons, but legally different persons, with different rights and interests. GOLAM AHMED v. SHAM SOONDUR ROY . . . . . 5 W. R., Act X, 9

58. ————— Suit to assess or resume invalid lakhiraj land—Jurisdiction of Collector—Act X of 1859, s. 28. A suit by a zamindar to assess or resume land alleged to be invalid lakhiraj, under s. 28 of Act X of 1859, had to be brought in the Revenue Courts. GUNGA HURRY DHOBEY v. TRIFF . . . . . 1 W. R. 31

In such a suit a Collector had no jurisdiction to try whether a title under a grant made prior to the 1st of December 1790 was valid or not. MOOROOBEE SAHOO v. LATOO (OOMAR) . . . W. R. F. B. 70

59. ————— Act X of 1859, s. 28—Jurisdiction of Collector. If it was established, in a suit under s. 28, Act X of 1859, that the defendant's lakhiraj tenure was created prior to 1790, it was immaterial whether it was within plaintiff's talukh or not. Therefore the finding upon the question of parcel or no parcel by a Deputy Collector in such a suit was not binding on the Civil Court in any suit which might thereafter be brought to resume the land as invalid lakhiraj created prior to 1790, or in any other suit. RAMNEEDHY BOYDE v. NEAMUT . . . . . Marsh. 355: 2 Hay 437

60. ————— Suit for rent—Act X of 1859—Beng. Act VIII of 1869—Jurisdiction of Collector. Held (JACKSON, J., dissenting), that a judgment by a Collector, in a suit under Act X of 1859, declaring the plaintiff entitled to assess rent upon land alleged by the defendant to be lakhiraj, is not conclusive in a subsequent suit between the same parties for arrears of rent under Bengal Act VIII of 1869. Per JACKSON, J.—A decision in a previous and similar suit upon an issue raised substantially in the same manner by parties in a Revenue Court is binding upon them as evidence in a subsequent suit, which, but for the passing of Bengal Act VIII of 1869, would also have been brought in a Revenue Court. HURRI SUNKUR MOOKERJEE v. MUKTARAM PATRO 15 B. L. R. F. B. 238: 24 W. R. 154 by a Revenue Officer under s. 106 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885, is res judicata between the same parties in a subsequent suit in a Civil Court. Hurri Sunker Mookerjee v. Mukhtaram Patro, 15 B. L. R. 238, not applied. GOKHUL SAHU v. JODU NUNDUN ROY. GOBIND SAHU v. LUCHMI NARAIN ROY

The words "objection" and "dispute" in ss. 105 and 106 of the latter Act are not synonymous terms. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA v. KAJIMUDDY

64. ———— Decision in rent suit—Beng. Act VIII of 1869—Jurisdiction of Civil Court. The decision of the Civil Court in a suit for rent under Bengal Act VIII of 1869 was binding in a suit between the same parties for a declaration that the land, the rent of which was the subject of the former suit, is lakhiraj. MOHIMA CHUNDER MOZOOMDAR v. ASRADHA DASSIA

65. ———— Question of title in Civil Court in rent-suits since the passing of Beng. Act VIII of 1869. The old Privy Council and Full Bench rulings, that a Revenue Court's decision on title in a rent-suit under Act X of 1859 is not conclusive, went upon a Collector's incompetency to determine a question of title, but do not now apply to the decision of a competent Civil Court hearing a rent suit under the Rent Act, 1869. RAM DOSS NUSHKUR v. RASH MONEE DOSSEE

25 W. R. 189

66. ———— Decision in suit declaring title—Subsequent suit for rent. A decree of a Civil Court in a suit concerning the title is not of itself in all cases a bar to a suit against a tenant for rent by the person against whom such decree has been obtained. When the decree clearly adjudicates against the plaintiff's right and the Collector sees that it relates to the property in question and is in force, the Collector should give effect to the decree as a bar to the plaintiff's suit for rent, notwithstanding that the plaintiff may have an actual receipt of rent prior to the institution of the suit. TARINEE v. BAMUNDOS MOAKHEE . 1 W. R. 331

67. ———— Decision as to validity of pottah—Decision of Revenue Court—Title—Collateral issue. The trial and determination by the Revenue Court of the amount of rent which the plaintiff is entitled to under a mokurari pottah, in which the genuineness of the pottah only comes collaterally in issue in determining the amount of rent, was not a bar to a subsequent suit in the Civil Court to try the validity of the pottah. *JANESWAR DAS v. 69. ———— Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 2—Suit for declaration of title—Order of Collector under Act X of 1859, s. 23. In a suit for declaration of title to land from which a raiyat had been ejected at the suit of his zamindar by the order of a Collector under s. 23, Act X of 1859, and wherein the genuineness of the pottah upon which the suit was brought was at issue, the order of the Collector could not be pleaded in bar. *BHAIRO SINGH v. 70. ———— Suit to declare pottah forged. The proceedings in a suit under Act X of 1859, in which the Collector did not finally adjudicate upon the genuineness of a pottah, although he accepted it as genuine, were no bar to a subsequent suit in the Civil Court for a declaration kabuliat—Court of competent jurisdiction—Question of title, decision of, by Revenue Court. Where, for the purposes of a rent suit, a Revenue Court found that a kabuliat propounded by the plaintiff was a genuine document, such finding was no bar to a Civil Court trying the question of right between the parties, and for that purpose trying the validity and genuineness of the kabuliat. BOISTUR CHURN SEN v. TRAHEE RAM SEIN . . . . . 15 W. R. 32

72. ———— Decision as to validity of bond—Court of competent jurisdiction—Concurrent jurisdiction—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 2. A brought a suit against B in the Collector's Court, for rent. In answer, B set up a bond, by the terms of which A, in consideration of a loan of R10,000 stipulated that B should apply a certain portion of the annual rent to the reduction of the loan, and the payment of the interest thereon. A alleged that the bond was false. The Collector, in an issue directed by the High Court, decided that it was genuine, and this decision was affirmed on appeal. B afterwards sued A in the Civil Court upon the bond. Held per PEACOCK, C.J., and PHEAR, J. (CAMPBELL, J., dissentiente), that the Collector's decision as to the genuineness of the bond did not operate as an estoppel. The two Courts were not Courts of concurrent jurisdiction. Per PEACOCK, C.J.—Quære: Is a judgment of a Court of concurrent jurisdiction between the same parties on the same point conclusive between the parties in another Court in the country? EDUN v. BECHUN . . . . . 2 Ind. Jur. N. S. 264: 8 W. R. 175

73. ———— Decision as to genuineness of document—Decision by Deputy Collector—Jurisdiction of the Revenue Courts. A, a raiyat, brought a suit in the Court of the Deputy Collector against B, his zamindar, for recovery of possession, of a piece of land, on the ground that he was the holder of a mirasi pottah, and that he had been illegally ejected by B. The Deputy Collector held that the mirasi pottah was genuine, and that B had illegally ejected A. He passed a decree in favour of A, in execution of which A obtained possession of the land in dispute. In a suit brought by B against the heirs of A in the Civil Court for recovery of possession of the said piece of land on the ground that the mirasi pottah was a spurious document and that no mirasi pottah had been granted to A.—Held (JACKSON, J., doubting), that the decision of the Deputy Collector was not conclusive between the parties. 74. ———— Decision as to validity of document—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 2—Former suit in Revenue Court. In a suit by a tenant to recover possession of land from which he had been dispossessed by defendant under colour of a sub-lease alleged to have been exported by force, it appeared that plaintiff had, on the very cause of action, sued the defendant in the Court of the Collector, who had found the sub-lease to be good and valid and had dismissed the suit. Held, that the suit, having once been dismissed by a Court of competent jurisdiction, could not again be entertained by the Civil Court. HOLLOWAY v. ASMAN ROY . . . . . 10 W. R. 325

75. ———— Order of Revenue Court for ejectment—Suit for possession—Act X of 1859, s. 25. The defendant had obtained an order under s. 25, Act X of 1859, to eject the plaintiff, who now sued in the Civil Court for recovery of possession. Held, that s. 2, Act VIII of 1859, did not bar the suit. AMANAT ALI CHOWDHRY v. MUSSEN ALI . . . . . 2 B. L. R. Ap. 36: 11 W. R. 145

76. ———— Suit for ejectment—Order on application under Act X of 1859, s. 25. A suit for ejectment from land assigned for building purposes under a contract was not barred under s. 2, Act VIII of 1859, by reason of a previous order for ejectment obtained on an application under s. 25, Act X of 1859, such an application not being a suit. RAM NARAIN MITTER v. NOBIN CHUNDER MOORDAFARASH . . . . . 18 W. R. 208

77. ———— Suit for ejectment, dismissal of—Subsequent suit for ejectment. A suit for ejectment, on the ground that the defendant had entered the plaintiff's land wrongfully and forcibly, having been dismissed by the Court, which found that the defendant was not a trespasser, but a tenant.—Held, that a subsequent suit by the same plaintiff on the allegation that the defendant was a trespasser, though lately a tenant, was not prohibited by s. 2, Act VIII of 1859. The suit, however, was dismissed on other grounds. HEERA RAWUT v. RACHA RAWUT . . . . . 22 W. R. 115

78. ———— Refusal of Collector in suit under s. 25, Act X of 1859—Subsequent suit for ejectment. A Collector's refusal to give assistance under s. 25, Act X of 1859, was not a determination by a Court of competent civil jurisdiction in a former suit within the meaning of s. 2, Act VIII of 1859. Their application was refused, and then they brought a suit in the Civil Court to set aside the Collector's order and register their names. Held, that proceedings authorized to be taken in the Collector's Court under s. 27, Act X of 1859, were not proceedings in a suit; and consequently that such proceedings were no bar to a suit in the Civil Court under s. 2, Act VIII of 1859. *CHANDRA NARAYAN GHOSE v. 82. — Order by Settlement Officer—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 13—Act XIX of 1873, ss. 56, 62, 64, 241 (g). Held, that an order by a Settlement Officer directing that certain persons should be recorded as the sub-proprietors of certain land, as they claimed to be, and not as lessees, as certain persons asserted that they were, did not operate as res judicata in a suit by the latter persons against the former for a declaration that the former were not sub-proprietors of the land, but lessees thereof, the Settlement Officer not being competent, under Act XIX of 1873 (N.-W. 86. — Dismissal of suit in Revenue Court for want of jurisdiction. The dismissal of a suit for rent in the Revenue Court for want of jurisdiction (the plaintiff not having proved that he was de facto landlord in possession) was held not to bar a suit in the Civil Court for declaration of right to the same rent. *DHURONY MOJOOMDAR v. The landholder claimed the higher rate under an alleged assessment of a Batwara Amcen. The Collector made a decree setting aside the attachment, on the ground that the landholder failed to prove that the higher amount was due. Held, that the landholder could not maintain a suit in the Civil Court to assess the land at the higher rate claimed for the year for which the attachment had issued, on the ground of prior service of notice of demand of the higher rate, under Bengal Regulation V of 1812, that question having been already adjudicated upon by a Court of competent jurisdiction. The plaintiffs objected that they, and not the defendants, were the tenants-in-chief of the land in question. This objection was decided, under s. 39 of the said Act, by a Court of Revenue adversely to the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs thereupon sued in a Civil Court for a declaration that they were tenants with a right of occupancy and for maintenance of possession. Held, that, inasmuch as s. 96 (b) of Act XII of 1881 gave to a decision of a Court of revenue under s. 39 the effect of a judgment of a Civil Court, the hearing of the plaintiff's present suit by a Civil Court, was barred. 102. ———— Civil Procedure Code, s. 13—Partition—N.-W. P. Land Revenue Act (XIX of 1873), ss. 113, 114—Irregular procedure. Upon an application made under Ch. IV of the N.-W. P. Land Revenue Act (XIX of 1873) for partition of common land in which the owners of six pattis were interested, into six equal parts, an objection was raised that the land should be divided into parts proportionate to the size of the different pattis. The Assistant Collector, before whom the objection was made, disallowed it with reference to the provisions of the wajib-ul-urz in which the custom of the village was recorded, and made the partition in the manner prayed. No appeal was preferred by the objectors to the District Judge. The Collector confirmed the partition, and, after an appeal to the Commissioner, the Assistant Collector's decision was upheld. The objectors then brought a suit in the Civil Court for a declaration that the defendants were only entitled to a share of the common land proportionate to the area of their pattis. Held, that the objection which was raised in the Revenue Court was one which raised a question of title or of proprietary right in respect of the common land within the meaning of s. 113 of the N.-W. P. Land Revenue Act; that the decision of the Assistant Collector was a decision within the meaning of s. 114 of the Act; and that consequently the suit was barred by s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held, also, that the question was not affected by any mistakes in procedure that had for a declaration of proprietary right. In 1864 the defendants served a notice upon the plaintiff demanding rent for land in his possession for which the plaintiff had not paid them rent previously. The plaintiff thereupon instituted a suit in the Revenue Court contesting his liability to pay rent for such land on the ground that he was the proprietor thereof. A decree was made in that suit on the 16th August 1865, directing the plaintiff to execute a kabuliati to pay the defendants rent for such land at a certain rate. The plaintiff did not appeal from that decree, but from its date until August 1877 paid the defendants rent for such land. On the 8th August 1877 the plaintiff instituted the present suit against the defendants in the Civil Court, in which he claimed a declaration of his proprietary right to such land, and to be maintained in possession thereof as proprietor, free from the liability to pay rent, and to have the decree of the Revenue Court dated the 16th August 1865 declared null and inoperative. Held, that the plaintiff's suit in the Revenue Court not being one which that Court was competent to entertain, the decision in that suit could not be held final on the question of title raised in the present suit; and that there was nothing in the conduct of the plaintiff which estopped him from instituting the present suit. *DEBI PRASAD v. The plaintiffs thereupon sued in the Civil Court for the cancelment of the word "istemrari" in the lease, on the ground that it had been inserted fraudulently. Held, on appeal from the decree of the lower Appellate Court dismissing the suit as barred by the decision of the Revenue Court, that it was not so barred, the matter in dispute being peculiarly within the jurisdiction of the Civil Court, and not one which a Revenue Court was competent finally to determine on an application under s. 39 of Act XVIII of 1873. *HUSAIN SHAH v. The Revenue Court decided that K held the land under a right of occupancy, and not under such lease. S thereupon sued K in the Civil Court, claiming possession of such land, on the allegation that K was a trespasser wrongfully retaining possession thereof after the expiration of his lease. Held, that the decision of the Revenue Court did not render the matter in issue res judicata. The plaintiff thereupon, under the provisions of s. 39 of that Act, preferred an application contesting his liability to be ejected, alleging that he had a right of occupancy in such land jointly with the defendants and was not their sub-tenant. The Assistant Collector trying the case finally decided that the plaintiff was the sub-tenant of the defendants, and the plaintiff was ejected. The plaintiff then sued the defendants in the Civil Court for a declaration of his right as an occupancy tenant to such land and possession of the same. Held, that the decision of the Assistant Collector as to the respective rights of the parties could only be regarded as incidental and ancillary to the main point to be determined by him, viz., whether, assuming the relation of landlord and tenant to exist between the parties, the plaintiff was liable to be ejected; and such decision was not a bar to a fresh determination of such rights in the Civil Court. *BIRBAL v. The defendant did not make an application under that Act contesting his liability to be ejected, and the plaintiffs applied under ss. 40 and 95 (f) of that Act for assistance to eject him. The Revenue Court trying this application rejected it, on the ground that the defendant was not a sub-tenant of the plaintiffs, but a co-sharer in their tenancy. sought in the suit by the plaintiffs was not one which a Revenue Court could give under any of the clauses of s. 95 of the Rent Act, which presupposes an admitted relation of landholder and tenant; and therefore the determination by the Revenue Court of the plaintiff's application for ejectment of the defendant was not the decision of a Court competent to try the suit, and was no bar to its maintenance in a Civil Court within the principle of s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code. *LODHI SINGH v. P. Rent Act, and obtained an order for the resumption of certain plots of land, on the finding that they were resumable rent-free grants. The occupiers of the land were ejected, and the zamindar obtained possession. Subsequently the occupiers brought a suit in the Civil Court to obtain a declaration that they held plots in question, under a license from the zamindar's predecessor in title, as orchard land, without payment of any rent or other allowance to the landlord, and that they were entitled to retain the land on this footing so long as it should continue to be occupied with trees. They sought to recover possession of the soil and timber, asking also for "a determination of the nature of their tenure" therein. Held, that the cognizance of the suit by the Civil Court was not barred by the provisions of s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code, inasmuch as the jurisdiction of the Civil Court to entertain it was not ousted by s. 95 of the Rent Act, since the "matter" presented by the plaintiffs was not one "on which an application of the nature mentioned in that section could by them have been made to a Court of revenue, cls. 112. ———— Suit to contest demand of distrainer—Act XII of 1881 (N.-W. P. Rent Act), ss. 84, 148. A decree of a Rent Court passed upon enquiries made under ss. 84 and 148 of the Rent Act (XII of 1881) is not conclusive as between the parties to the enquiry, upon the question of title, in a suit instituted in a Civil Court for declaration of right to, and possession of, the land, in respect of which the Rent Court decree was passed. The period of limitation for instituting a suit in the Civil Court, as prescribed in these sections, applies only to suits brought by plaintiff or unsuccessful intervenor to have it declared that plaintiff had a title to receive the particular rent claimed, and which the Rent Court has refused to give him, and not to suits for declaration of title to, and possession of, the land in respect of which the rent accrued due. In 1881 the plaintiffs had under the provisions of the Rent Act (XII of 1881), made a distraint for rent alleged to be due by

One of their tenants. The tenant contested the legality of the distraint by a proceeding in the Rent Court, and the defendant intervened on the ground that he had been actually and in good faith in receipt and enjoyment of the rent of the land occupied by the tenant. On the 28th of June 1881 the Rent Court decided against the defendant; but owing to some irregularity, the distraint was withdrawn. Plaintiffs subsequently instituted a suit in the Rent Court against the tenant for recovery of arrears of rent, and the defendant again intervened, and upon enquiry, under s. 148 of the Rent Act (XII of 1881), plaintiffs' suit for arrears of rent was dismissed. Plaintiffs then instituted this suit in the Civil Court for declaration of their right to, and possession of, the land in respect of which distraint proceedings had been taken, and suit for recovery of arrears of rent instituted. The Court of first instance dismissed the suit on the merits. The plaintiffs appealed and urged (inter alia) that the defendant was estopped, by the decision of the 28th June 1881, from contesting plaintiff's title. Held, that the decision of the 28th June 1881 in the inquiry held under s. 84 of the Rent Act (XII of 1881) was not conclusive between the parties in a subsequent suit between them to determine their title to the land in respect of which the distraint proceedings had been taken. *GANGA PRASAD v. One H S mortgaged in 1864, by two mortgages of the same date, certain immoveable property to one A S. In 1877 A S applied for foreclosure of these mortgages and obtained an order under s. 8 of Regulation XXVII of 1806, but these proceedings were, it was alleged, never brought to a legal conclusion. Subsequently, the mortgagee applied in a Court of Revenue for partition in his favour of the mortgaged property. The mortgagor resisted that application on the ground that the foreclosure proceedings had not been completed; but the Court, acting under ss. 113 and 114 of Act XIX of 1873, overruled that objection and granted partition in favour of the mortgagee. In 1892 the mortgagor sued the representatives of the original mortgagee in a Civil Court for redemption of the mortgages of 1864. The defendants resisted the suit principally on the plea that s. 13 of Act XIV of 1882 applied and was a bar to the suit; but no plea of res judicata outside s. 13 was raised. The plaintiff's suit was dismissed as stated by the principle of res judicata. The plaintiff appealed. Held by TYRRELL, J., that the Court of Revenue being incompetent to determine the suit in which the issue whether the mortgages had been foreclosed or not was subsequently raised, s. 13 of Act XIV of 1882 did not apply, and no plea

The tenant then sued in the Civil Court to establish his right to compel the landlord to grant him a pottah at favourable rates for the next year, by virtue of the special agreement put forward by him in the suit in the Revenue Court. Held, that the decision of the Revenue Court was no bar to the suit. *HARIKA RAMAYYAR v. The present plaintiff did not appear when the above orders were made. The defendant relied on these proceedings as constituting a bar to the present suit. Held, following *Harika Ramayyar v. 119. ———— Decision as to right to possession—Dismissal of application by Collector to raise attachment. S, the mortgagee of a talukhdari village, obtained a decree upon his mortgage against his mortgagor, the talukhdar of the village, under which S attached the village. The Collector of the district in which the attached village was situated thereupon came in under s. 246 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1859, and sought to raise the attachment, but, as he failed to appear when the matter came on for adjudication, his application was dismissed. The village was then sold under the decree and was purchased by S, the mortgagee. Upon S seeking to obtain possession of the village, he was resisted by the Collector, whereupon S (after proceedings ineffectually taken by him under s. 269 of the Code) filed a suit against the Collector praying to be put in possession of the village. Held by the Appellate Court (affirming the decision of TUCKER, J.), that the right of S to be put in possession of the village was, as between him and the Collector, res judicata by reason of the dismissal of the Collector's application under s. 246 of the Code (to set aside which dismissal the Collector had not filed a suit within the year allowed for that purpose),

The plaintiff thereupon filed another suit under s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1877) in a Civil Court which allowed the claim and passed a decree in his favour. The defendant applied to the High Court in its extraordinary jurisdiction and contended that the plaintiff's claim was res judicata, and that the Mamlatdar's decree barred the second suit. Held, that having regard to s. 18 of the Mamlatdars' Courts Act (Bom. Act III of 1876), the Mamlatdar's decision was not conclusive, and that the plaintiff was entitled to bring the second suit under s. 9 of the Specific Relief Act. *RAMCHANDA BALAJI PHADNIS v. of a record-of-rights of an estate under s. 103 of the Bengal Tenancy Act by a Settlement Officer, the landlord put in a petition under s. 104, cl. (2), of the Act for settlement of rent of a certain tenant's holding. The tenant, notwithstanding the fact that notice was served upon him, did not adduce any evidence, and the Settlement Officer decided that the tenant was an occupancy raiyat, and fixed a fair and equitable rent for the holding. Against this decision of the Settlement Officer, no appeal was preferred to the Special Judge. Subsequently, a suit was brought in the Civil Court by the tenant to have the class to which he belonged and the nature of his holding, i.e., whether the rent was enhanceable or not, determined. The defence of the landlord was that, having regard to the decision of the Settlement Officer, the question could not be re-opened. Held, that, under the provisions of s. 104, cl. (2), and s. 107 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, the decision of the Settlement Officer amounted to a decree, and the matters determined by that decision could only be re-opened on an appeal to the Special Judge. ## 10. RELIEF NOT GRANTED.

1. ——— Dismissal of suit without leave to bring fresh suit—Civil Procedure Code, s. 373—Withdrawal of suit. Expl. III of s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code contemplates a decree which does not expressly grant the relief claimed: the termination of a suit by the plaintiff being allowed to withdraw it, without leave to bring a fresh one, is not a bar, under expl. III, to a subsequent suit in which the same matter is in issue. KAMINI KANT ROY v. RAM NATH CHUCKERBUTTY . . . . . I. L. R. 21 Calc. 265

2. ——— Refusal to give relief not claimed in plaint—Subsequent suit for possession of the land not claimed—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 2. A B instituted a suit against V B to recover possession of one-half of a field. S N and B N, on their application, were made plaintiffs in that suit, but no alteration in the amount either of stamp or claim was made in the plaint. The Principal Sudder Ameen awarded to A B one-fourth of the field, and to S N and B N conjointly he awarded one-fourth, but as to the remaining one-half he passed no decree, as it had not been claimed in the plaint. S N and B N thereupon filed a fresh suit to recover possession of their remaining one-fourth of the field, and the Principal Sudder Ameen passed a decree in their favour. This decree was confirmed by the Joint Judge. Held, that the decrees of the lower Courts were erroneous, and that the claim of the plaintiffs was barred by the provisions of s. 2 of the Civil Procedure Code, but leave was granted to them to apply to the Court below for a review of the decree passed in the former suit. *VYASRAV BALAJI v. In the schedule annexed to the plaint the mortgaged property was described as "Mouzah B, usli with dakhili,"—that is, Mouzah V K and Mouzah M B,—but in the body of the plaint it was described simply as "Mouzah B." On the death of plaintiff in that suit, the reversionary heirs of G sued the appellant for an adjudication of their right to 16 annas of Mouzah M B, and it was found that Mouzahs B K and M B were not usli with dakhili, but distinct mouzahs, and that the mortgage-deed did not include mouzah M B. Held, affirming the judgment of the High Court, that in the first suit the Court was called on to adjudicate upon the property as described in the body of the plaint, and not as described in the schedule annexed thereto, and that the question in the latter suit was therefore not res judicata. *HET NARAIN SINGH v. 4. ——— Refusal to decide question of title—Reference of party to another suit. In a suit between A and B a question of title was raised and decided in B's favour in the Court of first instance, but on appeal the Judge refused to go into it, saying that B might bring a fresh suit. 7. ——— Issue advisedly left undecided in former suit. In 1878 A, as the auction-purchaser of a talukh, sued 35 persons for possession of a part of this talukh. In this suit the issues raised were—(i) whether A had purchased the whole talukh, or an 8-anna share of the right, title, and interest of the judgment-debtors therein; (2) as to the correctness of the boundaries of the talukh as given in the plaint. The Court held that A had purchased the right, title, and interest of the judgment-debtors in the talukh, and as it appeared that some of the defendants were not judgment-debtors, and as it did not appear what portions of the talukh were held by the several defendants, the lower Appellate Court dismissed the suit, with liberty to the plaintiff to bring a fresh suit within the proper time. In 1880 A brought a fresh suit against 16 of the same defendants and 19 others for possession of a portion of the same talukh. The issues raised were—(i) whether the suit was barred under s. 13 of the Code; (ii) whether A had purchased the whole or a portion of the talukh; (iii) whether the defendants were in possession of all the disputed land, and, if not, what portions of the talukh were held by the several defendants; (iv) as to the correctness of the boundaries of the talukh. The Munsif held that the suit was not barred, and on the merits gave A a decree. The Subordinate Judge held that the suit was barred, and refused to go into the merits. Held, that the question whether A had purchased the whole or only a portion of the talukh was res judicata, but that the question as to what lands A was entitled to by virtue of his purchase having been left undecided in the former suit, A was entitled to a decision on that point. *RAM CHARAN BUHARDAR v. 8. ——— Judgment in former suit appealed from—Stay of execution pending appeal—Review. Held, that a former judgment by a Court of competent jurisdiction upon the same cause of action was conclusive between the same parties in a subsequent suit brought in another Court, notwithstanding the pendency of an appeal against it; but that the Judge passing a decree in the subsequent suit might, upon application made to him and security being given, stay the execution of it until the appeal in the former suit was decided, and might, if the decree in the former suit was reversed, entertain an application for the review of his own decision in the subsequent suit. *BULKIRAM NATHURAM v. on decision in appeal in another. The decision of an issue in one of two suits tried together, which is not appealed against, cannot be treated as res judicata so far as the same issue is concerned in an appeal from the decision in the other suit. A, a ticcadar, sued B for rent in respect of a holding in the ticca. In that suit B pleaded that he was a partner of A in the ticca transaction, and that no rent was due from him in consequence thereof. B then sued A for an account of the partnership in the same transaction, and A in that suit denied the partnership. Both suits were heard together by the Munsif, who held A was not a partner. B appealed against the judgment and decree in the account-suit, but did not appeal against that in the rent-suit. It was contended on the appeal that the question as to whether A was or was not a partner was res judicata, by reason of the decision in the rent-suit not being appealed against and having become binding. Held, that s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure did not apply, and that the question was not res judicata. 13. ——— Civil Procedure Code, ss. 13, 211, 244—Claim as to which judgment is silent—Mesne profits subsequent to suit. In a suit for the partition of the zami dari, the plaintiffs asked (inter alia) for "ten years' past profits and for subsequent profits." The Judge passed a decree for partition, in which mesne profits for three years prior to the suit were decreed to the plaintiffs, but his judgment and decree were silent with regard to the subsequent profits claimed in the plaint. The defendant appealed against the decree, and the plaintiffs preferred a memorandum of objections against part of it, but did not object to it so far as it omitted to provide for subsequent mesne profits. The plaintiffs instituted the present suit to recover from the defendants mesne profits from the date of the above suit. Held, that the plaintiffs' claim so far as concerned mesne profits, accrued since the decree in the former suit was not res judicata, and the suit to that extent was not precluded by the Civil Procedure Code, s. 13. RAMABHADRA v. JAGANNATHA . . . . . I. L. R. 14 Mad. 328

14. ———— Ex parte decree for possession without mention of mesne profits—Subsequent suit for same mesne profits and for subsequent mesne profits—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 13. A suit was instituted for recovery of possession and for mesne profits. An ex parte decree for possession only was made, but that decree was silent as regarded the mesne profits. Subsequently a second suit was instituted for the same mesne profits as well as for mesne profits for a subsequent period. Held, that the claim for mesne profits prior to the institution of the first suit was barred under s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code. JIBAN DAS OSWAL v. 15. ———— Civil Procedure Code, s. 13, expl. III—Suit for possession of land and mesne profits past and future—Future mesne profits not granted—Subsequent suit for such future mesne profits. Held, that, where a suit has been brought for possession of immoveable property and for mesne profits both before and after suit, the mere omission of the Court to adjudicate upon the claim for future mesne profits will not, by reason of s. 13, expl. III, of the Code of Civil Procedure, operate as a bar to a subsequent suit for mesne profits accruing due after the institution of the former suit. Mon Mohun Sirkar v. of on the ground of fraud, and without preferring an appeal against the order rejecting his said application under s. 108 of the Code, instituted this suit praying for the same relief. The Subordinate Judge dismissed the suit as not maintainable. Held, that such a suit was maintainable, and that ss. 13 and 244 of the Civil Procedure Code were no bar thereto. The facts that his application under s. 108 was unsuccessful, and that he did not appeal against the order rejecting that application, did not disentitle him from prosecuting his remedy by suit on the ground of fraud. Aad l Mazmdar v. Mahomed Gozi Chowdhry, I. L. R. 21 Calc. 605, approved. Held, also, that, when there is an appeal against a decision, the effect of not appealing is that the decision holds good for what it is worth; so far as concerns any other modes of relief available, the person not appealing is in no worse position than if he had appealed and failed. Raj Kishen Mookerjee v. 17. ———— Dismissal of application to set aside ex parte decree as barred by limitation—Suit to set aside as obtained by fraud—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 130 and s. 13. An ex parte decree was passed against a defendant. The defendant judgment-debtor applied under s. 108 of the Code of Civil Procedure to have such ex parte decree set aside, but his application was dismissed as barred by limitation. Held, that the defendant was not thereafter precluded from bringing a suit to set aside the ex parte decree as having been obtained by fraud. Pran Nath Roy v. 18. ———— Point decided by lower Court, but not dealt with on appeal—Issue as to enhancement of rent—Subsequent suit for enhancement. In a suit for enhancement of rent, the Munsif found that the service of notice was sufficient, but that the rent could not be enhanced. On appeal, the District Judge found that the service was insufficient, and dismissed the suit, expressly declining to consider the question whether the rent was enhanceable. In a subsequent suit for enhancement by the same plaintiff against the same defendant, the Munsif found that no sufficient ground for enhancement had been made out, and dismissed the suit. On appeal, the District Judge agreed with the Munsif on this point, and held also that the decision of the Munsif in the first suit, that the rent could not be enhanced, was res judicata. Held, that, where the decision of a lower Court is appealed to a superior tribunal, which for any reason does not think fit to decide the matter, the question is left open, and is not res judicata. CHUNDER COOMAR MITTER v. 19. ———— Effect of appealing against a judgment—Civil Procedure Codes (Act VIII of 189, s. 2; Act X of 1877, s. 13, expl. 4)—Title—Trespass—Damages. When the judgment of a Court of first instance upon a particular issue is appealed against, that judgment ceases to be res judicata, and becomes res sub judice; and if the Appellate Court declines to decide that issue, and disposes of the case on other grounds, the judgment of the first Court upon that issue is no more a bar to a future suit than it would be if that judgment had been reversed by the Court of Appeal. NILVARU v. NILVARU. I. L. R. 6 Bom. 110

20. ———— Effect of judgment pending appeal—Dismissal of appeal for want of prosecution. The plaintiff sued to recover two villages from the defendants, claiming title from C, the purchaser. The first defendant alleged that her husband, not C, was the purchaser. This question was determined in a former suit, in which the present first defendant was plaintiff, and the present plaintiff defendant, in favour of the present plaintiff by the Civil Judge and the decision was confirmed on appeal by the Sudder Court. An appeal to Her Majesty in Council was dismissed for want of prosecution. Held, that the matter in issue was res judicata. Quære: Whether the former judgment could be deemed conclusive whilst an appeal was pending. *KARKARLAPUDI SURIYANARAYANARAZU GARU v. Where a Division Bench of the High Court decided, as a point of law, that a property had not passed under a certain deed of sale, and subsequently the decision on that point of law was in another case disapproved of by a Full Bench, the decision of the Division Bench (where the same plaintiff has again sued to recover the same property, relying on the same deed of sale) is no less a res judicata because it may have been founded on an erroneous view of the law, or a view of the law which a Full Bench has subsequently disapproved. GOWRI KOER v. III—Order passed granting one relief and making no reference to the other—Subsequent application for the other relief, power of Court to grant. A decree awarded a plaintiff possession of land, together with mesne profits. Plaintiff subsequently applied, in execution, for delivery of the land, and for the mesne profits. The Court passed an order on this application, directing plaintiff to be put into possession of the land, but making no reference whatever to the mesne profits. Plaintiff subsequently made another application for mesne profits, when it was contended that, inasmuch as the prayer for mesne profits had not been granted when the previous application was dealt with, it must be taken that the application for mesne profits had been refused, and that the matter was consequently res judicata. Held, that the application was not barred, and that the law of res judicata, as laid down in expln. III to s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure, had no application to the case. NITYANANDA GANTAYET v. GAJAPATI VASUDEVA DEVU (1901)

11. PRIVATE RIGHTS.

1. ———— Prescriptive right—Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), s. 13, expln. 5. Expln. 5 of s. 13 of Act X of 1877 only applies to cases where several different persons claim an easement or other right under one common title, —as, for instance, where the inhabitants of a village claim by custom a right of pasturage over the same tract of land, or to take water from the same spring or well. Where therefore A, in defending a suit brought against him by B to have it declared that he had a right to build a wall across a drain, set up a prescriptive right to use the drain, and it was decided that no such prescriptive right existed in A, and subsequently C brought a suit against B, claiming to use the same drain as an easement, and asking for the removal of the wall in question in the former suit, and B set up the judgment in the suit between himself and A as a bar to the suit:—Held, that the right claimed by C, not being one which he and other inhabitants of the neighbourhood claimed under one common title, but a prescriptive right which he claimed individually in respect of his own house and premises and depending upon the length of time he had used the right, was a separate claim, and that the judgment in the suit between B and A did not operate as a bar to his suit. KALISHUNKUR DOSS v. GOPAL CHUNDER DUTT

2. ———— Right to use of water—Decision in former suit. A decision in a former case, in which a mere question as to the use of the water in a water-course arose, cannot operate as res judicata in a subsequent case, in which the subject-matter is whether the defendants have the right of throwing up an embankment and obstructing the water-way. MUNMOHUN SINGH v. AMRITNATH CHOWDHRY . . . W. R. 1864, 167

3. ———— Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 2—Suit on same cause of action—Suit to obtain right of way. Where a suit for right of way was once thrown out on the specific ground that according to plaintiff's own statement, the road in suit was a public one, and that the Court had no jurisdiction:—Held, that, as the real cause of action—namely, the obstruction of the road—was not decided in the first trial, s. 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure did not bar a second suit for the removal of the obstruction. NUREEM MUNDLE v. BORAMDY SIRDAR . . . 25 W. R. 208

4. ———— Right to fees for hereditary services—Decision in former suit. In an action to recover fees claimed for services as an hereditary family and village priest, it appeared that a deceased brother of the plaintiff had recovered judgment against one of the defendants and others in an action for similar fees. Held, that the former judgment was not conclusive in favour of the plaintiff, nor as against a brother of one of the original defendants. *KRISHNAMBHAT BIN SHIVRAMBHAT v. the right to receive a cake on the same occasion was disallowed. Held, that the claim of the plaintiff, so far as it sought to establish the plaintiff's right, was res judicata. ARCHAKAM SRINIVASA DIKSHATULU v. UDAYAGIRY ANANTHA CHARLU

6. ———— Right to water for irrigation—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 13n, expl. 5. In 1881 A sued B, C, and others for damages for the loss of his crops by the diversion of a water-channel by the defendants. A claimed a right common to himself and other raiyats of his village to use the water during the day-time under an arrangement by which B, C, and the other defendants in the suit were entitled to use the water during the night time. In 1882 A and four other raiyats, not parties to the former suit, sued B, C, and thirteen others, not parties to the former suit, for a decree declaring that the plaintiffs were entitled to the exclusive use of the water in the channel by day. The lower Courts held that the suit was barred by s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held, that, as between the plaintiffs other than A and the defendants and as between A and the defendants other than B and C, the suit was not barred by s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure. *THANAKOTI v. by a husband—Marriage during wife's infancy—Non-consummation of marriage—Hindu law—Poverty of husband. A, Hindu, aged nineteen years, was married by one of the approved forms of marriage to B, then of the age of even years, with the consent of B's guardians. After the marriage, B lived at the house of her step-father, where A visited from time to time. The marriage was not consummated. Eleven years after the marriage,—viz., in 1884,—the husband called upon the wife to go to his house and live with him, and she refused. 12. ——— Plea of impossibility of sexual intercourse—Legal defences to suit for restitution—Discretion of Judge to refuse decree except when legal plea is proved—Husband and wife. A plea by a wife that sexual intercourse with her is impossible owing to her incurable disease or physical malformation is not in itself a good defence to a suit by the husband for restitution of conjugal rights. A Judge has no discretion to refuse a decree for restitution of conjugal rights for other causes than those which in law justify a wife from refusing to return to live with her husband, and he cannot abstain from passing a decree in favour of a plaintiff-spouse, because he considers that it would not be for the benefit of either side that the decree should be granted. Dadaji v. Rukhmabai, I. L. R. 10 Bom. 301, followed. Where, therefore, the lower Appellate Court found that there was no cruelty, but that the suit was brought by the husband as a counter-move to defeat the claim of his wife for separate maintenance, and a considerable time after she had ceased to live in his house, and because on the last occasion when she returned to live with him she left the house crying:—Held, that these circumstances were not sufficient in law to justify the Court in refusing the husband's claim for restitution of conjugal rights. *PURSHOTAMDAS MANICKLAL v. 13. ——— Suit by Hindu husband out of caste at time of suit—Husband and wife—Hindu law—Decree for restitution conditional on plaintiff's obtaining restoration to caste. In a suit by a Hindu, a Sunar by caste, against his wife for restitution of conjugal rights, it was found that the plaintiff, in consequence of having left his wife and cohabited with a Mahomedan woman (whom, however, he had left at the time of suit), had been turned out of caste, but that the misconduct of which he had been guilty was not of such a character as to render him liable to perpetual excommunication, and upon making certain amends, he could obtain restoration to his caste. Held, that, while the plaintiff was entitled to come into Court for the relief prayed, unless, in the circumstances above stated the marriage had, under the Hindu law, been dissolved, the Court was bound, when asked to employing coercive process to compel a wife to return to her husband, not to disregard any reasonable objection she might raise to such process being granted, either on the ground that she had been subjected before to personal injury or cruelty at the hands of her husband, or that she went in fear of one or the other, or that the husband was actually living in adultery with another woman, or that, if she resumed cohabitation or association with him, he being outcasted, she would herself incur the risk of being put out of caste. Held, therefore, that in decreeing a claim of this description a Court was entitled, if it saw good reason to do so, while recognizing the civil rights of husband to his wife to put such conditions upon the enforcement of his rights by legal process as the circumstances of the case might fairly demand; and that, applying this principle to the present case, the defendant might reasonably ask the Court, before compelling her return to her husband, to make it a condition that he should first obtain his restoration to caste. Held, also, that, under the Hindu law, the fact that a husband had had adulterous intercourse with another woman, which had ceased at the time of suit, was not an answer to a claim by him for restitution of conjugal rights. PAIGI v. SHEONARAIN

14. ———— Ground for suit—Mahomedan law—Dower—Lien of wife for dower. In a suit brought by a husband for restitution of conjugal rights, the parties being Sunni Mahomedans governed by the Hanafi law, the defendant pleaded that the suit was not maintainable, as the plaintiff had not paid her dower-debt. The plaintiff thereupon deposited the whole of the dower-debt in Court. It appeared that the defendant's dower had been fixed without any specification as to whether it was to be wholly or partly prompt. It also appeared that she had attained majority before the marriage, and that she had cohabited with the plaintiff for three months after marriage, and there was no evidence that she had ever demanded payment of her dower before the suit was filed, or that she had refused cohabitation on the ground of non-payment. Besides the plea already mentioned, she also relied upon allegations of divorce and cruelty, but these allegations were found to be untrue. The lower Appellate Court dismissed the suit, holding that, inasmuch as the plaintiff had not paid the dower-debt at the time when he brought his suit, he had no cause of action under the provisions of the Mahomedan law. Held, by the Full Bench, that the lower Appellate Court's view of the Mahomedan law relating to conjugal rights and the husband's obligation to pay dower was erroneous; and that the plaintiff, under the circumstances of the case, had a right to maintain the suit. *ABDUL KADIR v. 15. ———— Mahomedan law—Dower—Prompt dower—Stipulation as to residence. In a suit by a Mahomedan husband for restitution of conjugal rights the defendant, his wife, pleaded first that he had entered into a stipulation at the time of the marriage to reside with her in the house of her father and that he had not done so; and, secondly, that he had not paid the exigible portion of the dower due to her, the marriage having been consummated:—Held, as to the first point, upon the facts (after referring to the authorities, but without deciding whether a stipulation of this kind can be valid in any case), that the stipulation relied upon was not a sufficient answer to the plaintiff's claim. Held, upon the authorities, that the non-payment of prompt dower is not a sufficient plea in bar of such a suit. *ABDUL KADIR v. 16. ———— Hindu law—Defence to suit—Cruelty of husband. A suit for restitution of conjugal rights may be maintained by a Hindu: but, quære, if the same state of circumstances which would justify such a suit or which would be an answer to such a suit in the case of a European would be equally so in the case of a Hindu. Where cruelty on the part of the husband has been condoned by the wife, a much smaller measure of offence would be sufficient to neutralize the condonation than would have justified the wife, in the first instance, in separating from her husband. But the act or acts constituting the offence must be of such a nature as to give the wife just reason to suppose that the husband is about to renew his former course of conduct, and consequently to entertain well-founded apprehension for her personal safety. *JOGENDRONUNDINI DOSSEE v. Every person who receives a married woman into his house, and suffers her to continue there after he has received notice from the husband not to harbour her, is

22. ————— Presumption of validity of marriage—Consent of lawful guardian—Non-performance of ceremonies. The ceremony of nandimukh or bridhishradh is not an essential of Hindu marriage, nor would the want of consent by the lawful guardian necessarily invalidate such marriage. II, Arts. 35 and 129—Cause of action—Demand and refusal—Restitution conditional on restoration to caste—Dispute as to validity of marriage—Proof of rites and ceremonies. In a suit for the restitution of conjugal rights between Hindus, the lower Courts having found that the defendant wife was of sufficient age to be fit to live with her husband as wife, it was held that the suit was maintainable, in spite of the fact that the wife was a minor, although in some cases it might be necessary to impose suitable terms on the husband. The Limitation Act is not intended to define or create causes of action, but only to prescribe the period within which existing rights may be enforced. When, in a suit for the restitution of conjugal rights, the validity of the marriage itself is disputed, it is not enough to find that the marriage took place, leaving it to be presumed that the rites and ceremonies necessary to constitute a legal marriage in the particular case were performed. The Court must find specifically what these rites and ceremonies are, and whether they were performed. Art. 35, Sch. II, of the Limitation Act does not apply to suits for restitution of conjugal rights between Hindus. SURJYAMONI DAS v. KALI KANTA DAS (1900)

34. ————— Suit by an excommunicated member of a caste—Husband and wife—Mussalman Kharwa Community of Broach—Custom. The plaintiff, an excommunicated member of the Mussalman Kharwa community of Broach sued his wife (defendant No. 1) for restitution of conjugal rights. At the time of their marriage, the parties were members of the caste; but subsequently the plaintiff was excommunicated from his caste. The defendant contended that she should not be compelled by the Court to go and live with him as his wife before the plaintiff was re-admitted into the caste. Held, upholding the contention, that at the time of marriage she was not only a Mahomedan by faith but also a member of the Kharwa community; occupying that status, she married the plaintiff. It was, therefore, of the essence of the marriage contract that they married because they were members of that particular community and they must be regarded as having entered into the marital relation on the basis of that status. *BAI JINA v. An appeal from a decree in a suit for restitution of conjugal rights, valued at less than 1,000 rupees and instituted in the Court of a Subordinate Judge without any objection by the defendant, lies to the District Court and not to the High Court. 39. ——— Mahomedan law—Suit for restitution of conjugal rights—Legal cruelty—Other misconduct of the plaintiff pleaded as a defence to the suit. In a suit for restitution of conjugal rights, the parties being Mahomedans, if the defendant raises a plea of legal cruelty, the facts to be proved to establish such a plea are similar to those which must be proved to establish a similar plea under the English law. Moonshee Buzloor Ruheem v. Shumsoonnissa Begum, 11 Moo. I A. 551, referred to. But in a suit for restitution brought by the husband, misconduct of the plaintiff falling short of legal cruelty may be a ground for the Court refusing relief. Thus where the plaintiff apparently only brought his suit on account of his wife having filed another suit against the plaintiff's father, and in his plaint accused his wife of immorality of the most serious kind, a charge which he totally failed to substantiate, it was held that the Court would be justified in refusing him relief. *Mackenzie v. 1. ——— Restitution of rights by motion where the appellate decree does not mention restitution—Execution pending appeal of decree set aside on appeal—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 553. Where a decree made by a Court of first instance is executed pending an appeal, and on appeal such decree is set aside, the appellant is entitled by motion to obtain restitution, even though the decree of the Court of appeal is silent as to such restitution. A, the owner of a 15 odd pie share of certain indigo land, brought a suit for partition against his co-sharer B, the owner of the rest of the land, and obtained a decree, from which B appealed. A, without waiting for the disposal of the appeal, executed his decree and obtained possession of his share, settling it with tenants. The decree was subsequently set aside on B's appeal, but no order as to restitution was made in it. Held, on motion by H, that he was entitled to be put into the same position as before the partition was made (i.e., joint possession with A) and to remove

2. ——— Restitution of an advantage obtained by virtue of a decree of High Court subsequently reversed on appeal to Privy Council—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 583—Right of suit—Parties, Non-joinder of. The holder of a decree of the High Court for costs assigned his rights under that decree. The assignee caused his name to be brought on to the record as transferee in place of the decree-holder, and he, and after him his legal representative, executed the decree against the judgment-debtor. The decree was appealed to the Privy Council, but the assignee was not a party to the record in that Court. The Privy Council reversed the decree. Thereupon the successful plaintiff applied under s. 583 of the Code of Civil Procedure to obtain restitution from the representative of the assignee of the amount realized in execution of the decree of the High Court. Held, that, whether or not the amount realized by the assignee was recoverable by suit, it was not recoverable by proceedings under s. 583 of the Code, inasmuch as the assignee was no party to the decree of the Privy Council. BHAGWATI PRASAD v. In accordance with that decree, property of the temple was taken from them by process of the Court and handed to the new trustees. On appeal to the High Court, however, the decree was reversed and restitution was now applied for by the survivor of the late trustees, from whom the property had been taken. In the meanwhile a third party had been appointed an additional trustee to the newly-appointed trustees. Held, that the principle of the doctrine of restitution is that on the reversal of a judgment the law raises an obligation on the party to the record who received the benefit of the erroneous judgment to make restitution to the other party for what he had lost; and it is the duty of the Courts to enforce that obligation, unless it be shown that restitution would be clearly contrary to the real justice of the case. That with reference to the position of innocent third parties, the rule that a plaintiff in an action to recover land cannot, by his writ of restitution or assistance, dispossess a stranger to the proceeding holding possession on an independent title or claim of title and not in collusion with the defendant, does not apply where the party seeking to be restored to possession has been wrongfully dispossessed by the agency of the Court. Held, therefore, that the trustee who had been dispossessed must be given an opportunity to prove whether any and which of the temple properties were in his custody as alleged, and whether he was deprived of such custody under the decree which was reversed, and whether the newly-appointed trustees acquired the custody of them thereunder, and that, if substantiated, the claim for restitution could not be successfully resisted. DORASAMI AYYAR v. — Agreement—Contract Act (IX of 1872, ss. 23 and 27—Continuous cause of action—Damages—Transfer of business to a limited Company—Effect. In March 1902, certain Ice Manufacturing Companies in Bombay entered into an agreement relating to the manufacture and sale by them of ice. The agreement fixed, inter alia, the minimum price at which ice was to be sold by the parties, the proportion of the manufacture which each was to bear, and the proportion of the profits which each was to receive. It further created a monthly obligation to pay into, and a corresponding right to receive from, a general common fund the difference, if any, between the profits actually received by the parties and those to which they were, under the agreement, entitled. On a suit being instituted for breach of the agreement, in which damages, sustained prior to and pending the hearing of the suit, were claimed:—Held, the fact that an agreement, if carried out, would limit competition and keep up prices, did not necessarily bring it within the terms of s. 27 of the Contract Act (IX of 1872): to succeed in the defence under that section it was necessary to establish that the agreement was one, whereby a person was restrained from exercising a lawful profession, trade, or business of any kind. 2. — Grant in lieu of maintenance—Limitation. Although a grant of a mokurari lease in lieu of maintenance may be resumable by the grantor and his heirs, yet, if the grantor or any of his successors receives distinct notice of a claim on the part of the grantee to hold in perpetuity and not subject to resumption, and allows twelve years to go by without contesting such claim, he (such grantor or successor) will be barred for the time of his own enjoyment. PETAMBAR BABOO v. NILMONEY SINGH DEO

3. — Grant in lieu of maintenance—Hindu Law—Alienation—Impartible estate. The mere fact of the impartibility of an estate, or rather the mere fact that the succession to a zamindari is governed by the law of primogeniture, does not deprive the zamindar of his ordinary right to alienate it, or any portion of it, during his lifetime. Accordingly, an ordinary mokurari lease, granted by a zamindar of lands forming portion of a zamindari the succession to which is governed by the law of primogeniture, is valid, and the lands comprised in it cannot be resumed on the death of the grantor by his successor. But a mokurari khorposh, or allowance for maintenance, or an estate for life in lieu of maintenance, granted by the owner of a zamindari impartible by special custom, but otherwise subject to Bengal law, to a member of his family, is resumable by his successor on the death of the grantor. not a land proprietor. GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL v. JAFUR HOSSEIN KHAN . 5 Moo. I. A. 467

9. ———— Right to resume subordinate tenure by istemrardar—Customary right.* A custom was alleged entitling a Patwi Thakur, or chief belonging to the Rathor clan of Rajputs, who was the istemrardar of an ancient and impartible taluk in Ajmere, to resume land formerly part of it, but granted some generations back as a subordinate estate to a collateral relation of the chief. The ground of the resumption claimed was that the last successor to the estate so granted had died without issue and without adopting. Held, that the Commissioner's judgment, which was that a right of resumption exercisable merely on the above-ground had not been established, was correct, being supported to some extent certainly by answers received by the Chief Commissioner on enquiry from the neighbouring Durbars of Rajputana chiefs, and on the whole by the balance of the evidence. *RAO BAHADUR SINGH v. In either of the first two classes of grants it may be made a condition that the interest in the land should cease when the services are no longer required,

2. PROCEDURE.

1. ———— Assessment of resumed lands—Beng. Reg. XIX of 1793—Beng. Reg. II of 1819, s. 30—Suit for rent. Unless the holder of a resumption-decree took steps under Regulation XIX of 1793 to have the revenue fixed by the Collector, and the defendant consented to pay the revenue required of him, he had no locus standi on holding the lands to bring suits for rent. The rule to be followed in determining in what manner and under what regulation the assessment of resumed lakhiraj land should be conducted was, first, to ascertain whether the existence of the lakhiraj prior to 1791 had been decided by the decree for resumption. It could not be presumed that every case instituted under s. 30, Regulation II of 1819, dealt with an estate which was held lakhiraj prior to 1791. POGOSE v. EKRAM HOSSEIN

But when proceedings take place in the nature of extensive settlements with other parties after intermediate and temporary settlements, and acts are done wholly without jurisdiction, or lands are taken not included in the original decree, there should be a remedy to parties deeming themselves to have been wronged thereby. 8. ———— Effect on charitable trust—Omission of mention of existence of charitable trust or endowment. The resumption of lands by Government, and the making a fresh settlement of the resumed lands without any allusion to their being held in trust for charitable purposes prior to the resumption proceedings, are not conclusive proof that there was no such trust. The only question decided by the Government in resuming was that those who claimed the land as lakhiraj had not been able to prove that the land was held under any such religious or charitable trust as would debar Government from resuming. *LEELANUND SINGH BAHADOOR v. 13. ———— Effect of resumption and settlement of lakhiraj on the holder of a mokurari lease from the lakhirajdar—Lakhiraj tenure—Settlement of invalid lakhiraj. Assessment of revenue by Government on invalid lakhiraj land after resumption does not confer a new estate on the lakhirajdar, and does not cancel or extinguish a mokurari lease granted by the lakhirajdar previous to the settlement, and during the time he was in possession of the land as lakhiraj. *PRATAB NARAYAN MOOKERJEE v. 15 s

A and K M were brothers and the last male descendants of M. For an alleged fraud of K M Government restricted the enjoyment of the said village to his lifetime only. A predeceased K M. On the death of K M, Government, on the 31st December 1872, placed an attachment over the village. On the 13th July 1874, a judgment-creditor of A caused the lands in dispute, which were mirasi lands of the Waikar family situated at Pasarni, to be sold in execution of his decree against A, and they were purchased by the defendants, who was put in possession on the 22nd April 1876. In the meanwhile, Government, having chosen to recognize the plaintiff as a representative of the Waikar family, had removed the attachment, and re-granted the village to the plaintiff shortly before, viz., on the 3rd April 1876. The plaintiff, being dispossessed, sued the defendant, contending (inter alia) that A, having predeceased his brother, had no interest in the lands, which had been purchased by the defendant. The Court of first instance awarded the plaintiff's claim, and directed the defendant to pay the plaintiff's costs. The defendant appealed to the District Judge, who was of opinion that the proceedings of Government since the attachment in 1872 and restoration of the village were acts of State, and he varied the decree of the lower Court by cutting down the plaintiff's costs, made payable by the lower Court's decree, to half. On appeal by the defendant to the High Court:—Held, reversing the decree of the lower Appellate Court, that the plaintiff's claim should be dismissed. The attachment placed by Government on the death of K M in December 1872 was limited to an exemption from assessment, and the resumption and re-grant to the plaintiff did not give the plaintiff any title to the lands in question. The proceedings of Government in 1873 and 1876, by which the plaintiff was recognized as the representative of the Waikar family, were not acts of State. The status of the Waikars and other persons, with whom the agreements of 1820 were entered into, was not that of an independent sovereign. They (the Waikars) were merely powerful saranjamdars subordinate to the Raja of Satara, and after the annexation of the territory of the Raja in 1849 they held their lands under the East India Company. *Secretary of State for India v. of twelve years by a lease dated 12th June 1857. A died in the same year without male issue, and his saranjam was resumed by the British Government. In 1858 the Collector treated the defendant as occupant of the land in question for the purposes of assessment, and again in 1860 entered his name as occupant in the Government books. In January 1868 the widow of A adopted the plaintiff as his son. In 1881 the plaintiff sued the defendant to recover possession of the land let to the defendant in 1857. The defendant contended that the land was not the private land of A, but belonged to the State of Kagvad, which was resumed on his death by the Government; and that the plaintiff's claim was barred by the law of limitation. The Subordinate Judge allowed the plaintiff's claim, holding that the land was the private property of A, and that the claim was not barred. The District Judge, on appeal, held that the land was not the private property of the Chief, but was the property of the State, and that, on the resumption of the State by the British Government, the defendant's lease came to an end, and the relation of landlord and tenant, previously existing between the Chief and the defendant, ceased. He also held that the plaintiff's claim was barred by limitation, and reversed the decree of the Subordinate Judge. On appeal to the High Court:—Held, that no distinction could be drawn between the public and private property of an absolute Chief, which A was. That, in the absence of a contrary intention, the resumption by the British Government of a saranjam or inam leaves the occupancy rights of the saranjamdar or inamdar untouched; that a saranjamdar or inamdar may acquire occupancy rights during the continuance of the saranjam or inam. Held, also, that the fact that the revenue officers placed the defendant's name in the Government books as the occupant paying assessment, did not make the defendant's possession adverse, and could not prejudice the plaintiff's rights as landlord. *GANPATRAV TRIMBAK PATWARDHAN v. 18. ——— Effect on patta—Bengal Act VIII of 1879, s. 10—Resumption of lands included in a patta—Re-settlement with grantor of patta—Liability for rent—Parties. Held, that, when lands are re-settled with the original holder or his heirs, s. 10 of Ben. Act VIII of 1879 does not, on its true construction, interfere with the contractual rights of a subordinate holder. The respondent having a permanent ganti tenure, subject to a fixed rent for the whole of it, under a patta executed in 1867, the Government resumed lands comprised in the tenure, and settled in 1884 with the heirs of the respondent's grantor in respect thereof. In an action by the appellant, as purchaser of the resumed and re-settled lands, to recover the rent thereof as fixed in 1884:—Held, that the respondent's liability was under the patta and not under the settlement, and that all in right of the lands granted by the patta were necessary parties to an action for

19. ——— Enfranchisement—Enfranchisement of inam service land in name of office holder—Hindu law—Effect of enfranchisement—Liability to partition. Three items of land, numbered 5, 6, and 7, were originally village service inams, having been annexed by the State as emoluments to the office of karnam in a raiyatwari village, R, the father of plaintiff and first defendant and grandfather of second defendant, in March 1889, established his right, as the heir to the late incumbent to this office of karnam; and the lands were, in November 1889, ordered to be delivered to R, and were actually delivered to him in December 1889. Before the actual delivery, R applied that the lands might be registered and a title-deed be issued in his name, as the Government were taking steps to enfranchise service inams in the district, and the Inam Commissioner, in November 1889, notified to R that his name was included in the register. In January 1890, second defendant's father, the eldest son of R, died; and in February 1890, R resigned the office of karnam in favour of his grandson, second defendant, who was duly appointed by the Collector. Item No. 5 was enfranchised, and a title-deed issued to and in the name of R. The Inam Commissioner, in 1891, passed an order that items 6 and 7 had been "resumed and fully assessed." R had died at a date prior to this, and second defendant was holding the office. On a suit being instituted by plaintiff for partition:—Held, per BHASHYAM AYYANGAR, J.—That, when a personal inam is enfranchised by the imposition of a quit-rent, the resumption by Government simply consists of so much of the assessment or melvaram as is equal to the quit-rent, neither the land nor the assessment in excess of the quit-rent being resumed. Similarly, the enfranchisement of a service inam does not operate as a resumption and fresh grant by Government subject to the payment of a quit-rent, any more than it is so in the case of the enfranchisement of a personal inam. It stands on the same footing, so far as the family in which the village office is hereditary is concerned. The enfranchisement only converts the inam into ordinary property. Narayana v. Chengalammal, I. L. R. 10 Mad. 1, followed. Venkata v. Rama, I. L. R. 8 Mad. 249, explained. Dharnipragada v. Kadambari, I. L. R. 21 Mad. 47, and Venkatarayadu v. Venkata Ramayya, I. L. Venkata Ramayya*, I. L. R. 15 Mad. 284, the plaintiff was entitled, as his son, to his share. As to items 6 and 7, there was no enfranchisement and no fresh grant or title-deed in favour of second defendant. They were liable to partition, and it was unnecessary, therefore, ss. 2, 3—Panchannagram, tenure in—Sale for arrears—"Latest day of payment"—"Arrears"—Survey and Settlement Manual, Part III, Ch. XVI, Rule 7. S. 2 of Act XI of 1859 is applicable to revenue-paying estates, the revenue of which is payable in monthly instalments. It does not apply to tenures such as those in Panchannagram paying a yearly jama. In the kabuliyat of the tenant executed on the 18th February 1874, the jama was stipulated to be paid on the 28th June every year:—Held, that under Rule 7 of Part III, Chap. XVI of the Survey and Settlement Manual, the jama became payable on the first day of the financial year, i.e., 1st April. On failure to pay it by the 28th June, the latest day fixed by the Board of Revenue under s. 3 of Act XI of 1859, the tenure became liable to sale under the Act. The undertaking in the kabuliyat did not have the effect of extending the time for payment of the revenue from 1st April to 28th June. It was no more than a promise by the tenant to pay arrears accrued due on the first day of the financial year by the latest day of payment as fixed by the Board of Revenue *DURLABH CHANDRA KAR v. ss. 5, 6, 13, 33—Suit to set aside sale—Sale brought about by fraud of a co-sharer—Purchase by co-sharer—Remedy—Right to sue for damages or reconveyance—Notice of sale—Names of proprietors, entry of, if necessary—Entry of name of a deceased person, not a proprietor—Irregularity—Non-entry of shares excluded when share sold—Notice under s. 5 not a condition precedent to sale—Ground not taken before Commissioner. Plaintiff sued to set aside a revenue-sale, as having been brought about by the fraud of a co-sharer, the defendant, upon the allegation that two days before the sale the latter told the plaintiff and induced him to believe that he would pay up the arrears, that he never intended to do so as is shown by the fact that he did not pay up the arrears though the Collector had agreed to receive them, and that he bought the estate himself at a very inadequate price. It appears that the plaintiff was present at the sale, and by paying up the arrears himself might have prevented the sale from taking place. Held, that the fraud, if any, might give the plaintiff a good claim against the defendant for damages for breach of contract or for a reconveyance of the plaintiff's share in the estate purchased by him, but it was not such a fraud as brought about the sale and the sale could not be set aside. Amirunnesa Khatoon v. Secretary of State, I. L. R. 10 Calc. 63, referred to. It being found that with the defendant there were other innocent and bona fide purchasers, who were no parties to the fraud: Held, that no equitable relief, such as was granted in the case of Bhooban Chandra Sen v. Ram Soondar Surma, I. L. R. 3 Calc. 300, could be given in this case. It is not necessary, under the law, in a notice under s. 6 of the Revenue Sale Law, to enter the names of any proprietors at all. The entry in such notice of the names of a deceased person, who was not a proprietor, was not an illegality, which rendered the sale a nullity. Ram Narain Koer v. Mahabir Prasad Singh, I. L. R. 13 Calc. 208, referred to. In a notice issued under s. 13 of the Revenue Sale Law, the details of the shares about to be sold were fully given, but certain separate account shares, which were excluded, were not mentioned. It was, however, explained in a note at the foot of the notice that "when in certain columns of the notice there is an entry that only a share is to be sold, then it ought to be understood that there is a separate account in respect of such a share and that other share or shares will be exempted from sale," and in this notice there was such an entry in the columns mentioned. Held, that the provisions of s. 13 had been complied with. The issue of a notice under s. 5 of the Revenue Sale Law is not a condition precedent to the sale taking place, the non-compliance with which makes the sale no sale. The non-issue of such a notice is only an irregularity. Mahabeer Pershad v. Collector of Tirhoot, 15 W. R. 137, explained. Raja Gobinda Lal Roy v. Ram Janam Misser, L. R. 20 I. A. 165, referred to. The non-issue of a notice under s. 5 is an irregularity of the nature contemplated in s. 33 of the Revenue Sale Law, and, if not specified in an appeal to the Commissioner, cannot be urged in a subsequent suit. *DENONANDAN SINGH v. The word "year" in the Revenue Sale Law means the official year; and "current year" is the official year within which the different kists of revenue have to be paid. The case of an estate managed by a common manager appointed under the Bengal Tenancy Act is excluded from the operation of s. 5 of Act XI of 1859, nor does management by such common manager fall within s. 17 of the Act. Non-publication of notice under s. 7 of Act XI of 1859 does not affect the sale. Under s. 8 of Bengal Act VII of 1868 after the grant of certificate the Court is precluded from going into the question whether notice were duly served or posted provided that they were issued. It is not necessary under s. 14 of Act XI of 1859 to give notice to the co-sharers of the declaration which has to be made under the section calling on them to buy up the shares in arrears within the period of ten days. *Gossain Chutturbhooj Das v. ss. 5, 31, 33—Bengal Act VII of 1868, s. 1—"Malikana"—"Land revenue"—Sale for arrears accruing subsequently to notification of sale—Point not taken in Court below or before Commissioner. Malikana comes under the definition of "Land Revenue" given in s. 2 of Act XI of 1859 and s. 1 of Bengal Act VII of 1868. The revenue authorities are entitled to calculate them together; and where part of the arrears for which a sale takes place under Act XI of 1859 is malikana, no separate notice under s. 5 of the Act in respect of such portion is necessary. A sale for arrears of revenue is not necessarily bad, because it was held not only for arrears specified in the notice under s. 5 of Act XI of 1859, but also for arrears that accrued subsequently. Where it appeared that the Collector had acted under s. 31 of the Act, and that the objection to the sale had not been taken either in the Court below or before the Commissioner, and therefore could not under s. 33 be taken on appeal, the objection was not sustained. Under the circumstances the High Court held that there had been no irregularity in the sale, and the judgment of the High Court was upheld by the Judicial Committee. *BAGESWARI PRASAD SINGH v. The Collector began with a bid of one rupee; the agent of the defaulter followed with a bid of ten rupees, but the Collector enquired whether any one was willing to increase the bid, and as one came forward, the Collector forthwith closed the bid and declared that he had purchased the property on account of Government on the bid of ten rupees, under s. 58 of the Revenue Sale Law (Act XI of 1859), inasmuch as that bid was insufficient to cover the arrears realizable. Upon a suit to set aside the sale: Held, that the sale was bad, inasmuch as the procedure followed by the Collector and the purchase made by him were not in accordance with the provisions of s. 58 of the Revenue Sale Law (Act XI of 1859). *HALIMANNISSA CHOWDHURANI v. On the 19th August 1898, they remitted to the Collector by postal money order a sum R30-1-0 on account of the revenue of the mehal without specifying for which instalment it was intended; but on the 3rd September following, they presented an application to the Collector praying that the amount remitted might be received on account of the June instalment and the mehal be released from liability to sale. The total amount of Government dues upon the estate at the time including revenue, cesses and other fees, being R46-8-6; the Collector on the 16th September, 1898, made the order "... tember, 1898, the respondents had sent to the Collector by postal money order R30-1 anna for revenue of the mehal, without any specification as to instalment for which it was intended and this sum had been credited in the Collectorate books against the September instalment of R30-1-4. The fact of this payment had not been brought to the notice of the Collector when he made his order of the 16th September 1898. On the 22nd September 1898, the estate was put up to auction and was purchased by the appellants for an inadequate price. Held, that, as there was no order of exemption from sale within s. 18 of the Revenue Sale Law, the estate was liable to sale under its provisions. The conditional order made on the 16th September was not an order under s. 18 of the Act. Per MOOKERJEE, J.—It is not open to the plaintiff in a suit to set aside a revenue sale, to urge, under cover of a general ground taken in his appeal before the Commissioner, specific irregularities other than those urged before the Commissioner. *Bal Mukond Lal v. It is not open to a Civil Court to examine the reasons of an order of the Collector purporting to be made under s. 18 of the Revenue Sale Law and to hold that the Collector ought to have made an order different from that made. The operation of s. 8 of Bengal Act VII of 1868, in curing defects in the issue and service of notices under s. 7 of the Revenue Sale Law considered. The onus is on the person, who seeks to have a sale set aside, to establish that the requirements of the Statutes had not been complied with by the Collector. The fact that notice under s. 7 of the Act was not served in accordance with the provisions of that section does not necessarily lead to an inference of substantial injury to the proprietor. *MOHAMMED AGA v. A purchaser of an entire estate sold for arrears of revenue, sued the cultivating raiyats in ejectment. The defendants contended that their interests were protected by the proviso to s. 37 of Act XI of 1859. It was found that the holdings of the defendants consisted of land held by them partly for more than twelve years, and partly for less than twelve years, at the date of the sale, and that the two classes of lands were undistinguishable. Upon an objection that the defendants "under the law in force," i.e., Act XI of 1859, could not acquire rights of occupancy to all the lands held by them and as such they were not protected by the proviso to s. 37 of Act XI of 1859. Held, that

The defendants proved that the tenures were mentioned in the Survey Chitta of 1839, that they were not avoided on purchase by Government and were again recognised by Government in 1864, that rents had been paid at a uniform rate for at least 60 years, and that there had been sales of the tenures. Held, that the Court may and ought to presume backwards and hold that the defendants have discharged the onus thrown on them by s. 37 of the Revenue Sale Law. *Upendra Krishna v. of 1861, s. 38. S. 38, Act XXIII of 1861, which enacted that "the procedure prescribed by Act VIII of 1859 shall be followed as far as it can be in all miscellaneous cases and proceedings which, after the passing of the Act, shall be instituted in any Court, rendered the whole procedure of Act VIII of 1859, including the power of admitting a review, applicable to a proceeding to compel registration under the Registration Act. An order rejecting an application for registration under s. 76 of the Registration Act of 1871, being, in respect of the Court pronouncing it, a final order of adjudication between the parties, is so far in the nature of a "decree" within the meaning of Act VIII of 1859 as to fall within the operation of the sections of that Act which provide for the admission of a review. *In the matter of the petition of ABDOOLLAH. Cl. (c) of s. 623 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882) allows of a review of judgment on a reference only from a Court of Small Causes. The judgment of the High Court in such a case is not a decree or order within the meaning of cl. 22. ———— Order dismissing suit for default of prosecution—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, ss. 119, 376—Re-admission of suit. The plaintiff's suit was dismissed "in default of prosecution," on the ground that he had failed to deposit talabana, although time had been allowed him for that purpose. He was represented by a pleader at the adjourned hearing. He subsequently applied for the re-admission of the suit on the ground that he had been prevented by illness from depositing the money. Held, that the application should not have been treated as one under s. 119, Civil Procedure Code but might fairly be regarded as an application for review of judgment under s. 376, and in that view the misconstruction by the Munsif of the nature of the application was not a sufficient reason for depriving the plaintiff of the relief which he not inequitably obtained by the order passed in it; and the Court of first instance was directed to call on the plaintiff to pay the fee payable on his application for a review of judgment, and in the event of his complying with the requisition, to give effect to the Munsif's order for re-admission of the suit. *RAM SUNDAR SINGH v. 23. ———— Order for dismissal for default of appearance on order for local investigation. A case was remanded on appeal (in the presence of both parties) for a local investigation. A reasonable time was given, after the records had come, to the parties to appear and conduct their case. The petitioner not having appeared, the lower Court treated it as a case of default, whereupon the petitioner made an application under s. 376, Act VIII of 1859. Held, that an application for a review was not the proper course in such a case. In re KALEE MOHTJ DOSS . . . 17 W. 4. ——— Order of Revenue Commissioner setting aside sale—Public Demands Recovery Act (Beng. Act VII of 1880)—Beng. Act VII of 1868—Review of order setting aside sale. A revenue-paying talukh was sold for arrears of dak cess under the Public Demands Recovery Act. The sale was set aside on appeal by the Revenue Commissioner, but on an application for review made to his successor, the sale was confirmed, and the purchaser took possession. In a suit to recover possession of an 8 annas share of the talukh on the grounds, among others, that the order on review was passed without jurisdiction and without notice to the plaintiffs, and as such conferred no title on the purchaser, the District Judge, on appeal, held that the order on review, not having been set aside, remained in force, but he remanded the case under s. 566 for trial of the question of notice. On the case coming back to the Appellate Court before another Judge, he held the order on review to be ultra vires and the trial of the question of notice to be unnecessary. The defendants preferred a second appeal against the last judgment. Held, that the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure relating to reviews of judgment were not extended to proceedings under Bengal Act VII of 1868 and VII of 1880, and that, in the present case, the order passed on review, confirming the sale, was ultra vires and of no effect. *LALA PRAYAG LAL v. 7. ——— Power of lower Appellate Court after dismissal of special appeal—24 & 25 Vict., c. 104, s. 15. Upon the dismissal of a special appeal by the High Court, the appellant in special appeal applied to the High Court for a review of judgment upon the ground of discovery of fresh evidence. This application was rejected, on the ground that the Court could not take cognizance of the merits of a case in special appeal, and therefore could not admit a review upon fresh evidence. The special appellant then applied to the lower Appellate Court for a review of its judgment on the ground of discovery of fresh evidence. This application was admitted, and a review of the judgment was allowed. 1814. Whereas by the law in force previous to the Code of Civil Procedure the subordinate Courts could not review their judgment without the permission of a superior Court, the Code removed that inability, and the removal extended to suits, past and pending, as well as future. A party petitioning, after the Code of Civil Procedure came into force, for the review of a judgment in appeal passed in 1849, is entitled to be governed by the terms of the old law (Regulation XXVI of 1814), which allows a review in respect to a decree from which "no further appeal" may have been admitted by a superior Court: and a "further appeal" included both a second or special appeal and a summary appeal. *JOOGUL KISHORE SINGH v. 16. ——— Decree properly made against minor—Right of minor to impeach decree on attaining majority—Form of decree against minor—Practice—Procedure. A testator in his will directed his daughter-in-law L (defendant No. 1) to adopt his nephew K (defendant No. 2), and he devised the residue of his estate to him. The executors of the will subsequently brought this suit to have the will construed and the rights of K in the testator's estate ascertained and declared. A decree was made on the 1st October 1887, by which it was declared that K's adoption was a condition precedent to his inheritance, and that unless he was adopted, he was not entitled to any part of the testator's property. On the 22nd October 1894 K filed a petition of review, stating that at the date of the decree he was a minor and had only recently, viz., on the 14th December 1894, attained the age of eighteen years. He contended that there was error apparent on the face of the decree, inasmuch as it did not provide that he should have an opportunity of showing cause against it in so far as it affected his interest after he attained his majority. Held, that the review could not be granted. The Courts in India, after deciding an issue in which an infant, party to suit, is interested, have no power to reserve to the infant the right of questioning such decision. At all events, a decree is not erroneous for not containing such a provision when the issue in which the infant is interested has been fully gone into and argued before the Court. A decree passed against an infant properly represented is binding upon him like a decree passed against an adult, but it is open to the infant to impeach such decree by a suit in cases where his guardian has been guilty of fraud or negligence in allowing the decree to be passed against him. *CHRSANDAS NATHA v. The provision in s. 626 of the Code of Civil Procedure that a Judge granting an application for a review "shall record with his own hand his reasons for such opinion," is directory, and an order is not necessarily invalidated by the fact that the reasons are not recorded, though there may be cases in which it is necessary in the interests of justice that the reasons should be recorded, and in such cases the record would be essential to the validity of the order. *Gyanund Asram v. One of the defendants, who, it appeared, had not been served with notice of the previous application for review, subsequently applied to the Special Judge to review his decree, and that application was granted on the ground that the applicant had not had notice of the former review. On this subsequent review, the Special Judge discovered that he made a mistake with reference to the date of certain documents, and that this mistake had led him to a wrong conclusion upon the merits of the case. He consequently reversed his former order and dismissed the suit, confirming the original decree of the Subordinate Judge. The plaintiff then applied to the High Court under its extraordinary jurisdiction (s. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code, Act XIV of 1882). Held, that in granting a re-hearing the Special Judge had exercised a reasonable discretion with which the High Court could not interfere in its extraordinary jurisdiction. under a decree to abide the result of an appeal to the Privy Council from a former decree on which it is based—Application to recover the money on the reversal of the former decree. By a deed of sale, dated 9th May 1858, certain lands belonging to a minor talukhdar were sold by his mother and natural guardian to the plaintiff's father. The lands were described as nakri (i.e., held free of assessment), and the sale-deed provided that in case the vendee were at any future time compelled to pay assessment to Government in respect of the nakri lands the vendor would recoup the vendee for any payment so made. In 1872 Government for the first time levied assessment on the nakri lands. In 1876 the plaintiff filed a suit against the talukhdar to recover the amount of assessment paid by them in respect of the nakri lands for the years 1872—76. The High Court passed a decree in plaintiffs' favour in March 1883. Against this decree the talukhdar appealed to the Privy Council. In April 1883 the plaintiffs filed a second suit on the same cause of action to recover from the talukhdar the amount of assessment levied on the nakri lands for the years 1877—82. In this suit a decree was passed against the talukhdar solely on the strength of the High Court's decree in the former suit. In execution of this decree, the plaintiffs attached the talukhdar's property. Thereupon the talukhdar deposited in Court the amount due under the decree, and applied to the Court for removal of the attachment, and for stay of further proceedings in execution pending the disposal of his appeal to the Privy Council in the former suit. This application was granted. In March 1887 the Privy Council decided the appeal in favour of the talukhdar, and reversed the High Court's decree. Thereupon the talukhdar applied for a refund of the money he had deposited in Court. The Court suggested that his proper remedy was by an application for review of the decree in the second suit. The talukhdar accordingly presented a petition of review. This petition was rejected by the District Judge, on the ground that he had no jurisdiction to grant a review of his predecessor's decision, except on the grounds set forth in s. 624 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held, that the District Judge had jurisdiction to entertain the application for review. The decision of the Privy Council, reversing the decree of the High Court in the first suit, having been passed subsequently to the decree in the second suit, which depended on the reversed decree of the High Court, was "new and important matter" within the meaning of ss. 623 and 624 of the Code of Civil Procedure. *WAGHELA RAISANGJI SHIVSANGJI v. On the 6th March the matter came up before them, when a rule was issued calling upon the other side to show cause why a review of judgment should not be granted, being made returnable on the 28th March 1889. On the 28th March one of the two Judges had left India on furlough, and the rule was taken up, heard, and made absolute by the other sitting alone. Held, that he had jurisdiction to hear the rule. *AUBHOY CHURN MOHUNT v. P. Rent Act, 1881. Where s. 185 of Act XII of 1881 applies, it is only in cases where there is no right of appeal that a review can be granted, and that only on the special ground provided for in the Act itself. *WAZIR SINGH v. 5. GROUNDS FOR REVIEW.

1. — Good and sufficient reason—Change of incumbent of office of Judge. A Court has the power, for any reason that it may consider good and sufficient, to grant a review of its judgment; and if the application is made within ninety days, the Court's estimate of those reasons cannot be interfered with by an Appellate Court. The procedure is not different when there has been a change (during the ninety days) of office incumbents. MONTOORA v. ABLAK ROY . 11 W. R. 197

2. — Unfairness of decision—Power to admit review. When once a Civil Court has passed a final decision between the parties, it loses jurisdiction over the suit, except for the purposes of executing the decree; and it cannot hold a new trial of the same unless, for some reason within the Procedure Act, the first trial appears to have been unfair between the two parties. *LULEET MOHUN ROY CHOWDHRY v. An application for review of judgment was made on two grounds, viz., (i) that the Bench was wrong in thinking that such issue had not been determined by the Court of first appeal; and (ii) that the Bench sitting as a Court of second appeal, was not empowered to determine an issue of fact which the Court of first appeal had omitted to determine, but should have referred such issue to that Court for determination under s. 566 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held, that, looking to the provisions of that Code relating to review of judgment, such application ought not to be allowed on the grounds mentioned, which virtually disclosed reasons for appeal from the judgment. SHEO RATAN v. LAPPU KUAR . . . I. L. R. 5 All. 14

REVIEW—*contd.*5. GROUNDS FOR REVIEW—contd.

9. ——— Omission to consider effect of documentary evidence—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, ss. 376-378. Where a Judge has, in deciding a case, omitted to consider the effect of important documentary evidence filed with the plaint which was not taken issue upon, and which materially affects the merits of the case, he is competent, under ss. 376 to 378 of Act VIII of 1859, to grant a review and re-hear the case. MAHADEVA RAYAR v. SAPPANI . . . I. L. R. 1 Mad. 396

10. ——— Erroneous decision on immaterial point. Held, that, when an issue which decides the case on the merits has been found in favour of either party, a review of judgment will not be granted merely because there has been an erroneous decision on a point affecting an issue which, in consequence of the finding, has become immaterial. RAKUB DOSS v. SOORAJ MULL

Bourke O. C. 131

11. ——— Summarily discrediting documentary evidence without inspection—Report of Commissioner to make local inquiry. An application for a review of judgment was made to a Court of appeal on the ground that certain very material documents on which the Court of first instance had relied had been summarily discredited without being inspected by the Court of appeal, and that the Court of appeal had erred in declaring the report of a Commissioner appointed by the Court of first instance for the purpose of making a local inquiry to be unworthy of reliance, because he was a mohurrir of the Court of first instance. Held, that, in granting the review applied for, the lower Appellate Court had not exceeded the discretion vested in it by law. ABDUL RAHIM v. RACHA RAI

I. L. R. 1 All. 363

12. ——— It may be competent to a Judge to entertain an application for a review, although such application contains no distinct allegation of an error in law in the orders sought to be reviewed nor any suggestion of the discovery of new evidence. *In the matter of the petition of ABDOOLLAH. 13. ——— Omission to examine witness—Objection not taken on appeal. That the lower Court should have improperly neglected to examine a witness is not a ground for a review of judgment, if the objection was not taken when the case was heard by the Court in regular appeal. MUNSHAD BIBEE v. LUCHMEEPUT SINGH

9 W. R. 129

14. ——— Error in not remanding case. The fact that the High Court ought to have remanded the case on the ground that the Judge had wrongly decided a point of law is no ground for review. PROSUNNONATH DUTT v. JUDONATH PAUL . . . 9 W. R. 589

15. ——— Further consideration of evidence—Probability of different conclusion. It is not a proper ground for granting a review of judgment that a Judge, by going through the evidence a second time, might arrive at a different conclusion. CHUNDER CHURN AUGGRODANY v. LOODUNRAM DEB . . . 25 W. R. 324

16. ——— Opportunity to re-argue case—Chance of altering decision. A review cannot be given merely for the purpose of allowing the parties to re-argue the case upon the evidence, upon the chance of eventually throwing doubt upon the decision already passed. KOLEEMOODEEN MUNDUL v. HEERUN MUNDUL . . . 24 W. R. 186

17. ——— Error in decision—Additional evidence. Where a Subordinate Judge admitted a review on the representation of plaintiff that he (the Judge) had made a mistake as to the subject of a certain dagh in a Government halabadee chitta, the applicant filing with his petition for review another chitta and other evidence for the purpose of convincing the Court that it had made an error:—Held, that an error of this kind was sufficient to found the jurisdiction of the Court to entertain the review. GUNESH RAM SURMAH v. ROHINEE DASSEE . . . 14 W. R. 236

18. ——— Erroneous refusal to admit additional evidence. Where a Judge on appeal declined to admit additional evidence, on the ground that the application should have been made to the lower Court.—Held, that it was a ground for applying for a review of his order pointing out his mistake. RAM LALL v. RUNG LALL . 17 W. R. 47

19. ——— Decision of special appeal on ground not taken in lower Courts—Review of special appeal. It is not a sufficient ground for a review of judgment passed on special appeal that the point which was then raised, and on which the Court's decision was based, was one not raised in either of the Lower Courts, and especially, as in this case, where the question was pointedly raised in the special appeal and the respondent had ample time to prepare himself to meet the statement therein. COWELL v. MOHADEV MUNDUL

20. ——— Necessity of review for ends of justice—Omission to raise issue. A case having been remanded for the trial of an issue under the specific provisions of cl. 1, s. 4, Bengal Regulation XI of 1825, an application for review was made on the ground that it was requisite for the ends of justice to remand the case upon an issue under cl. 2, which, it was alleged, was the issue to which the applicant had directed all his evidence. Held, that as the correctness of this allegation could not be ascertained without going through the record again, the application could not be granted for to grant it would, in fact, be to grant a second special appeal, which is not the object of a review. JUGGOBUNDHOO BOSE v. WISE . . . 12 W. R. 409

21. ——— Later Privy Council decision—Facts not fully placed before Court. A review cannot be granted on the ground that if the facts

had been better or more fully placed before the Court, the judgment would have been different, or even on the ground of a subsequent decision of a question of law by the Privy Council in another suit where there has been no discovery of new evidence such as is contemplated in s. 376 of Act VIII of 1859. JADUB RAM DEB v. RAM LOCHUN MUD-DUCK . . . . . 19 W. R. 189

22. — Subsequent Full Bench ruling. A lower Court admitted a review of judgment on the ground that the decision of a Divisional Bench of the High Court which it had followed in that judgment had subsequently been overruled by the Full Bench. Held, that the lower Court was not authorized to admit a review of judgment on such ground. AMRIT LAL v. MADHO DAS I. L. R. 6 All 292

23. — New contrary ruling—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 623. Although the discovery of a new ruling may not entitle a party to a review of judgment, yet when a Court is satisfied that its judgment has proceeded upon an erroneous view of the law, the provisions of s. 623 of the Code of Civil Procedure allow a review of judgment. VELLAYA v. JAGANATHA I. L. R. 7 Mad. 307

24. — Different decisions of Division Benches. That one Division Bench of the High Court has decided a point at variance with the decision of another Division Bench is no reason for granting a review of judgment. NOBEEN KISHEN MOOKERJEE v. SHIB PERSHAD PATTUCK 9 W. R. 161

FERGUSSON v. GOVERNMENT. GOVERNMENT v. FERGUSSON . . . . . 9 W. R. 158

25. — Production of authority on law not before produced—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 376—Error in law. The production of an authority which was not brought to the notice of the Judge at the first hearing, and which lays down a view of the law contrary to that taken by the Judge, is not a sufficient ground for granting a review. ELLEM v. BASHEER I. L. R. 1 Calc. 184 : 24 W. R. 382

26. — Errors of law—Law, "Mistaken view of—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 623. A review of judgment may be granted (if it is necessary for the ends of justice that the judgment should be reviewed) where there is an error of law on the face of the judgment, or where the decision of the Court has proceeded upon a mistaken view of the law. Rewa Mahton v. Ram Kishen Sing, I. L. R. 14 Calc. 18 : L. R. 13 I. A. 106, referred to. In this case, without deciding whether there was or not any error in law, the application for review of judgment was refused on the ground that it did not appear there was any danger of its causing a miscarriage of justice. *In the matter of the petition of SHARUP CHAND MALA. 27. — Subsequent publication of report of case—Case not brought forward at hearing. Where a review of judgment was applied for on the ground of the subsequent publication of the report of a High Court decision on a point of law which governed the case, but which had not been urged at the previous hearing, it was considered that the applicant was not to blame for his omission to bring the decision to the notice of the Court at the first hearing, and the application for review of judgment was granted. ACHUTA v. MAMMAVU I. L. R. 10 Mad. 357

28. — "Any other sufficient reason"—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 623—Power to grant review. S. 623 gives a more extensive right of review than existed in England, where a review could only be obtained by showing that there was apparent on the record error in law, or that new and relevant matter had been discovered after the judgment which could not possibly have been used when the judgment was given, or that judgment was obtained by fraud. The words "or for any other sufficient reason" mean that the reason must be one sufficient to the Court or Judge to whom the application for review is made, and they cannot be held to be limited to the discovery of new and important matter or evidence or the occurring of a mistake or error apparent on the record. Whether or not there is in such cases "any other sufficient reason" may depend on a question of law or a question of fact, or a mixed question of law and fact. Reasat Hosein v. Hadjee Abdullah, I. L. R. 2 Calc. 131, referred to. In cases where a stay of execution or an injunction is granted on an ex parte application, liberty to apply to the Judge to vary or set aside his order must be implied, if not expressed. Fritz v Hobson, L. R. 14 Ch. Div. 542, referred to. On the 29th July 1886 an application was made by a party against whom the High Court, on second appeal, had passed a decree dated the 18th March 1816, for review of judgment. On the 28th August the applicant made a further application that execution of the decree might be stayed pending the determination of the application for review, and an order was passed ex parte granting this application. Subsequently the opposite party applied under s. 623 of the Civil Procedure Code for a review of the ex parte order on the grounds (i) that the Court had no jurisdiction to make it, and (ii) that the application of the 29th July was beyond time, and therefore there could be no review of judgment, and no order for stay of execution pending such review. Held, that the Court had power, under s. 623 of the Code, to review the ex parte order of the 28th August, and that such order had been made without jurisdiction and ought to be reviewed. Held, that, having regard to the circumstances that the order of the 28th August was made without jurisdiction, and upon an ex parte application, of which the opposite party had no notice, and interfered perhaps indefinitely with his right to obtain the money in Court under the final and unappealable decree

Subsequently the respondent applied for a review of judgment, and proved that his absence at the hearing before the Full Bench was due to a mistake which had been made in not serving him with notice of the reference. Held, by the Full Bench, that under the circumstances the applicant's absence at the hearing came within the words "any other sufficient reason" in s. 623 of the Civil Procedure Code, and the review should be granted and the appeal re-heard. Upon the hearing of an application for review of judgment, upon which an order has been passed directing the opposite party to show cause why the application should not be granted, counsel for the opposite party should begin. GHANSHAM SING v. Subsequently, however, she applied to be declared an insolvent, but her application was rejected. She then claimed to be released on the ground of her coverture. The Judge rejected her application as being too late. On reference to the High Court:—Held, that her

32. — Erroneous application of s. 575, Civil Procedure Code—Civil Procedure Code, s. 623. One of the cases to which s. 575 of the Code does not apply is where a preliminary objection being taken to the hearing of a first appeal before the High Court on the ground that the appeal is time-barred, the Judges of the Division Bench differ in opinion as to whether the appellant has shown sufficient cause, within the meaning of s. 5 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877), for not presenting the appeal within the prescribed period. The decision of such a preliminary objection is not a "hearing" of the appeal, but precedes the hearing or determines that there is no appeal which the Court can hear or decide. Where such a preliminary objection is allowed, it cannot be said that the Court which, by reason of the Limitation Act, has no jurisdiction to hear the appeal, should nevertheless "affirm" the decree of the Court below. In the case of such a preliminary objection and such a difference of opinion (the Bench being equally divided, the opinion of the senior Judge should, under s. 27 of the Letters Patent, prevail. *Appaji Bhivray v. Where, in such a case the provisions of the second paragraph of s. 575 of the Code were erroneously applied, and the judgment of the junior Judge, holding that the appeal should be dismissed as time-barred, prevailed, and the Court, on appeal under s. 10 of the Letters Patent, affirmed such judgment:—Held, that, under the circumstances, there was a mistake or error apparent on the face of the record, and that there was sufficient cause for granting a review of the Court's decree under s. 623 of the Code. HUSAINI BEGAM v. 40. ———— Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 376. During the pendency of a suit for rent a plaintiff applied for postponement on the ground that he was unable to obtain a copy of a document which he had applied for from the Collectorate. The Munsif refused postponement and gave him a modified decree. The plaintiff subsequently obtained a review of judgment and a decree in full. The Judge on appeal decided that the Munsif was wrong in admitting the review, because the plaintiff had not mentioned that he was previously unacquainted with the existence of the document. Held, that the review was properly admitted under Act VIII of 1859, s. 376. *GOOR DYAL ROY v. 41. ———— Nature of evidence—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 376. The new evidence referred to in s. 376, Act VIII of 1859, is evidence that would probably alter the decision of the Court. The affidavit on which an application for review is grounded must state what the new evidence to be relied on is: in such an affidavit no reliance can be placed on a statement of belief of good defence on the merits, but the facts to be relied on as such must be set out. *DHUNSOOK DASS v. 43. ———— Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 623—Review of judgment on second appeal—Alleged discovery of new and important documentary evidence—Ground which could not be relied on on second appeal. In a suit on a mortgage it was held by the lower Appellate Court and by the High Court on second appeal that the properties comprised therein were under attachment at the time of its execution, and that it was accordingly void under the Civil Procedure Code, s. 276, as against the claims of judgment-creditors enforceable under the attachment. The plaintiff, who was the appellant on second appeal, sought a review of the judgment pronounced therein on the ground of the discovery of new and important documentary evidence from which it would appear that the properties in question were not under attachment at the date of the mortgage. Held, that the application for review could not be entertained for the reason that the ground relied upon could not be successfully relied upon on a second appeal. RARU KUTTI v. OOGUR NARAIN SINGH* 8 W. R. 483

6. ———— Reversal by High Court of decision in similar case—Review granted on insufficient grounds. Where an application for review of an order in execution, made after ninety days from the order, was granted simply on the ground that in the execution case of another person upon the same decree the decision, which apparently proceeded upon the same ground as the decision in this case, had been reversed by the High Court:—Held, that the order admitting the review was open to appeal, and must be set aside. ROY GOODUR SUHAYE v. ACHEBUR LALL . 13 W. R. 120

7. ———— Different construction of law by High Court—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 377. Where the only cause for admitting a review after the ninety days prescribed by s. 377, Act VIII of 1859, was that the High Court construed the law differently from the way in which it had been laid down in the decision admitted to review:—Held, that the cause alleged was no excuse for the delay. PRAN KISHEN BHUTTACHARJEE v. BUKSHEE CAZEE . 10 W. R. 26

8. ———— Subsequent varying decision of law—Order on remand—Ground for review. A remand order made on special appeal is (unless a review of it be obtained within the prescribed time) a conclusive determination of the points of law involved in it; and the correctness of the law laid down upon a remand cannot be questioned on a second special appeal; nor is the fact of the Courts adopting a different view of the law after an order has been made, in general a good ground for allowing a review of such order after the time for a review has elapsed. RAMKUVARBAI v. DAMODHAR NARBHERAM . 6 Bom. A. C. 146

9. ———— Subsequent Full Bench decision—Ground for review. A Full Bench judgment after the original judgment has been given in a suit is not a ground of review, a Full Bench judgment being prospective, and not retrospective. MADHUB CHUNDER GHOSE v. RADHIKA CHOWDHRAIN . 7 W. R. 405

11. ———— Ground for review—Suit by mortgagee to declare lien—Subsequent suit for possession. The plaintiff, a mortgagee, obtained a money-decree against the defendant. A third party, in execution of another decree obtained against the same defendant, put up for sale the property included in the plaintiff's mortgage, and himself brought the right, title, and interest of his judgment-debtor in the property mortgaged to the plaintiff. The plaintiff subsequently, in execution of his decree, bought in the same property himself, and brought a suit against the defendant and the third party to have it declared that the latter held the property subject to his mortgage. The suit was decreed by the Subordinate Judge, but eventually dismissed by the High Court, on the ground that the plaintiff, by suing for his money-decree only, had deprived himself of the benefit of his lien as against the third party. The plaintiff thereupon brought another suit against the same parties to recover possession of the mortgaged property, which suit eventually came up before a Full Bench, where it was decided that the plaintiff had no right to bring the suit for recovery of possession, but that his proper course was to sue to have his lien upon the property declared, the Court intimating that it would be open to the plaintiff to apply for a review of judgment in the suit originally brought by him. On the review coming on to be heard, it was held that the plaintiff was entitled to a review of that judgment, and that the case was distinguishable from the general rule as to reviews laid down in Madhub Chunder Ghose v. Radhika Chowdhraim, 7 W. R. 405; Dwarkanath Doss Biswas v. Manick Chunder Doss, 9 W. R. 102; and Shama Churn Chuckerbutty v. Bindabun Chunder Roy, *B. L. R. Sup. ## REVIEW—contd.

6. REVIEWS AFTER TIME—contd.

Where the decision of a lower Court follows a view of the law taken by the High Court, and that view is set aside by a ruling of Her Majesty in Council, the judgment-creditor has a right to have his case retried upon that ruling. BANEE PERSHAD v. RADHA PERSHAD SINGH . . . 15 W. R. 143

14. ———— Decision of Privy Council—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 379—Ground for review out of time. A decision of the Privy Council in 1871 as to a question of fact in another suit, or the pendency of the appeal in the High Court, was held to be no cause (under s. 379, Act VIII of 1859) for not having preferred an application for review of a judgment passed in May 1866 within ninety days from the date of the decree. BOLAKEE LALL v. MONJEE LALL . . . 17 W. R. 163

15. ———— Application for review after appeal by party who did not appeal—Act VIII of 1859, s. 377—Just and reasonable cause for delay in filing petition of review. Upon the appeal of one of the defendants to the Privy Council the judgment of the High Court was reversed. Another defendant, whose defence was the same as that of the defendant who had appealed, applied to the High Court to review its judgment after a lapse of several years from the date of the judgment of the High Court, but within three months from the date on which he became aware of the decision of the Privy Council. The application was refused. Satto Saran Ghosal v. Tarini Charan Ghose, 3 B. L. R. A. C. 287, doubted. PANCHANAN BOSE v. GURUDAS ROY 9 B. L. R. 187: 18 W. R. 317

16. ———— Analogous cases. An application for review of judgment of three out of five analogous cases decided by the High Court, the judgment in two of which had been reversed by the Privy Council, was made after a lapse of more than ninety days from the date of judgment. Held, that a lapse of ninety days, under the circumstances, would not be a bar to the granting of the review. *SATTO SARAN GHOSAL v. 17. ———— Execution of decree against wrong person—Act VIII of 1859, ss. 376, 377—Reasonable ground for review—Appeal by one defendant, right of review by another. A decree for wasilat was passed against "the defendant" in a case where there were several defendants; and as soon as one of them, who was not the person against whom the plaintiff sought for wasilat in the original plaint, found that the decree was to be executed against him, he applied to the Court for a review, though after the time prescribed by s. 377, Act VIII of 1859. Held, that the Court was quite right in holding that there was reasonable cause, within the meaning of that section, for the application for review not being preferred within the limited time. *BUNKOO LALL SINGH v. ## REVIEW—contd.

6. REVIEWS AFTER TIME—contd.

18. ———— Pendency of special appeal—Ground for delay—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 377. Where an application for review is not made within the ninety days provided by Act VIII of 1859, the pendency of a special appeal is not "a just and reasonable cause" for the loss of time, such as the Court to which the application is made is bound to arrive at under s. 377, before it can entertain the application at all. LUCAS v. STEPHEN . . . 9 W. R. 301

FAKIRA v. BASAPA MAHADAN SHETTI 8 Bom. A. C. 234

19. ———— Mistake of counsel—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 623—"Sufficient cause." In a suit between A and B heard to the 29th January 1883, a certain conveyance was filed with the plaint, but up to the hearing this conveyance had been protected from discovery. B's counsel had, however, had a copy thereof delivered to him at the time B's written statement was being drawn, and a copy briefed to him at the hearing. At the hearing, A's counsel stated that the effect of the conveyance was to vest the entirety of a certain property in A; this view was accepted by B's counsel, who did not read the conveyance. The only issue in the case was "who was in possession of the property" and the Court decided this issue on the 5th February in favour of the plaintiff. On the 26th February B brought a suit against A to set aside this conveyance on the ground of fraud. And in certain proceedings in this case taken on the 31st March, B's counsel discovered, as he alleged for the first time, that under the conveyance a moiety of a seven-twenty-fourth share remained in B. On that day instructions were given to B's counsel to draw up a petition of review of the judgment of the 5th February. This petition, owing to the Easter vacation, was not, and could not have been, presented till the 9th April. Held, that the words "sufficient reason" in s. 623 of the Code should receive a liberal construction, and should be construed so as to do substantial justice to the parties: that as in this case it appeared to the Court that the construction placed upon the conveyance by B's counsel was the correct one, "sufficient reason" had been shown for making the application. In the matter of the petition of SOLOMON. GOPAUL CHUNDER LAHIRI v. SOLOMON . . . I. L. R. 11 Calc. 767

Held, on the appeal, per GARTH, C.J.—Although it is difficult, and perhaps undesirable, to attempt to define precisely the meaning of the words "any other sufficient reason" in s. 623 of the Civil Procedure Code, yet from the earlier part of the clause it is clear that a point which might have been, but which was not, discovered at the trial by the exercise of due diligence, was not intended by the section to afford any sufficient reason for review. Per WILSON, J.—Semle: If at a trial all parties, counsel on both sides, and the Judge are under a misapprehension as to the contents of a document, or even if the Judge alone is misled on such a point,

20. ———— Discovery of new evidence—Lapse of time. The discovery of new evidence may make it proper to grant a review, but the circumstances must be very special,—the more so when the application for review is made many years after the date of the decree, and the evidence discovered must be of a clear and conclusive character. HEERA LALL GHOSE v. 22. ———— Adoption of daughter's son—Custom—Breaches of custom—Practice—New case set up in special appeal. An application for review was presented to the High Court more than eighteen months after time, the applicant alleging that, soon after the decision sought to be reviewed, he was engaged in collecting instances of the special custom relied upon by him in support of his claim. The special custom was not set up in the Courts below, but an objection was taken for the first time in special appeal that an issue regarding it should have been raised in the lower Courts. No instance of such special custom had been given in evidence. It was urged that the applicant was a minor until shortly before the making of the High Court decree, and was only represented by his adoptive mother as his guardian. The High Court considered that there was no sufficient excuse for the delay, and rejected the application, observing that, unless upon very strong grounds and under very special circumstances, the Court would hesitate to permit a party at such a stage of his suit to set up a case which was not set up for him in the Courts below, where his professional representative must have been well aware whether such a case could be legitimately set up, and abstained from any attempt to do so. GOPAL SAFRAY v. Such contention and the other arguments and statements contained in his application might have been adduced within the time allowed by law for an application for a review of judgment. Held, that, as such contention might have been

On this the plaintiff applied for a review of both judgments. Held, that, though his application in relation to the former judgment was not in time, yet as he had no occasion to ask for a review until the latter judgment was passed, the words of s. 376, Civil Procedure Code, 1859, entitled him to ask the Court to reconsider both judgments. BAGOO JAN v. 4. ———— Issue not noticed in the lower Court—Arguments on appeal and review. In the first Court an issue was raised whether or no the hearing of this suit was barred by the law of limitation. One of the grounds of appeal to the Judge was, that the Principal Sudder Ameen ought to have held the suit barred as regards the diaras under the special limitation of three years from the date of the Collector's settlement. The Judge did not notice this ground in his judgment. The same ground of appeal was repeated on the special appeal to the High Court, but that Court refused to enter-

2. ———— Appeal by some only of several defendants—Application for review by some only of defendants in separate interests—Effect of decree on review modifying decision on appeal. In a suit, in which several defendants were joined, to set aside alienations made at different times and to different persons, plaintiff succeeded in the first Court partly, and on appeal wholly, and obtained a decree ordering the alienated property to be restored to him. Then the defendants, their interests being separate, brought separate special appeals, which were dismissed. After this, two of them applied for a review, and the decrees were modified (a portion of the claim being declared barred by limitation), but on a ground not applicable to all the defendants. Held, that, if these decrees were separate decrees in each appeal, the High Court had no power to modify the decrees in which there was no application for review, and which therefore remained in force, and should be executed. *PEGOO JAN v. The word "final" in s. 378 of Act VIII of 1859 means that the order rejecting the application or granting the review shall not by itself be open to appeal. *BHYRUB CHUNDER SURMAH CHOWDHRY v. R. 84, that a special appeal would lie to determine whether in an order granting a review there had been any irregularity, and that the word "final" in the Civil Procedure Code, s. 378, would not prevent the Appellate Court from considering afterwards the legality of the order, was held to apply to cases in which a regular appeal is preferred on the ground that the admission of the review was not justified by the evidence. 11. ——— Fresh evidence—Error in granting review. The Munsif dismissed a suit. Afterwards he issued a rule calling upon the defendant to show cause why a review of judgment should not be granted. The defendant showed cause, but his objections were overruled; the review was granted, both plaintiff and defendant adduced new evidence, and a decree was given for the plaintiff. On appeal, the Subordinate Judge reversed this decision on the ground relied upon by the defendant in showing cause in the lower Court, namely, that the defendant had not established that with due diligence he could not have brought forward in the original trial the evidence upon which his application for review was based. Held, on special appeal, that the fact of the defendant having adduced fresh evidence in the Court below did not debar him from objecting before the Subordinate Judge that the review was wrongly granted, because the order admitting it was final. 12. ——— Discovery of fresh evidence—Second appeal—Withdrawal of second appeal—Review petition—Practice. When on coming to the High Court under second appeal it is discovered that there is evidence, which ought to have been placed before the lower Courts, the proper practice to pursue is to allow the second appeal to be withdrawn in order that a review petition may be presented to the lower Appellate Court. But this course cannot be pursued when the review petition has been already presented to and rejected by the lower Court. RAMCHANDRA v. KRISHNAJI (1904) . . . I. L. R. 28 Bom. 4

13. ——— Effect of order on review—Review of judgment—Appeal from original decree. Where an application for review of judgment is granted, the result is a new decree superseding the original decree, and not merely some amendment thereof. An appeal was filed pending an application for review of judgment in the Court below; the review was granted, and an order passed which purported merely to amend the decree then under appeal. Held, that the order for review superseded the original decree; the decree under appeal had ceased to exist and the appeal could not be heard. Subsequently the defendant applied to the first Court for review of judgment under s. 623 of the Code on the ground of discovery of new and important evidence. Held, that as the defendant had preferred an appeal and it was dismissed under s. 551 of the Code, his application to the first Court for review of judgment could not be entertained. It is open to the person aggrieved, after an appeal has been preferred, to apply for a review, provided his appeal is withdrawn. As by the cancellation of the order for admission of an appeal it is to be taken that no appeal was admitted, so by withdrawal of the appeal it must be treated as though no appeal was preferred. But when an appeal is actually dismissed, it was in fact preferred and cannot be regarded as not having been preferred. RAMAPPA v. BHARMA (1906) and a supplementary order as to costs was made on the 20th December following. On the 3rd August 1903, the party aggrieved by the latter order applied under s. 623 of the Civil Procedure Code for a review of judgment. Notice was issued to the opposite party and the application for review was heard with the result that the Judge after disposing of certain technical objections proceeded to deal with the case on the merits and having done so he rejected the application for review with costs on the 14th September 1903. Against the said order the applicant having appealed:—Held, that the order rejecting the application for review was not appealable. The proper procedure would be to appeal from the order of the 20th December 1902, relating to costs. A petition of review involves three stages of procedure. The first stage commences ordinarily with an ex parte application under s. 623 of the Civil Procedure Code. The Court may then either reject the application at once, or may grant a rule calling on the other side to show cause why the review should not be granted. In the second stage the rule may either be admitted or rejected and the hearing of the rule may involve to some extent an investigation into the merits. If the rule is discharged then the case ends. If, on the other hand, the rule is made absolute, then the third stage is reached. The case is re-heard on the merits and may result in a repetition of the former decree or some variation of it. Though in one aspect the result is the same whether the rule be discharged or on the re-hearing the original decree be repeated, in law there is a material difference, for in the latter case, the whole matter having been re-opened, there is a fresh decree. In the former case the parties are relegated to, and still rest, on the old decree. VADILAL v. FULCHAND (1906) . . . . . I. L. R. 30 Bom. 421

This finding having been confirmed by the lower Appellate Court, an application was made for a review, and on review that Court reversed its former decree on the ground that no right of occupancy could be acquired. Held, that on review the lower Appellate Court ought not to have entertained the objection that the land was not agricultural without remanding the case for the trial of a fresh issue on that point. KHORESH MAHOMED v. The lower Appellate Court at first doubted the genuineness of the pottah and reversed that decision, but, on an application for review, admitted additional evidence on both sides and dismissed the appeal. Held, that the lower Appellate Court ought not to have allowed points to be explained away in the review stage by admitting additional evidence thereon though in this particular case injustice was not done. *TEKAET KHOOD NARAIN SINGH v. application by the accused, the Judge admitted the appeal and at the hearing acquitted him. The High Court sent for the record in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction. Held, that the order of acquittal was ultra vires under s. 430 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The order dismissing the appeal was final and not open to review. It was argued that s. 421 of the Criminal Procedure Code only applies to orders passed on the merits, and that, as the order rejecting the appeal was not of that class, it was an order "upon appeal" and was not final under s. 430. Held, that s. 421 was not limited to orders passed on the merits, and that the order in question was an order upon appeal and final under s. 430. The Criminal Procedure Code makes no provision for review of judgments in criminal matters by subordinate Appellate Courts. The jurisdiction of revision is vested in the High Court, which has ample powers under Ch. XXXII to rectify any inadvertent failure of justice. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. BHIMAPPA BIN RAMANNA

11. ———— Power of review by High Court in Criminal cases—Finality of order of High Court—Order not sealed—Criminal Procedure Code, ss. 107 and 110—Security for keeping the peace—Security for good behaviour. An application from jail—worded as an appeal—against an order passed under ss. 110 and 118 of the Code of Criminal Procedure was summarily rejected by means of the following order:—"No appeal lies in this case, and no sufficient ground appears for interference in revision. The application is dismissed." This order was signed by the Judge, who passed it, but was not sealed with the seal of the Court. Held, that the Judge, who had passed the order quoted above, was not under the circumstances precluded from entertaining an application for revision presented by counsel in relation to the same matter. Queen-Empress v. Lalit Tiwari, I. L. R. 21 All. 177, followed. Held, also, that where it appears from the evidence that there is an apprehension of any one using violence towards a particular person or particular persons, he ought to be bound over to keep the peace as provided by s. 107, and not be proceeded against under s. 110 of ¶ 12. — Subordinate Judge, power of—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 195—Application for sanction to prosecute—Dismissal of the application for default—Appellate Court cannot grant sanction on appeal—Dismissal of application for default not permissible—Review of order not permissible under the Code. An application was made by the Public Prosecutor of Belgaum to the Subordinate Judge of Gokak for sanction to prosecute one G for offences committed in his Court. The Public Prosecutor failed to appear in the Court on the day and at the hour fixed for the hearing of the application. The Subordinate Judge dismissed the application as for default. On an application being made to review this order, the Subordinate Judge declined to do so. On appeal, however, the District Judge granted the sanction under s. 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898). Held, that the Subordinate Judge had no power to review his order, because the Criminal Procedure Code contained no provision giving jurisdiction to a Court to review orders passed under it. In re GOPAL SIDDHESHWAR DESHPANDE (1907). . . REVISION—CIVIL CASES—contd.

1. GENERAL CASES.

Power of High Court—Rules 18, 20, made under Act XXVI of 1839—Agent to the Governor at Vizagapatam. The Agent to the Governor at Vizagapatam dismissed an appeal under the Agency Rules, No. 18. The appellant preferred a petition to the High Court against the order of the Agent. Held, that the High Court had no power to interfere. JAGANNADHA v. GOPPANNA

2. SMALL CAUSE COURT CASES.

1. Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887), s. 25—Circumstances under which the High Court will exercise its revisional powers. S. 25 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887) was not intended to give in effect a right of appeal in all Small Cause Court cases, either on law or fact. The revisional powers given by that section are only exercisable where it appears that some substantial injustice to a party to the litigation has directly resulted from a material misapplication or misapprehension of law, or from a material error in procedure. Muhammad Nizam-ud-din Khan v. Hira Lull, All. Weekly Notes (1890), 121, and Masum Ali v. Mohsin Ali, All. Weekly Notes (1890), 201, approved. MUHAMMAD BAKAR v. BAHAL SINGH . I. L. R. 13 All. 277

2. Civil Procedure Code, s. 622—Superintendence of High Court—Wrong decision on a question of limitation. An application under s. 25 of Act IX of 1887 to set aside a decree ought not to be entertained except in cases in which a similar application under s. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure would be allowed. Such an application will not lie where the sole ground is whether the first Court was or was not right in its decision on a question of limitation. Amir Hassan Khan v. Sheo Baksh Singh, I. L. R. 11 Calc. 6, referred to. RAGHU NATH SAHAI v. OFFICIAL LIQUIDATOR OF THE HIMALAYA BANK.

I. L. R. 15 All. 139

3. Discretion of Court—Superintendence of High Court under Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 622. S. 25 of Act IX of 1887 was not intended to give what would practically be an appeal in every case from the decision of a Court of Small Causes, but the discretion to be exercised thereunder should be guided by the same considerations as those which govern the application of s. 622 of Act XIV of 1882. Muhammad Bakar v. Bahal Singh, I. L. R. 13 All. 277, and Raghunath Sahai v. Official Liquidator of the Himalaya Bank, I. L. R. 15 All. 139, referred to. SARMAN LAL v. KHUBAN I. L. R. 16 All. 476

4. Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 622—Superintendence of High Court—Ground for revision—Question of limitation. It is no ground for revision under s. 25 of Act IX of 1887 that the Court whose order it is sought to revise may have come to an erroneous decision on a point of limitation. Amir Hassan Khan v. Sheo Baksh

Singh, I. L. R. 11 Calc. 6, referred to. SARMAN LAL v. KHUBAN . I. L. R. 17 All. 422

5. Jurisdiction and superintendence of the High Court—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 622—Practice. An error of law or procedure in the Small Cause Court confers jurisdiction upon the High Court to exercise the power committed by s. 25 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887). The powers conferred by the section are, however, purely discretionary, and the section does not give a right of appeal in all Small Cause Court cases either on law or on fact. The High Court is to determine in what cases it shall exercise the powers conferred upon it. It is not the practice of the Bombay High Court to interfere under s. 25 of the Act when there are no substantial merits in the case of the applicant. It interferes to remedy injustice. It is slow to interfere where substantial justice has been done by the subordinate Court, although that Court may technically have erred. The provisions of s. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882) do not afford a safe guide for the exercise of the extraordinary jurisdiction under s. 25 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act. The wording of the two sections is wholly different, that of s. 25 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act being of the widest description and conferring the most ample discretion on the High Court, while it has been held by the Privy Council that s. 622 of the Civil Procedure Code ought to be construed in a very restricted and limited sense. POONA CITY MUNICIPALITY v. RAMJI RAGHUNATH

6. Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 622—Discretion of Court in dealing with applications under s. 25 of Act IX of 1887. Although s. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure may properly be taken as indicating the lines along which a Judge would do well to exercise his discretion in admitting an application under s. 25 of the Small Cause Courts Act, a Judge is not absolutely bound to refuse any application under s. 25 of the latter Act which could not be admitted under s. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Sarman Lal v. Khuban, I. L. R. 17 All. 422, referred to and explained. VIAS RAM SHANKAR v. RALLA RAM MISIR . I. L. R. 21 All. 89

7. Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 203—Decree not according to law—Substantial failure of justice—Interference under extraordinary jurisdiction. The plaintiff, a Hindu widow, sued for Rs. 74-4-0, being the balance due on an account. She called six witnesses to prove her claim. The defendant did not appear to defend the suit. The Judge, however, dismissed the suit, the only judgment recorded by him being as follows: "Claim not proved. Claim rejected with costs." The plaintiff thereupon applied to the High Court under its extraordinary jurisdiction and the above decree was set aside, and a decree passed for the plaintiff with costs. Held, that the decree, being founded on a judgment not in accordance with s. 203 of the Civil Procedure Code, was not according to law, and therefore the High Court, under s. 25 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, had jurisdiction to pass such order in the matter as it thought fit. Per FARRAN, C.J.—In a case where there is nothing to excite suspicion, and where the plaintiff had given such proof of her claim as the law requires, the plaintiff is entitled, and this Court is entitled, to have some indication from the Judge of the point upon which he dismisses the suit, to show that he is not acting from mere caprice or in ignorance of the rules of law which regulate the proof requisite to establish a plaintiff's claim. Per FULTON, J.—The ground on which I would base our decision is that the error under s. 203 brings the case within our jurisdiction, and that the case being thus before us we are entitled, on being convinced that a failure of justice has occurred, to pass an order which will rectify the mistake. BAI JASODA v. BAMANSHA MANCHERJI. I. L. R. 23 Bom. 334

8. Calcutta Municipal Consolidation Act (1888), ss. 135 and 157—“Valuation,” Meaning of—Re-valuation made by the Municipality within six years from the date of the valuation made after hearing objection, legality of—Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), s. 622—Stat. 24 & 25 Vict., c. 104, s. 15—Superintendence of High Court. The word “valuation” in s. 135 of the Calcutta Municipal Consolidation Act (Bengal Act II of 1888) means, not “the amount of the valuation” only, but also the process or act of valuation. A valuation was made by the Calcutta Municipality of a holding, the rate-payer objected to the amount, and the Vice-Chairman of the Municipality, on hearing the objection, fixed the valuation at a certain amount. Within six years from this valuation fixed after objection, a re-valuation was made by the Municipality, and the rate-payer objected to the legality of such valuation on the ground that the Municipality had no power to make a re-valuation within six years from the date of the last valuation. The Vice-Chairman overruled the objection, and the rate-payer appealed under s. 157 of the Act to the Judge of the Court of Small Causes at Sealdah, who allowed the appeal. Held, that, inasmuch as the objection raised by the rate-payer was an objection to the valuation within the meaning of s. 135 of the Act, the Judge of the Small Cause Court had jurisdiction to deal with it. That being so, it was not open to the High Court to interfere either under s. 25 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, or under s. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure, or under s. 15 of 24 & 25 Vict., c. 104. *CORPORATION OF CALCUTTA v. 14. — Power of High Court on revision—Criminal Procedure Code, 1882, s. 439—Setting aside conviction. In exercising its powers under s. 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, it is open to the High Court to alter any finding and confirm a conviction, and if the evidence on the record in a case be sufficient to warrant a conviction the Court would not be justified in setting such conviction aside, merely because the view taken of the evidence by the lower Court is not sustainable or some fact which ought to have been found by that Court is not found or found incorrectly. *BALMAKAND RAM v. 17. — Power of Local Legislature—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 145, 435—Order concerning a ferry purporting to be made under s. 145. The local Legislature has power to overrule a statutory power conferred on the High Court; but this was not the object and result of the legislation expressed in s. 435 of the Criminal Procedure Code of 1898. Empress v. Burah I. L. R. 4 Calc. 172 : L. R. 5 I. A. 178, referred to. The terms of s. 435 mean that orders under the exempted sections mentioned in cl. (3) must have been passed with jurisdiction. If such orders are challenged as made without jurisdiction, the mere fact of their purporting to be passed under the exempted sections would not bring them within those sections so as to debar the exercise of power by the High Court under s. 15 of the Charter Acts.

23. ——— Discretionary power—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 192—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 435, 439—Perjury—Contradictory statements. The controlling power of the High Court is a discretionary power, and it must be exercised with regard to all the circumstances of each particular case, anxious attention being given to the said circumstances, which vary greatly. This discretion ought not to be crystallized, as it would become in course of time, by one Judge attempting to prescribe definite rules with a view to bind other Judges in the exercise of the discretion, which the Legislature has committed to them. This discretion, like all other judicial discretions, ought, as far as practicable, to be left untrammelled and free, so as to be fairly exercised, according to the exigencies of each case. *EMPEROR v. ## 2. DELAY.

1. ———— Necessity of immediate application for relief—Criminal Procedure Code, 1861, s. 404.—Application to set aside proceedings under s. 318. The High Court refused to interfere, under s. 404, Criminal Procedure Code, 1861, on an application by a party who had, in proceedings under s. 318 of the Code, been found not to be in possession, to set aside the proceedings, on account of the great delay that had taken place in making it. Such applications ought to be made at once. GOGUN PRAMANICK v. SURNOMOYEE 19 W. R. Cr. 39

2. ———— Irregular summary rejection of appeal—Rejection without giving reasons. Where a Sessions Judge rejected an appeal summarily under s. 421 of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1882, by an order consisting merely of the words "Appeal rejected," and an application for revision of such order was made to the High Court nearly nine months thereafter, on the ground that the Judge was wrong in rejecting the appeal without assigning his reasons for so doing:—Held, that his objection, if taken within a reasonable time, would have been valid, but as the application for revision was made with very great delay, the Court should not interfere. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. RAM NARAIN I. L. R. 8 All. 514

3. ———— Application to revise order of acquittal. Where an application was made by the Local Government to the High Court for revision of an order of acquittal, under s. 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1882, nearly ten months after the Sessions trial and upwards of twelve months after the commission of the alleged crime, and where there was, upon the face of the Judge's judgment, no error in law, and no appeal had been preferred upon a question of fact:—Held, that, under such circumstances the Court did not feel called upon to enter into the case at large upon the merits, under a petition for revision. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. ALA BAKHSH I. L. R. 6 All. 484

1. ———— Power to go into facts—Discretion of Court—Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882), s. 435. Under s. 435 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the High Court has power to go into questions of fact, but it will only exercise this power in cases in which it finds that it will be in the interests of justice to do so. NOBIN KRISHNA MOOKERJEE v. RASSICK LALL LAHA. I. L. R. 10 Calc. 1047

2. ———— Power of High Court in revisional cases—Criminal Procedure Code, 1882, s. 439. Under s. 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1882, the High Court has power to consider the facts of a case in revision. RAM BRAHMA SIRCAR v. CHANDRA KANTA SHAH. I. L. R. 21 Calc. 931

3. ———— Criminal Procedure Code 1882, s. 439. The interference of the High Court in revision is not limited to matters of law; it is fully competent to the High Court to enter into matters of fact if it thinks fit. But the mere application of a party to examine the evidence in any case would not be a sufficient ground for doing so. There must appear, on the face of the judgment or order complained of, or of the record, some ground to induce the High Court to think that the evidence ought to be examined in order to see that there has been no failure of justice. But no hard-and-fast rule can be laid down; each case will have to be dealt with according to its own circumstances. KESHAB CHUNDER ROY v. AKHIL METEY I. L. R. 22 Calc. 998

4. ———— Criminal Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 435, 439—High Court's powers of revision in criminal cases. Under ss. 435 and 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X of 1882), the High Court can, in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction, interfere with the findings of fact of inferior Courts, and will do so if there are very exceptional grounds for its interference, in the interests of justice. Per JARDINE, J.—As a rule, the Court refuses to interfere (i) where the Legislature intended the original or appellate decision on the facts to be final; (ii) where the relief sought might be got from a lower Court of concurrent revisional jurisdiction; and (iii) where the lower Court's judgment on the fact is not shown to be clearly and manifestly wrong. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. ## 4. EVIDENCE AND WITNESSES.

1. ——— Conviction inconsistent with evidence—Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882), ss. 439 and 423—Court of Appeal—Appellate powers—Discretion. In cases in which the law allows no appeal, the High Court, as a Court of revision, will not, except on very exceptional grounds, exercise the powers of an Appellate Court; but where such exceptional grounds exist, as where the conviction is not in any degree supported by the evidence, the High Court will exercise its discretion under s. 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and reverse the conviction and sentence. *EMPRESS v. 3. ——— Case depending on consideration and appreciation of evidence—Abatement of appeal. Two persons, M and N, were convicted of criminal breach of trust, and each was sentenced to one year's rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 1,000. Both prisoners filed an appeal to the High Court. N died pending his appeal. On M's appeal, the High Court passed an order acquitting him and reversing his conviction and sentence. Thereupon one of the relatives of the deceased N applied to the High Court to set aside the conviction and sentence passed in his case and order the fine to be refunded. Held, that on N's death his appeal abated under s. 431 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X of 1882), and as the case turned on the appreciation of evidence, the High Court declined to interfere in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction

5. ——— Decision that evidence is insufficient.—Refusal of Magistrate to proceed further in revision case. As a Court of revision, the High Court will not enter upon a consideration of the value of the evidence on which the Magistrate decided not to proceed further in a case under s. 521, Criminal Procedure Code, 1872. *SHONAI PORAMANICK v. 9. ——— Omission to give available evidence for prosecution—Material "error"—Error in appreciation of evidence—Act X of 1872, s. 297. It was not a ground for revision by the High Court that all the evidence for the prosecution which might have been brought before the Sessions Judge had not been brought before him. The words "material error" in that section could not be held to include error in the appreciation of evidence. Under the 1st clause of s. 297, Act X of 1872, the High Court" could not set aside findings of fact except in case of an appeal from a conviction. In the matter of AUROKIAM. I. L. R. 2 Mad. 38

10. Irregularity in dealing with evidence—Withholding admissible statement of witness from the jury. Where a statement by a witness for the defence, that a witness for the prosecution was at a particular place at a particular time, and consequently could not then have been at another place where the latter states he was and saw the accused persons, after being admitted, was withheld from the jury, the High Court ordered a new trial. *REG. v. 11. Criminal Procedure Code, 1861, ss. 426, 439—Misconception of evidence. Misconception of evidence was a defect or irregularity within the meaning of ss. 426 and 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1861. QUEEN v. BEHAREE DOSADH
7 W. R. Cr. 7

12. Criminal Procedure Code, 1891, s. 426—Admission of illegal evidence—Act II of 1855, s. 57—New trial. The Appellate Court, where it finds that illegal evidence has been admitted, should consider whether it is such as is likely to have exercised prejudicial influence on the minds of the jury; and if the Court be of opinion that it is so, it will treat the case as if it had been tried by a Sessions Judge with the aid of assessors. If the evidence (after omitting that portion of it which should not have been admitted) is sufficient to sustain the verdict, the conviction will be upheld. In exceptional cases, where the evidence is of such a character as to suggest the consideration that its real value cannot fairly be appreciated except by a Court which has heard that evidence given a new trial will be directed. REG. v. RAMSWAMI MUDLIAR

13. Discretion of Sessions Judge—Power of Appellate Court. The exercise of the discretion which the Sessions Judge had under s. 249 of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, to determine whether the deposition taken before the Magistrate at the preliminary inquiry are to be evidence at the hearing before the Sessions Court, was open to review by the High Court on appeal. *REG. v. 14. Improper admission in evidence of examination of prisoner. When the examination of the prisoner by the Magistrate had not been recorded in full as required by s. 205 of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1861, and was therefore inadmissible in evidence, and the other evidence was sufficient to support the conviction, the fact that such examination had been admitted by the Sessions Court was not a ground for setting aside the trial on revision. *REG. v. Where the evidence was taken down by the Magistrate in English, and no memorandum was attached to it (as required by s. 199, Code of Criminal Procedure, 1861), stating that the evidence was read over to the witness in a language which he understood, it was held that the accused was materially prejudiced, and the Court interfered on revision. *QUEEN v. Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, s. 297—Evidence in dispute regarding land. In a case of a dispute regarding land commenced under the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1861, but continued under the Code of 1872 where the evidence was not recorded in the manner provided for by s. 334 and the following sections of the Code, the Court set the order aside on revision. *KHETROMONY DASI v. 17. Criminal Procedure Code, 1861, ss. 426, 439—Irregularity not prejudicing prisoner—Madras Police Act, 1859, s. 41. A police constable was tried and convicted by the Assistant Agent of Vizagapatam under s. 44 of Act XXIV of 1859, and sentenced to fine and imprisonment. On appeal, the agent reversed the conviction and sentence, on the ground that there had been irregularity of procedure on the part of his assistant in not recording evidence for the prosecution, and in only taking down the substance of the prisoner's statement and not the full statement as made. Held, that the question was whether there had been such error and irregularity on the part of the Assistant Agent as to prejudice the accused and to occasion a failure of justice, that if not, the order reversing the conviction was rendered bad in law by ss. 426 and 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code; that the accused did not appear to have been prejudiced: consequently the order of the Appellate Court was set aside, and a re-hearing directed. ANONYMOUS

18. Irregularities concerning witnesses—Irregularity in taking evidence of witnesses. The High Court refused to interfere where a witness for the prosecution was examined after the defence was over, where the prisoner had notice of the evidence to be given by the witness, and therefore was not prejudiced by it in his defence. QUEEN v. TOTARAM 11 W. R. Cr. 15

22. ———— Power of High Court—Criminal Procedure Code (Act XXV of 1861), s. 366—Examination of accused—Postponement of trial for summoning a witness—Discretion of Judge. A Deputy Magistrate committed certain prisoners for trial on a charge of dacoity. Some of the prisoners had confessed before the Deputy Magistrate but he failed to record the examination of the prisoners, or to attest it as required by s. 205 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The Sessions Judge therefore refused to admit the examination of the prisoners by the Deputy Magistrate in evidence, and also refused to postpone the trial for the purpose of summoning the Deputy Magistrate and taking his evidence in the matter. Held, that, it being wholly within the discretion of the Judge, under s. 366, to say whether or not he should postpone the trial, or summon any witness to give his evidence, the High Court as a Court of revision would not interfere or order a new trial. *QUEEN v. ## 5. ACQUITTALS.

1. ———— Acquittal from which Government may appeal—Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, s. 297. It is not the practice of the High Court to interfere by way of revision under s. 297 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1872, with an acquittal against which the Government may appeal. EMPRESS v. CHEDI RAI 7 C. L. R. 142

2. ———— Improper acquittal—Acquittal on erroneous ground. Where the senior Assistant Sessions Judge, on the hearing of a charge of false evidence, without taking evidence acquitted the accused after calling upon him to plead, the prosecutor being unable to say that the alleged false statements of the accused were material to the trial on which they were made, the High Court reversed the order of acquittal, and directed the trial to be proceeded with. REG. v. DAMODHAR RAM CHANDRA 5 Bom. Cr. 68

3. ———— Trial on evidence taken in another case. The Court set aside an order of acquittal passed by a Deputy Magistrate in a case which he tried, not on evidence taken before himself in the case, but entirely on evidence in another case before another officer (the Joint Magistrate). *TUKHEYA RAI v. 4. ———— Order for detention of accused pending appeal from acquittal—Power of High Court on revision. Where, an appeal having been preferred to the High Court against a judgment of acquittal, a Magistrate made an order on the parties having been arrested and brought before him that they should be detained in custody pending the decision of the appeal:—Held by TURNER,

5. ——— Order by High Court for re-trial after acquittal on appeal—Criminal Procedure Code, ss. 423 (a), 439—High Court's powers of revision. The High Court has power under s. 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code to revise an order of acquittal, though not to convert a finding of acquittal into one of conviction. In reference to orders of acquittal passed by a Court of Session in appeal, the High Court may, under s. 439, reverse such order and direct a re-trial of the appeal, the proper tribunal to conduct which is the Sessions Court of appeal, or such other Court of equal jurisdiction as the High Court may entrust, under s. 526 of the Code, with the trial of the appeal. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. 7. ——— High Court's power of revision—Criminal Procedure Code, 1882 s. 439—Practice. Though the High Court has the power, under s. 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X of 1882), to revise an order of acquittal, yet ordinarily it does not interfere with such an order in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction, because an appeal can always be made by the Local Government under s. 417 of the Code. *HEERABAI v. 8. ——— Acquittal of accused, effect of, with regard to others similarly charged—Revival of proceedings against absent accused—Indian Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 147, 341, 379. Petitioners were charged, along with two others, with having committed certain offences under ss. 379, 341 and 147, Indian Penal Code; the latter, who were sent up by the police, were tried and acquitted, and the Magistrate remarked in his judgment that the case against the petitioners was not a true one. Held, that, until this decision was set aside by higher authority, the petitioners could not be prosecuted; and the order of the Sessions Judge directing their prosecution was bad. *Panchu Singh v. several other persons under ss. 143, 342 and 323, Indian Penal Code. The police did not send up the petitioners for trial, as they thought the evidence against them was weaker than that against the others, and they sent up these; but they were acquitted by the trying Magistrate, who entered the case as "doubtful false." Subsequently the District Magistrate called for the records and issued notices against all the accused persons to show cause why further proceedings should not be taken against them. After hearing them, he disagreed with the decision of the trying Magistrate. But, not considering the case as of sufficient importance to move the Local Government, he ordered the petitioners only who had not been tried, to be placed on their trial. Held, that the District Magistrate should, in the proper exercise of his discretion, have moved the Local Government against the order of acquittal which he disapproved. Held, further, that no proceedings could be taken against the petitioners so long as the trying Magistrate's judgment declaring the case to be false was not set aside. *BISHUN DAS GHOSE v. The accused was tried by a Presidency Magistrate on a charge of voluntarily causing grievous hurt with an instrument for cutting. He was convicted and sentenced, under s. 326 of the Penal Code, to rigorous imprisonment for two years. The Local Government, being of opinion that the sentence was inadequate, moved the High Court, under s. 435 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X of 1882), to quash the Magistrate's proceedings, and ordered the accused to be committed for trial to the High Court. It was contended for the prisoner that, as the offence was not exclusively triable by the Court of Session, the High Court had no power, under s. 423 (b) of the Code to order the accused to be committed for trial. Held dissenting from

3. Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 209, 213, 215, 436—Order of discharge—Subsequent order of commitment—Revisional power of High Court. Where a Sessions Judge, under s. 436, ordered the commitment of an accused who had previously been discharged under s. 209, Criminal Procedure Code, by the Deputy Magistrate, on evidence which was unreliable and insufficient:—Held, that the High Court had authority to set aside the order of commitment on the merits of the case, and that the order was bad and should be set aside. The High Court, in the exercise of its powers of revision, can, on the merits of a case, set aside an order of commitment passed by a District Magistrate or Sessions Judge under s. 436, Criminal Procedure Code, where such order of commitment setting aside a previous order of discharge is made on insufficient or unreliable evidence. PIRTHI CHAND LAL v. RAM CHUNDER BAGDEE 18 W. R. Cr. 53

3. Improper discharge—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 436, 410, 209—Preliminary inquiry—Order for further inquiry or subsequent commitment to Sessions—Consideration of evidence on record. At a preliminary inquiry, a Magistrate before committing an accused person to the Sessions Court under s. 210 of the Code of Criminal Procedure should have sufficient grounds for doing so, and among such grounds may properly be placed a consideration as to whether, on the evidence before him, a conviction will be arrived at. A Sessions Judge or District Magistrate, in considering whether an accused person has been "improperly discharged," within the terms of s. 436 of the Criminal Procedure Code, is bound to consider all the grounds upon which such order of discharge has been passed, including a consideration of the evidence which has not been believed or held to be sufficient to establish a prima facie case, before ordering the commitment of the accused person or directing a further inquiry. Where an accused had been discharged under s. 209 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and subsequently the Sessions Judge directed the accused to be committed to the Sessions under s. 436 of the Code of Criminal Procedure without considering the evidence on the record which he thought he could not do without "prejudging the case, thus making it difficult for him to hear it with a jury":—Held, that the Sessions Judge's order directing the commitment of the accused was bad, inasmuch as it had not been made on full consideration of the merits of the case, as disclosed by the evidence before the Magistrate. HARBANS SINGH v. FAKIR DAS (1902) 7 C. W. N. 77

4. Jurisdiction—Revisional jurisdiction of High Court—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 423, 439—Presidency Magistrate—Discharge of accused person under s. 209 of Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898)—Order of discharge set aside by High Court, and order made that accused be arrested and committed for trial at the Sessions of the High Court—Practice—Procedure. Under ss. 439 and 423 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the High Court has jurisdiction to set aside an order of discharge passed by a Presidency Magistrate, if such preliminary be necessary and to direct that a person improperly discharged of an offence be arrested and forthwith committed for trial. The fact that, by s. 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), the

1. ——— Power of High Court to revise order reviving a complaint after discharge—High Court Charter Act (24 & 25 Vict., c. 104), s. 15—Criminal Procedure Code, 1882, s. 439. The High Court has ample powers, under the Charter Act, if not under the Code, to revise an order reviving a complaint after discharge by a Presidency Magistrate. 3. ——— Power to order re-trial—Power of High Court as Court of Revision and Appeal—Act XI of 1874, s. 28. The High Court has full power as a court of revision to order a re-trial when necessary. ## 9. JUDGMENTS, DEFECTS IN.

1. ——— Judgment without giving reasons—Criminal Procedure Code, 1882, s. 421—Appeal, summary rejection of—Judgment of Criminal Appellate Court. The powers conferred by s. 421 of the Criminal Procedure Code should be exercised sparingly and with great caution, and reasons, however concise, should be given for rejecting an appeal under that section. Where a Sessions Judge rejected an appeal summarily under s. 421 by an order consisting merely of the words "Appeal rejected" and an application for revision of such order was made to the High Court after great delay:—Held, that the Judge was wrong in rejecting the appeal without assigning any reasons for so doing, and if it had been taken within a reasonable time it would have been a valid objection. *QUEEN-EMPRESS v. 2. ——— Judgment not containing substance of evidence relied on—Omission, to comply with s. 228, Criminal Procedure Code—Irregularity in proceedings—Error or defect. K was tried by a Magistrate in a summary way and convicted. He appealed to the Court of Session, which quashed his conviction, on the ground merely that the substance of the evidence on which the conviction was had was not embodied in the Magistrate's judgment. Held, that the Court of Session should not have quashed the conviction merely by reason of such defect, but, if it found it impossible to dispose of the appeal because of such defect, it should have required the Magistrate to repair the same by recording a judgment in which the substance of the evidence should be fully embodied, and, if necessary, re-examining the witnesses for that purpose, or to have ordered a re-trial with that view. *EMPRESS OF INDIA v. 5. ——— Ground for enhancing sentence—Sentence clearly inadequate—Charge improperly framed. In a case in which the Magistrate referred the proceedings to the High Court with a recommendation that they should be set aside because the sentence was inadequate, it was held that it is not merely because circumstances occur to the Magistrate which would render necessary a more severe sentence or a different charge that the High Court should interfere. There must be matter on the record of the case showing that a charge has been improperly framed, or that the sentence passed is clearly inadequate to the offence. QUEEN v. HARNATH SINGH . 20 W. R. 6. ——— Ground for refusing to enhance sentence—Reference by Commissioner having jurisdiction—Inadequate sentence. The High Court refused to interfere on a reference made to it by a Deputy Commissioner in a case which was sent up for heavier punishment to the Deputy Commissioner under s. 46, Code of Criminal Procedure, 1861, by a Magistrate of the 2nd class, as the Court was of opinion that the Deputy Commissioner, instead of referring the case, ought, under that section, to have tried the prisoners himself, and convicted them of any offence which he thought was made out against them by the evidence. *SOBIL DASS v. 8. ——— Severity of sentence—Criminal Procedure Code, 1861, s. 404. The severity of a sentence is not of itself a ground on which the High Court should call for the record of a trial or other judicial proceeding under the general power of revision. QUEEN v. NARAPUREDDY. 4 Mad. 242

In a case in which the accused was charged under the Penal Code with an offence which was committed before the Penal Code came into operation it was held that, having regard to s. 4, Act XVII of 1862, and s. 426 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, the error of procedure was not sufficient to vitiate the conviction so long as the punishment awarded as under the Penal Code did not exceed that which was a legal penalty for the offence before the Penal Code became law. In the matter of the petition of MOHA-BEER SINGH . . . . . 15 W. ## 11. VERDICT OF JURY AND MISDIRECTION.

1. ———— Ground for interference with verdict—Power of High Court—Verdict of jury not manifestly erroneous. The Court will not interfere with the finding of a jury unless their verdict is shown to be manifestly erroneous. A prisoner was charged under ss. 302 and 304 of the Penal Code, and the Judge at the trial added a further charge under s. 325. The Judge in his charge to the jury directed them that in the event of their finding the charges under ss. 302 and 304 unsustainable, they might find the prisoner guilty under s. 325. The jury unanimously acquitted the prisoner under the charge framed under s. 302, and a majority of them acquitted him under the charge framed under s. 304; but a majority of them found him guilty under the charge framed under s. 325. The Judge disagreed with their finding as regarded the charge framed under s. 304, and referred the case to the High Court under s. 307 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The High Court refused to interfere with the verdict, on ground that the verdict could not be said to be manifestly erroneous, the Judge having heard the evidence and having expressed his opinion to the jury that they might find the prisoner guilty under s. 325. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. JACQUIET . . . I. L. R. 11 Cal. 85

2. ———— Conviction on evidence not amounting to proof. A jury may be satisfied with a minimum of proof, and it is beyond the power of the High Court in such cases to interfere with its verdict; but when there is nothing which can, if believed, amount to proof, the case should not be put to the jury at all, as a verdict of guilty cannot under such circumstances be sustained. Under such circumstances, the Court will set a conviction aside. QUEEN v. RUTTON DASS 16 W. R. Cr. 19

3. ———— Finding of jury as to grave and sudden provocation—Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, s. 297—Criminal Procedure Code, 1861, s. 426—Question of fact—Power of High Court. Under excep. 1, s. 300 of the Penal Code, the finding of a jury as to whether the offence of murder was committed under grave and sudden provocation sufficient to prevent the offence from amounting to murder, is a question of fact with which the High Court cannot interfere. QUEEN v. SOHRAIE . . . 13 W. R. Cr. 33

4. ———— Omission to charge jury properly—Power of High Court to set aside verdict. Omission to sum up properly to the jury is, if the prisoner is thereby prejudiced, an error in law such as to justify a Court of appeal in setting aside the verdict. REG. v. FATTECHAND VASTACHAND . . . 5 Bom. Cr. 86

5. ———— Misdirection—Trial by jury—Power to go into facts of case—Mode of dealing with directions of Judge to jury. In a case tried by jury the High Court has no power to go into the facts of the case in order to see whether or not the conviction was right, that standing entirely upon the verdict of the jury. The Court has only to consider the facts in order to see whether the Judge has done his duty in laying the case before the jury for their consideration. The mode of dealing by the High Court with the Judge's summing up to the jury pointed out, first as regards the law and then as regards the facts. QUEEN v. NIMCHAND MOOKERJEE . . . 20 W. R. Cr. 41

6. ———— Error in law—Prejudice to accused—New trial. Improper advice given by the Judge to the jury upon a question of fact, or the omission of the Judge to give that advice which a Judge in the exercise of a sound judicial discretion ought to give the jury upon questions of fact, amounts to such an error in law in summing up as to justify the High Court on appeal or revision in setting aside a verdict of guilty. The power of setting aside convictions and ordering new trials for any error or defect in the summing up will be exercised by the High Court only when the Court is satisfied that the accused person has been prejudiced by the error or defect, or that a failure of justice has been occasioned thereby. QUEEN v. ELAHI BAX . B. L. R. Sup. Vol. 459: 5 W. R. Cr. 80

7. ———— Omission to leave material facts to jury. The verdict of the jury was reversed on the ground of misdirection by the Judicial Commissioner in not having left the cause of death and the prisoner's connection with certain attempts at bribery as questions for the consideration of the jury. QUEEN v. KALI CHURN GANGOOLY 7 W. R. Cr. 2

8. ———— Prejudice to prisoner from erroneous summing up. Where there is a failure of justice, or where the prisoner has been prejudiced by the defective summing up of the Judge, the High Court can interfere either by discharging the prisoner, if the evidence on the record is not sufficient to convict him, supposing the trial to have taken place with the aid of assessors, or to direct a fresh trial. *QUEEN v. Where, after the delivery of an unanimous verdict of the jury, convicting the accused of the charge of rioting in connection with certain land and the crops thereon, possession of which was claimed by the complainant as well as by the accused, the foreman of the jury attempted to add that "the land and the crops are all theirs" (meaning that they belonged to the accused), but was stopped by the Sessions Judge on the ground that the verdict was quite clear in its terms, and it was therefore unnecessary to hear anything further from them: Held, that it was undesirable to stop the jury at such a stage of the proceedings; that the words the foreman attempted to add to the verdict were very material; and that, the accused having been seriously prejudiced by the procedure adopted by the Sessions Judge, there should be a new trial. *NARAYAN CHANGA v. The new Code came into force on the 1st January 1883. The prisoner presented an appeal to the High Court from the conviction and sentence abovementioned on the 23rd January 1883. Held, that there was no appeal, the case being governed by s. 408 of the new Code, but that the case was a fit one for the exercise of the High Court's revisional jurisdiction, and should be dealt with under the powers conferred on the High Court by virtue of that jurisdiction. *RONGAI v. brought to the knowledge of the High Court by the complainant preferring a petition to it, together with a copy of the Magistrate's order. This petition was laid before STRAIGHT, J., who, observing that the case was one in which the Magistrate should have taken security from such persons for keeping the peace, as provided by s. 489 of Act X of 1872, directed the Magistrate to summon such persons to show cause why they should not be required, under s. 491 of that Act, to enter into a bond to keep the peace. The Magistrate accordingly summoned such persons as directed, the summonses setting forth that they were issued "under the orders of the High Court." The Magistrate took evidence on behalf of such persons and eventually made an order requiring such persons to enter into a bond to keep the peace. Such persons were fully aware of the order made by STRAIGHT, J. Such persons applied to the High Court to set aside the order requiring them to enter into a bond to keep the peace, on the ground that the Magistrate had not proceeded of his own motion, but under the order of STRAIGHT, J., which was made without jurisdiction; and on the ground that the summonses had not set forth the report or information on which they were issued. Held, by STUART, C.J., that, inasmuch as STRAIGHT, J., when he made his order, represented the full authority and jurisdiction of the High Court, such order was final and the application could not be entertained. Held, by PEARSON, J., SPANKIE, J., and OLDFIELD, J. (SPANKIE, J., doubting whether such order could be questioned), that the order of STRAIGHT, J., was one which he was competent to make as a Court of revision under s. 297 of Act X of 1872. Held, by PEARSON, J., and SPANKIE, J., that, inasmuch as such persons had not been in the slightest degree prejudiced by the defect in the summonses which were issued to them, such defect was not a ground on which to set aside the Magistrate's order requiring them to enter into a bond to keep the peace. *EMPRESS v. 28. ——— Dispute as to possession of immovable property—Criminal Procedure Code, ss. 145 (5) and 435 (3)—Order of Magistrate on dispute as to possession of immovable property—Jurisdiction of High Court. The order to which finality is given under ss. 145 (5) and 435 (3) of the Code of Criminal Procedure must be an order which not only purports to be, but is in reality, an order under s. 145, and has been passed with jurisdiction. Where the Court has exceeded its jurisdiction in making the order, it is null and void, and the High Court, in the exercise of its revisional powers, is competent to interfere with it. Hur-bullubh Narain Singh v. Luchmeswar Prosad Singh, I. L. R. 26 Calc. 188; In re Pandurang Govind, I. L. R. 24 Bom. 527; and Agra Bank v. Leishman, I. L. R. 18 Mad. 41, referred to. Where a Magistrate, under circumstances which would apparently have justified his taking action under s. 145 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, took action in fact under s. 107, and having passed an order seemingly under s. 118, added, as it were, as an appendix to this order:—"Bisu Ahir put in possession under s. 145, Code of Criminal Procedure"—it was held that this order passed without any of the procedure prescribed by s. 145 being adopted, was more than an irregularity, and was an order passed without jurisdiction, and liable to revision by the High Court. Mohesh Sower v. Narain Bag, I. L. R. 27 Calc. 981, and Sakor Dusadh v. Ram Purgash Singh, 7 C. W. N. 174, referred to. MAHADEO KUNWAR v. BISU (1903)

29. ——— Notice to accused—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 435, 437—Petition by complainant for re-trial of accused after discharge—No notice to accused—Order by Sessions Judge, directing further inquiry—Revision petition to High Court—Jurisdiction—Necessity for notice before order passed to prejudice of accused. A person charged with having committed criminal breach of trust was discharged, whereupon the complainant petitioned the Sessions Judge, under s. 435 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, to direct a re-trial of the case. Notice of the application was not given to the accused. The Sessions Judge, acting under s. 347, ordered a further inquiry to be made. On a criminal revision petition being preferred by the accused in the High Court against that order:—Held, that it was competent to the High Court to revise the order; and that, without laying down a general rule that the omission to give notice of such an application renders an order under the section bad, the order must be set aside, as it had not been shown that in this case there was any difficulty in giving notice, or that there was any reason why the general rule should not be followed that an order should not be made to a man's prejudice without giving him an opportunity for being heard. ALA-

30. ————— Sanction for prosecution—Practice—Criminal Procedure Code, s. 195—Sanction to prosecute—Application for sanction refused by Magistrate—Independent application subsequently made to the Sessions Judge. Certain persons, who had been discharged after a complaint against them of the offences of kidnapping and extortion, applied, to the Magistrate who had discharged them, for sanction to prosecute the complainants. This application was refused by the Magistrate. The applicants then, instead of appealing or applying in revision to the Sessions Judge against the order of the Magistrate, made a fresh and independent application to the Sessions Judge for sanction to prosecute the complainants. The Sessions Judge declined to entertain this application. On application under s. 195 of the Code of Criminal Procedure being made to the High Court against both the orders above referred to, the High Court refused to interfere, on the ground that the applicants had not pursued their proper remedy in the Court below. *HARBANS RAI v. 31. ————— Practice—Procedure—Sanction to prosecute—Stay of criminal proceedings pending disposal of civil suit—High Court—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 195, 439, 476. The High Court is competent, in the exercise of its revisional power under s. 439 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), to interfere with an order made by a subordinate Court, under s. 476 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), directing the prosecution of any person for the offences referred to in that section. The High Court in this case refused to stay criminal proceedings directed by a subordinate Court under s. 476 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898) until an appeal in the civil suit in connection with which the criminal charges were made had been decided. In re BAL GANGADHAR TILAK (1902) . . . 32. ————— Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), ss. 195, 435, 439—Jurisdiction of High Court, under Criminal Procedure Code, to revise order according sanction which has been granted by a Civil Court. The High Court has no jurisdiction, under ss. 435 and 439 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, to revise an order passed by any Court other than a Criminal Court under cl. (b) or (c) of sub-s. (1) of s. 195 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, according sanction to institute a prosecution; or an order passed under sub-s. (6) of s. 195 revoking or refusing to revoke a sanction which has been given, or granting a sanction which has been refused. It may be open to the High Court, under s. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure, to revise such proceedings of a Civil Court, in cases which come within the terms of that section. In re CHENNAAGAUD (1902) . The suit was decided again in favour of the plaintiff, but the decision was reversed on appeal. 13. ——— Right of appeal as to costs—Disclaimer of interest in subject-matter of suit.* The fact of a defendant having, in the Court of first instance, disclaimed any right or interest in the land in a suit does not deprive him of the right to appeal, if a judgment is given against him with costs. NUND COOMAR SINGH v. 14. ——— Right of purchaser to appeal on death of assignor—Assignment of interest in subject-matter of suit.* A sued B in the Court of first instance, and obtained a decree declaring A's right to a house. The District Court on appeal reversed this decree and rejected A's claim. The High Court reversed the decree of the District Court and remanded the appeal. The District Court on remand made a decree confirming the original decree of the Court of first instance in A's favour. Subsequently to the last-mentioned decree of the District Court, B sold the house to C. B then preferred a special appeal to the High Court, but died before it was heard. Held, under Act VIII of 1859, that C could not carry on the special appeal after B's death. MORESHWAR BAPUJI PHATAK v. He then took out execution, attached, sold, and himself purchased the property in question. The objector meantime appealed to the Privy Council, and, having obtained a decree reversing the declaratory decree, took out execution against the opposite party for costs and wasilat. The opposite party objected, but the Judge allowed the execution to proceed and deputed an Ameen to ascertain the amount of mesne profits collected. Held, that the Judge's order was not an order prior to decree within the meaning of s. 363 of the Code, and that the opposite party was entitled to appeal against the principal that he was liable without waiting the result of the Ameen's investigation. GOPAL CHUNDER CHUCKERBUTTY v. 16. ——— Right of party to suit not of party to compromise to appeal from order made in execution of decree on compromise—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 224—Resistance to execution—Procedure.* In a suit for partition, a compromise was entered into by all the parties except S, and a decree obtained on the terms thereof. In execution S was dispossessed and presented a petition to the Court objecting that the decree was not binding on her. The petition was rejected. Held, that the objection raised by S ought to have been investigated under s. 245 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and that S was entitled to appeal against the order rejecting the petition. SANKARAVADIVAMMAL v. 17. ——— Appeal from original decision after review granted illegally has been set aside. Where a suit under the rent law was dismissed, and the Munsif granted a review of judgment on fresh evidence without satisfying himself that it had been out of plaintiff's power to produce such evidence at first:—Held, that the Munsif had acted illegally and without jurisdiction, and that the Subordinate Judge was right in reversing his judgment after the re-hearing, but that the decision did not prejudice plaintiff's liberty to appeal from the original decision. BETIS v. BONSI MUNDUL . 25 W. R. 343

18. ——— Second appeal—Rent suit—Beng. Act VIII of 1869, s. 102—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 153—General Clauses Act (I of 1868), s. 6.* The word "Proceedings" in s. 6 of Act I of 1868, as applied to a suit, means the suit as an entirety, that is, down to the final decree. A second appeal therefore to the High Court, on a question of the amount due as rent, will not lie when the suit was instituted previous to the passing of Act VIII of 1885, although the judgment in the suit was delivered, and the first appeal therefrom heard, subsequently to the passing of that Act. Hurrosundari Debi v. 20. ———— Death of one of several appellants pending appeal—Death of one of several respondents pending appeal—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 366, 368, 544, and 582. Any plaintiff or defendant has a right to appeal without the concurrence of any of the parties to the suit. The mere fact of the death of one of several appellants cannot affect the right of the other appellants to proceed with the appeal if they choose to do so. One of several appellants (defendants) died after appeal filed, but before the hearing. An application to have the name of his heir entered on the record as an appellant was rejected as too late. One of the respondents (plaintiffs) also died pending the hearing of the appeal, and an application to enter the name of his heir as respondent was rejected for the same reason. When the appeal came on for hearing, it was dismissed as defective for want of parties. Held, that the proper course for the Appeal Court was to order that the appeal had abated so far as the deceased appellant (defendant) was concerned and to proceed with the hearing so far as the remaining appellants were concerned. Held, also, with reference to the death of the respondent (plaintiff), that the Appeal Court ought to have proceeded under the provisions of s. 368 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), and to have either declared that the appeal had abated as to him and proceeded against the rest of the respondents under s. 544 of the Civil Procedure Code, or else to have directed that the legal representatives of the deceased respondent should be placed upon the record. *CHANDARSANG VERSABHAI v. 21. ———— Death of plaintiff-appellant—Rival applicants for substitution—Order under Civil Procedure Code, ss. 367, 582, substituting one of two applicants—No appeal from such order—Unsuccessful applicants attempting to appeal from final decree on appeal—Civil Procedure Code, s. 591—“Error, defect, or irregularity affecting the decision of the case.” Pending an appeal before the lower Appellate Court, the plaintiff-appellant died, and two persons separately applied to be substituted as the deceased's representative. The Court, applying ss. 367 and 582 of the Civil Procedure Code, decided in favour of one of the applicants and brought him upon the record. No appeal was made against this order by the unsuccessful applicant. The lower Appellate Court decided the appeal adversely to the successful applicant. Subsequently the unsuccessful applicant established by a separate suit that she was the deceased's legal representative, and that her opponent was not. She attempted to appeal to the High Court against the lower Appellate Court's decree dismissing the appeal. Held, that the appellant, not having been a party to the decree below, and the order below having decided that she was not entitled to be a party to the proceedings of the lower Appellate Court, she was not entitled to maintain the appeal to the High Court, and s. 591 of the Civil Procedure

RIGHT OF APPEAL—contd.

Code was not applicable to the case. Har Narain v. Kharag Singh, I. L. R. 9 All. 447, distinguished. Where an order under the group of sections in the Civil Procedure Code relating to representatives has been made excluding a person from the record, that person must seek his remedy by an appeal against the order, and is not entitled to appeal against the decree so long as the order stands. Error, defect, or irregularity within the meaning of s. 591 of the Code means error, defect, or irregularity in procedure or in law, and not in matters of fact. In the present case there was no error, defect, or irregularity within the meaning of the section, and, even if there were, it did not affect the decision of the case in appeal below. SANKALI v. MURLIDHAR. I. L. R. 12 All. 200

22. ———— Plaintiff, amendment of—Adding a defendant in a suit where leave to sue under cl. 12 of the Letters Patent, 1865, was necessary—Alternative liability—Order to add new defendant—Appeal against such order by original defendant. The plaintiff filed this suit against the defendant F alleging that she had a firm and carried on business at Sihore, in the territory of Bhopal. Before the suit was filed, leave was duly obtained under cl. 12 of the Letters Patent, 1865. In her written statement, F denied that she was the owner of the Sihore firm, or that she was responsible for any of its dealings with the plaintiffs. She alleged that the Sihore firm had belonged to her son P, who died in Samvat 1943, leaving a daughter named G, a minor, who was still living. The plaintiff then obtained a summons calling on the defendant F to show cause why the plaint and proceedings should not be amended by adding the name of G as a party-defendant. The summons was made absolute, and an order was made to add G as a defendant. The defendant F appealed, contending that the effect of adding a defendant would be to institute a new suit against G without obtaining the necessary leave under the Letters Patent. She relied on Rampurtab v. Premeukh Chandamal, I. L. R. 15 Bom. 93. Held, dismissing the appeal, that the defendant F could not appeal against the order making G a party. It might be that G might object to the order either before or at the hearing, but she only could take the objection. The defendant F could not take it for her. The case of Rampurtab v. Premeukh Chandamal did not apply. In that case the proposed amendment altered the cause of action. Here it was left unaffected. On the cause of action as set forth in the plaint leave had been given under cl. 12 of the Letters Patent to sue the defendant F, and, so far as she was concerned, there was no objection to the form of the suit. If her allegation was true, G, and not F, was liable. That question would be decided at the trial. FOOLIBAI v. RAMPRATAB SAMRATRAI. I. L. R. 17 Bom. 466

to recover the debt, and made defendants to the suit their assignors, the original debtors, and certain persons whom they alleged to have been prior assignees of the debt, but whose assignment, according to them, had become void through non-fulfilment of the conditions upon which it was made. The Court of first instance gave a decree to the plaintiffs against the original debtors. An appeal by the first assignees was dismissed by the lower Appellate Court, on the ground that, there being no decree against the appellants, their appeal would not lie. On second appeal, it was held that the appeal would lie, inasmuch as the decree, though not a decree against the appellants by name, necessarily implied a finding that the assignment to the appellants, upon the basis of which they resisted the plaintiff's claim, had become void. JAMNA DAS v. 1. ACQUISITION OF RIGHT.(a) PERSONS BY WHOM RIGHT MAY BE ACQUIRED.

1. ——— Cultivating raiyats at fixed rates—Act X of 1859, s. 6—Raiyats holding since permanent settlement at varying rates of rent. Act X of 1859 provided for two classes of raiyats only, viz., those who have held and cultivated the land for a period of twelve years and those who have held at fixed rates from the time of the permanent settlement; it made no provision for raiyats who have held since the time of the permanent settlement at varying rates. Such a raiyat acquired no right of occupancy on that ground. DINOBUNDHOO DEY v. RAMDHONE ROY. . . . 9 W. R. 522

2. ——— Cultivating raiyats—Act X of 1859, s. 6—Sub-lessors to actual cultivators. Only those tenants who cultivate their lands or sub-let them to actual cultivators of the soil were entitled to rights of occupancy under s. 6, Act X of 1859. BINDRABUN CHUNDER CHOWDHRY v. ISSUR CHUNDER BISWAS. . . . W. R. 1864, Act X, 1

3. ——— Act X of 1859, s. 6—Actual cultivators—Raiyats deriving profits directly from produce. The benefits of s. 6 of Act X of 1859 were not restricted to those who with their own hands till the soil, but applied to those who are actual cultivators in the sense of deriving their profits from the produce directly. KALEECHURN SINGH v. AMEEROODDEEN. . . . 9 W. R. 579

4. ——— Permanent cultivator—Paracudi. The defendant's ancestors or predecessors in title were the cultivating tenants of the lands of a certain temple from a date not later than 1827, in which year they were so described in the paimaish accounts. In 1830 they executed a muchalka to the Collector, who then managed the temple whereby they agreed among other things to pay certain dues. They were described in the muchalka as paracudis. In 1857 the plaintiff's predecessors took over the management of the temple from, and executed a muchalka to, the Collector, whereby he agreed among other things not to eject the raiyats as long as they paid kist. In 1882, the dues (which were payable separately) having fallen into arrear, the manager of the temple sued to eject the defendants. Held, that there was nothing to show that the defendants were more than tenants from year to year, and they had not acquired a right of occupancy. Chockalinga Pillai v. Vythealinga Pundara Sunnady, 6 Mud. 164, and Krishnasami v. Varadaraja, 1. L. R. 5 Mad. 345, discussed and distinguished. THIAGARAJA v. GIYANA SAMBANDHA PANDARA SANNADHI. 1. L. R. 11 Mad. 77

5. ——— Holders of land—Act X of 1859, s. 6—Land cultivated by other than raiyat. S. 6 of Act X of 1859 applied to land "held" as well as to land "cultivated," and although a tenant may not have personally cultivated, but may have made over the land to another to cultivate (assuming that by custom he has such power), he still may gain a right of occupancy if he continues to be recognized by the zamindar as the holder of the land. BUTABEE BEGUM v. KHOSH-SHAL. 2 N. W. 24

6. ——— Possessors of raiyati tenure—Test of raiyati interest as distinguished from mere right to collect rent. Per FIELD, J.—The only test of a raiyati interest is to see in what condition the land was when the tenancy was created. If raiyats were already in possession of the land when the interest was created, and the interest was a right, not to the actual physical possession of the land, but to collect the rents from the raiyats, the interest is not raiyati. If, on the other hand, the land was jungle, or uncultivated or unoccupied, and the tenant was let into physical possession of the land, the interest would be raiyati, and the nature of that interest would not be altered by the fact of the tenant subsequently subletting to under-tenants. DURGA PROSUNNO GHOSE v. KALI DAS DUTT. 9 C. L. R. 449

7. ——— Holder of raiyati jote—Act X of 1859, s. 6—Right against purchaser of patni talukh. The holder of a raiyati jote was protected by s. 6, Act X of 1859, and had a clear right of occupancy against the purchaser of the patni talukh fourteen years after his purchase. WOOMANATH ROY CHOWDHRY v. ROGHONATH MITTER. 5 W. R. Act X, 63

8. ——— Persons not holding as raiyats or middlemen—Act X of 1859, s. 6. Persons who are not shown to have held possession of lands, of which they complain they have been illegally dispossessed, as raiyats, or in any other sense than as middlemen receiving rents from the actual cultivators, did not come under s. 6, Act X of 1859, and cannot acquire any rights of occupancy. GOPEE MOHUN ROY v. SIB CHUNDER SEN. 1 W. R. 68

9. ——— Tenant holding a term under a farming lease—Act X of 1859, s. 6. A tenant holding a term under a farming lease of land which he might sub-let is not a raiyat, and therefore did not by twelve years' occupation acquire a right of occupancy under Act X of 1859, s. 6. HURRISH CHUNDER KONDoo v. ALEXANDER Marsh. 479

10. ——— Middleman—Party sub-letting—Act X of 1859, s. 6. The mere fact of a party sub-letting did not make him a middleman excluded from the privileges of s. 6, Act X of 1859. The real question for trial is whether he was or was not a raiyat, or one who held land under cultivation by himself or others who took for him under his supervision as a superior cultivator; or whether he was a middleman because he really did not cultivate in the sense of s. 6, but was a general lease-holder or a speculator in land rent. *RAM MUNGUL GHOSE v. 16. ——— Purchasers from neem howladars—Neem howlas, nature of—Transferable tenures. Neem howlas (even though they may not comprise the right of holding at a fixed rent) and all other such rights of occupancy established by the ancient prescription and custom of the country are transferable tenures. Purchasers from neem howladars are consequently entitled to rights of occupancy. JUGGAI CHUNDER ROY v. RAMNARAIN BHUTTACHARJEE . . . 1 W. R. 126

17. ——— Tenants of temple lands at a specified rent so long as they hold—Occupancy rights, proof of—Tenancy from year to year—Fifty years' tenure—Purakudi. In a suit brought in 1882 by the trustee of a temple to eject tenants upon notice to quit, the tenants pleaded that they were entitled to occupy the lands permanently, and proved that their predecessors had cultivated since 1830. In that year a muchalka had been executed by which the tenants who were therein styled purakudis (a term which does not usually denote tenants with right of occupancy) bound themselves to pay a specified rent so long as they held the lands of the temple. Held, that the tenants had not acquired a right of occupancy, and were merely tenants from year to year. *THIAGARAJA v. 19. ——— Right of occupancy in Assam—Pykes, their rights and privileges. The plaintiff who held land in Assam under a settlement from Government, sued to eject the defendant from certain lands within his holding. It was proved that the defendant was a descendant from one of the pykes who held lands under the Assam Rajas ; that the Assam Rajas granted the pykes to a certain lakhirajdar ; that the pykes held the land in suit as before under the lakhirajdar ; that the lakhiraj was subsequently resumed by Government ; and that the defendant had his house and gardens on the land for a long time, and had paid rent for many years at Government rates. Held, that the defendant was not liable to ejectment. The rights of such tenants explained and discussed. DINABUNDHU SURMA v. BODIA KOCH . I. L. R. 15 Calc. 100

21. ——— Zamindar occupying his own lands—Transfer of zamindari. A zamindar occupying his own lands as nij-jote cannot, when the zamindari passes in to other hands, lay claim to them on the ground that he is a raiyat with rights of occupancy. REED v. SREE KISHEN SINGH

22. ——— Occupant of land rent-free—Beng. Act VIII of 1869, ss. 6 and 22. A party who has been in the occupancy of land without paying any rent is not entitled to the protection of Bengal Act VIII of 1869, s. 6, or of s. 22, even on the ground of right to hold the land rent-free. *KALEE KRISHNA DEB v. 23. ——— Assignee of zamindar—Act X of 1859, s. 6. 24. ——— Person holding as raiyat and as farming tenant—Assignee of landlord's interest. Where a person holding land at first as a raiyat subsequently obtained a farming lease of it, and thus became assignee of the landlord's interests, he was held, at the expiration of the lease, not to have acquired an occupancy right. Where a raiyati interest co-exists with a farming lease, the raiyati interest remains unchanged in character during the currency of the lease. SAVI v. PUNCHANUN ROY

25. ——— Possession as servant—Act X of 1859, s. 6—Possession without payment of rent. Mere possession for twelve years in the capacity of a servant did not create a right of occupancy under s. 6, Act X of 1859, rent must be shown to have been paid so as to make the occupier a raiyat. *WOOMA MOYEE BURMONYA v. 25 W. R. 117

29. ——— Partnership holding a cultivating lease—Indigo concern as a cultivating raiyat—Beng. Act VIII of 1869, s. 6. A firm owning an indigo concern, and carrying on the manufacture of indigo, took, in the collective names of Robert Watson & Co., a cultivating lease of certain lands which they held continuously for more than twelve years; cultivation of these lands being carried out by the servants of the firm and also by sub-tenants. Held, that the lease must be taken to be a lease to the individuals who were at the time of the grant members of the firm, and that under the circumstances of the particular case they had obtained an occupancy right. Quare: Whether a right of occupancy could have been obtained in this case if the whole of the original grantees had died, either before the completion of the twelve years of occupation or after acquiring a right of occupancy; or if it could be obtained, whether such right could, according to the custom of the locality, be transferred to persons subsequently admitted as members of the firm. The test of a raiyati lease is whether the lease has been originally granted for the purpose of cultivation, and if it has been so granted, it is none the less a raiyati lease, though the lessee may happen subsequently to sub-let. *LAIDLEY v. band's estate. An amalnama was granted to the tenants signed by a karpardaz of R in respect of the tenure. R died in January 1861, and was succeeded by J and P, two daughters, the last of whom died on the 31st December 1880. On her death, her grandsons succeeded to the estate. On R's death, J and P got possession of all estate papers, and amongst them a dowl granted by the tenants in return for the amalnama. In 1865 proceedings were taken by the tenants to obtain kabuliats on the footing of those documents, which proceedings came to an end in 1868. In 1873 J and P instituted suits against the tenants, alleging the amalnama and dowl to be forgeries, and seeking to enhance the rents payable to them, as well as to have it declared that R's acts did not bind them. In these suits it was found that J and P had all along been aware of the claim made by the tenants that they held a permanent tenure, and the suits were dismissed on the ground that it was too late for J and P, after the lapse of twelve years from R's death, to raise the question. In 1884 D, a receiver, instituted a suit in the names of the grandsons to eject the tenants on amongst other grounds that the grandsons, reversioners, were not bound by R's acts, and that the jungleburi tenure was not binding on them; that the tenants were middlemen and had no right of occupancy; that at all events the plaintiffs were entitled to rent on the area of land then held by the defendants, as there had been large accretions to the amount covered by the amalnama and dowl. Held, that, being middlemen, the defendants had no right of occupancy, and that, were the suit not dismissed for other grounds, they were liable to have the rent assessed on the whole amount of lands held by them, which was in excess of that covered by amalnama and dowl. DROBOMOYI GUPTA v. 30. (a—s), 178 (3), cl. (a). An agreement made before the passing of the Bengal Tenancy Act between a landlord and his tenant, which bars the acquisition of the right of occupancy during the lifetime of the tenant, does not come within the prohibitory terms of s. 178 (3), cl. (a) of the Act, nor does it come within the terms of s. 178 (1), cl. (a) of that Act. Where before the passing of the Bengal Tenancy Act a landlord entered into an agreement with his tenant and the defendant that the former would hold certain lands under him for her life and that after her death the landlord would take khas possession of them and that her heirs, that is, the defendant or her heirs, would never raise any objection or prefer any sort of claim to them. Held, that it was a valid contract under s. 7, Bengal Act VIII of 1869: that the tenant during her lifetime

31. ——— Land to which addition has been made—Addition creating fresh tenure of whole. Land which is held as one tenure is either subject to a right of occupancy as a whole or it is not subject to any right of occupancy as to any part of it. If the whole land has been held for more than twelve years, then the tenant has a right of occupancy; but if within twelve years the tenant has been allowed to take possession of fresh lands, and such addition was intended to create a fresh tenure, then as regards the whole a right of occupancy has not been acquired, although a portion has been held for more than twelve years. AMAR CHAND LAHATA v. The landlord is still entitled to insist that the land shall be used for the purposes for which it was granted; and although the Court in such cases will be disposed to place a liberal interpretation on the rights of the tenant, it will not sanction a complete change in the mode of enjoyment. LAL SAHOO v. s. 8 of the Rent Act. In 1846 B mortgaged a share in a village together with certain land which was recorded as his sir and which was so described in the deed of mortgage. After the mortgage it ceased to be recorded as his sir, and was recorded as land held by tenants in the same way as other lands in the estate. In 1857 it was leased to S, and in 1863 to H, and from 1863 to 1882 remained in the possession of the last-mentioned lessee. In 1882 B redeemed the mortgage and subsequently brought a suit against H to establish that the land was his sir and for possession of it. Held, by the Full Bench, that there being nothing in terms of the mortgage-deed to indicate that the land was transferred to the mortgagee to be held as sir and the land having ceased to be recorded as the sir of the proprietor, and not having been leased as the sir of the lessor, it had not retained its character as sir when the defendant's tenancy commenced, so as to prevent him from acquiring a right of occupancy therein under the provisions of s. 8 of the Rent Act. Per MAHMOOD, J., that there is nothing in the law to prevent a zamindar from relinquishing his rights in sir land and converting it into land held by ordinary tenants; that the mortgage-deed of 1846 showed that the sir right in the land in suit had been relinquished by the mortgagor; and that the sir land once relinquished by the zamindar ceases to have that character, and cannot prevent the accrual of the occupancy right within the meaning either of s. 6 of Act X of 1859 or of s. 8 of Act XII of 1881. *HARPAL SINGH v. The right of occupancy may thus be acquired during the currency of a usufructuary mortgage and during the period of the mortgagee's possession of the zamindari rights, and the zamindar upon redeeming the mortgage cannot disturb the possession of such occupancy tenants on the ground that, when he mortgaged the zamindari, it was free of such occupancy tenures. *Heeroo v. Act VIII of 1869, ss. 6, 22, and 52. Two conditions only are necessary for the acquiring of a right of occupancy,—viz., (i) the cultivation or holding of land for a period of twelve years; and (ii) that the person holding or cultivating the land should be a raiyat. The essential conditions of s. 6, Bengal Act VIII of 1869, are fulfilled without showing the payment of rent, that only being a condition necessary for the maintaining of the right when created. In a suit brought to evict a tenant who had been in possession of certain land for a longer period than twelve years, when it was shown that rent had not been paid and notice to quit had been given:—Held, that a right of occupancy had been acquired, and that the raiyat had the power to prevent forfeiture under the provisions of s. 52, Bengal Act VIII of 1869. *NARAIN ROY v. In a suit instituted on 8th October 1885 to eject the defendants after notice to quit it was held that, although the defendant had held the land from which it was sought to eject him for less than twelve years, and therefore would not, if the Bengal Rent Act VII of 1869 had been applicable, have acquired a right of occupancy, yet the effect of ss. 20 and 21 of the Bengal Tenancy Act was to give him a right of occupancy, and therefore he could not be ejected. *JOGESSUR DAS v. 68. ——— Holding as ijaradars during lease—Contract for renewal of lease—Beng. Act VIII of 1869 and Act X of 1859, s. 6. By the terms of an ijara (1865) the defendants were entitled at the end of a term of five years to a renewal of their lease of the chur land in dispute, at a rent to be fixed according to the measurement of the land to be made at that time and to the productive powers of the land. Three years after the expiration of the said term a notice was served on the defendants to come to a new settlement with the plaintiff, and in 1874 the plaintiff sued to recover possession. The defendants claimed a right of occupancy acquired under Bengal Act VIII of 1869 or under Act X of 1859. Held, that the defendants' holding as ijaradars prior to and during the lease of 1865 did not create in them a right of occupancy, and that the plaintiff had a right to turn the defendants out of possession at the expiration of the term of five years, except so far as that right was qualified by the stipulation for a renewal; that the defendants at the expiration of that lease had an equitable right to a renewal not exceeding five years, according to the stipulations in the agreement; but that it was too late to rely upon their title to a renewal which, if it had been granted, would now have occupancy for more than twelve years to be a raiyat within the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885, either with occupancy or with non-occupancy rights. Held, that this tenant's holding was excluded from the operation of that Act by the effect of s. 5, sub-s. 5, on account of the extent of the area of the land leased, which was more than one hundred standard bighas. A zur-i-peshgi lease is not a mere contract for the cultivation of the land at a rent, but is a security to the tenant for his money advanced. Two of the leases were zur-i-peshgi, or made on money advanced by the lessee to the lessor. The tenant's possession in this case was, in part at least, that of a creditor operating payment to himself, and was no foundation for a claim for occupancy rights. On the 30th March 1886 he instituted a suit to recover possession, alleging that he had acquired a right of occupancy. It was contended that, owing to the purchase of the share of the proprietary interest, he could not have acquired such right. Held, that under Bengal Act VIII of 1869 there was nothing to prevent such right being acquired by the plaintiff if after his purchase he continued to hold the land as a raiyat and if the relation of landlord and tenant existed between himself on the one hand and the proprietors on the other, and if the period for which he so held extended for twelve years from the date of the commencement of his holding. GUR BUKSH ROY alias GUR BUKSH SINGH v. The zamindari, being sold in 1871 for arrears of Government revenue, was purchased by the plaintiff, who gave B notice to quit, and on his refusal brought a suit to eject him. Held, that, by ceasing himself to hold or cultivate the land, it might be considered that A had abandoned his right, or that the right had ceased. In execution of the decree, the lands were sold to P, who assigned them to the plaintiff. In January 1878 the defendant, as khot, took possession of the land, alleging that B had no right to mortgage; that he had left the village and forfeited his occupancy; that he (the defendant) had thereupon rightfully taken possession of the land in 1878, and that the occupancy had been declared forfeited by the revenue authorities in August 1887, under ss. 86 and 153 of the Bombay Land Revenue Code (Bombay Act V of 1879). 9. ——— Custom or usage, nature of evidence to prove—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885), s. 183, Ill. (1). In suits by a landlord for ejectment of purchasers from raiyats having only a right of occupancy on the ground that the holdings of such raiyats were not transferable without the landlord's consent, the defendants pleaded custom or usage in support of the transfers. Questions arose as to the character of the usage required to be proved in such cases and the nature of the evidence required to prove the usage. In second appeal the High Court (i) upon a review of the previous law on the subject, held, that, however, the law may have been previously declared, as it is now expressed in the Bengal Tenancy Act, s. 183, Ill. 1, a transfer in accordance with usage is valid even without the consent of the landlord. (ii) After applying the principles laid down by the Privy Council as regards evidence of mercantile usages in the case of Juggomohun Ghose v. Manic Chand, 7 Moo. I. A. 263:—Held, that it would be necessary in these cases either to prove the existence of the usage on the landlord's estate or that it is so prevalent in the neighbourhood that it can reasonably be presumed to exist on that estate. (d), sub-s. (3) of s. 178 of the Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1885) that (i) The word "usage" would include what the people are now or recently in the habit of doing in a particular place. (ii) In deciding on the evidence of such a custom or usage, regard should be had to s. 48 of the Indian Evidence Act (I of 1872). (iii) A judgment of the High Court as to the transferability of similar tenures in an adjoining village of the same pergunnah is admissible as evidence of such usage under s. 42 of the Evidence Act. DALGLISH v. GUZUFFER HASSAIN

In the same case after remand it was held that to establish that occupancy holdings are transferable in accordance with local usage, it is necessary to adduce evidence of purchases or transfer by persons other than the landlords made with the knowledge but without the consent of the latter and to which no objection was made by the latter. The words "custom" and "usage" are not synonymous terms, and the same kind of evidence as would be required to prove a custom is not necessary when the existence of a local usage is in question. A long period of time must elapse, before a custom in respect of the transferability of occupancy holdings can grow up: but this is not the case with regard to the growth of usage in respect of the matter. The usage "to which ss. 178 and 183 refer is not restricted to a usage existing at the time of the passing of the Act, but it includes usage which may have subsequently grown up. *DALGLIESH v. 47. ———— Transfer by proprietor in mehal—Ex-proprietary tenant—Act XII of 1881 (N.-W. P. Rent Act), ss. 7, 9. The words of s. 7 of the N.-W. P. Rent Act, "shall have a right of occupancy in the land held by him as sir," are intended by operation of law to confer upon the proprietor who has sold his proprietary rights in a mehal, irrespective of whether he claims it or not, the status of an occupancy tenant, to whom the prohibition of s. 9 will apply. Held, therefore, that where a proprietor in a mehal holding sir land, who is selling his proprietary rights, at the same time transfers all his rights, actual, vested, or contingent, in such sir land, such transfer is one of his right of occupancy in such sir land, and as such is prohibited by s. 9 of the N.-W. P. Rent Act. GULAB ROY v. INDAR SINGH . I. L. R. 6 All. 54

48. ———— Right of mortgagees from tenant—Mortgagees, rights of, in suit for ejectment of tenants. If a zamindar obtains a decree in the Revenue Court for the ejectment of tenants with a right of occupancy who have mortgaged portions of their holdings, it does not necessarily follow that the interests of the mortgagees determine with the rights of the original tenants. Where certain tenants with a right of occupancy mortgaged portions of their holdings, and the zamindar assented to the substitution of the mortgagees for the original tenants in respect of those portions of the holding of which they had respectively obtained possession, it was held that the zamindar could not destroy the interest of the mortgagees in possession by obtaining a decree from the Revenue Court ousting only the original tenants. GOBERDHUN v. 49. ———— Validity of transfer—Rights of mortgagees from tenant—Lease—"Zur-i-peshgi" lease—Act XII of 1881 (N.-W. P. Rent Act), ss. 8, 9. The occupancy tenants of certain land executed a zur-i-peshgi lease in favour of certain persons, by which, in consideration of a sum of money, it was agreed that the latter should have the right of occupying and cultivating the occupancy holding as tenants for a term of years at a nominal rent. In pursuance of this agreement, those persons obtained possession. The zamindar thereupon brought a suit against them for ejectment and to have the zur-i-peshgi lease set aside. Held, by the Full Bench, that the zur-i-peshgi lease was a transfer of occupancy rights within the meaning of s. 9 of the N.-W. P. Rent Act (XII of 1881), and was therefore invalid. Per PETHERAM, C. J.—A right of occupancy means nothing but the right to live on and cultivate land as one's own. Per STRAIGHT, J.—The last sentence of s. 8 of the Rent Act should not be read as declaring that any occupancy tenant may sub-let his land, but that the scope of the proviso is limited to tenants who actually occupy or cultivate land under a written lease, without having acquired a right of occupancy. Hidayatullah v. Rent Act), ss. 9, 93 (b), 149. An occupancy tenant made an usufructuary mortgage of his holding, and afterwards had the land and the mortgage-deed returned to him, and the mortgage was cancelled. Subsequently, the landlord instituted a suit for ejectment, on the ground that by the mortgage the tenant had committed an act inconsistent with the purpose for which the land was let, within the meaning of Act XII of 1881 (N.-W. P. Rent Act), s. 93 (b). Held, by OLDFIELD, J., that, apart from the question whether executing a mortgage of his holding was an act within the meaning of s. 93 (b) of the Rent Act, the mortgage having been cancelled, there was no cause of action left, and the penalty should not be enforced, with reference to s. 149. Held, by MAHMOOD, J., that the occupancy tenure could not be brought to an end except on grounds clearly provided by the law; and the execution of the mortgage, though illegal and void, was not "any act or omission detrimental to the land" or "inconsistent with the purpose for which the land was let" within the meaning of s. 93 (b) of the Rent Act, and furnished no ground for ejectment. Gopal Panday v. Parsotam Das, I. L. R. 5 All. 121, and Naik Ram Singh v. Murli Dhar, I. L. R. 4 All. 371, referred to. Also per MAHMOOD, J.—The terms of s. 93 (b) of the N.-W. P. Rent Act (XII of 1881), s. 93 (b)—Mortgage by ex-proprietary tenant—Act "inconsistent with the purpose for which land was let"—Act XII of 1881, ss. 9, 56. The policy of the framers of the N.-W. P. Rent Act (XII of 1881) was not to protect the interest of the purchaser of proprietary rights, but that of the person whose proprietary rights have been sold, and who has become an ex-proprietary tenant. It would be straining the law, as laid down in s. 93 (b) of the Act, to hold that a mortgage of his holding granted by an ex-proprietary tenant was an act "inconsistent with the purpose for which the land was let" within the meaning of that provision. The words quoted have reference to something which may alter the character of the land, or cause injury to the land and thus to the landholder. In the case of a mortgage by an ex-proprietary tenant, the landholder would not be damaged by being unable, in the event of his rent being in arrear, to distrain the crops grown upon the land by the so-called mortgagee, s. 56 of the Rent Act giving the landholder a right to distrain any crops growing upon the land, by whomsoever grown, in respect of which the arrear arises. Debi Prasad v. In puttidari tenures, in which the lands are divided and held in severalty, each proprietor managing his own lands, there may be lands which come within the classification of sir given in the Rent Act, but they would not seem to be on a different footing from any other land held in severalty by a proprietor. Per BRODHURST, J.—So long as a person is the sole proprietor of a mehal he is not restrained by any law from effecting a sale of his proprietary rights in his sir land, even though he retains possession of the whole of the other lands of the mehal. Per MAHMOOD, J.—That the proprietary rights of a joint co-sharer in his sir land form an essential part of his rights in the mehal; that such proprietary rights in the sir land may be sold, but that the purchaser under such a sale could not obtain any such possession as would operate in defeasance of the ex-proprietary right in such sir land conferred by s. 7 and secured by s. 9 of the Rent Act. *Sahib Ram v. Where an occupancy tenant, under the impression that he was a tenant at fixed rates, sold his holding, and the landholder sued the tenant and his vendee to set aside the transfer as contrary to law, and for possession of the holding:—Held, that the transfer could not be treated as a relinquishment by the tenant of the holding to the landholder, and that the proper decree to make was that the transfer should be cancelled, that the plaintiff was entitled to eject the vendee from the land, but the plaintiff was not entitled to take the holding from the vendor. *KASIM MIAN v. cedure Code, ss. 289, 292—Adducing evidence for the defence—Documents produced for cross-examination of Crown-witness—Practice. In a trial before a High Court or a Court of Session, evidence for the defence cannot be adduced until the close of the case for the prosecution; but counsel for the defence may, while a witness for the Crown is under cross-examination, put documents to him, and if in so doing counsel reads or causes to be read to the Court such documents, he thereby impliedly undertakes to put those documents in as evidence at the proper time. When such documents as aforesaid are filed in Court as evidence, or any other documentary evidence is put in by the defence, the defence has "adduced evidence" within the meaning of ss. 289 et seq. of the Code of Criminal Procedure, so as to give the prosecution a right of reply, though no witnesses may be called for the defence. In a trial at the Criminal Sessions of the High Court during the cross-examination of one of the witnesses for the Crown, counsel for the defence put certain documents to the witness, and these were read to the Court and jury and marked as exhibits as evidence for the defence, and were filed with the record in the same way as the evidence for the prosecution had been marked and filed. During the cross-examination of the next witness a similar course was pursued, and, after the cross-examination had continued for some time, counsel for the defence applied to the Court for a ruling as to whether the fact of documents having been used during cross-examination in the manner above-stated would, under s. 292 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, entitle the Crown to a reply, in the event of the accused not calling witnesses. Held, that although, as a matter of order, such a question would be better raised either when the first document intended to be used in this way was put to a witness or when the accused was asked if he meant to adduce evidence, yet there was nothing in the Code of Criminal Procedure to prevent the Court from deciding the question at any other stage, and that, under the special circumstances of the case, it might be considered then. Held, also, that the use of the documents in the manner above stated gave the prosecution a right of reply. *Queen-Empress v. 3. ————— Suit by zamindar to recover possession of occupancy holding against occupancy-tenant and his alleged transferee in possession—Death of occupancy-tenant after filing of suit but before notice—N.-W. P. Rent Act, s. 9. A plaintiff is not entitled to a decree in his suit unless, by proof or admission or default of pleading, he shows that when he instituted that suit he was entitled to a decree. One K C, a zamindar, sued in a Court of revenue to recover an occupancy-holding from one B S, his occupancy-tenant, and that tenant's transferee, G S, to whom, by a transfer, which was inoperative under s. 9 of Act XII of 1881, B S had purported to make over his occupancy-holding. The occupancy-tenant died after the suit was filed, but before he had received notice of it, and the transferee, being in sole possession of the occupancy-holding, defended the suit. Held, under the above circumstances, that the zamindar's suit must fail, inasmuch as at the time when it was filed he was not entitled to immediate possession of the occupancy-holding. GULZAR SINGH v. KALYAN CHAND

4. ————— Suit for pre-emption—Mortgage. A pre-emptor may sue any time before the expiry of a year from the date of transfer of possession. A mortgagee's absolute right and his claim to pre-emption arise from the time the sale becomes absolute. JANKEE KOORER v. LEKRANEE KOORER

W. R. 1864, 285

5. ————— Suit for pre-emption—Conditional sale. Held, per PEARSON, J. and STRAIGHT, J. (SPANKIE, J., dissenting), that the cause of action of a person claiming the right of pre-emption in the case of a conditional sale arises when the conditional sale takes place, and not when it becomes absolute and therefore, where a conditional sale took place in 1867 and after it had become absolute, a person sued to enforce his right of pre-emption in respect of the property sold, basing his claim upon a special agreement made in the interval between the date of the conditional and the date that it became absolute, and alleging that his cause of action arose on the latter date, that the suit was not maintainable, the plaintiff having no right of pre-emption at the time of the conditional sale. *LACHMAN PRASAD v. tion of a person claiming a right of pre-emption in respect of a mortgage by way of conditional sale arises on foreclosure of such mortgage, that is to say, on the expiration of the year of grace without payment by the mortgagor of the mortgage-money, inasmuch as, on the expiration of such period, the mortgagee acquires a proprietary title to the mortgaged property. Such person can therefore sue to enforce his right of pre-emption on the expiration of such period, and need not wait to do so until the mortgagee has obtained proprietary possession of the mortgaged property. HAZARI RAM v. SHANKAR DIAL

I. L. R. 3 All. 770

7. ————— Conditional sale—Pre-emption—Wajib-ul-urz. On the 12th May 1871 B mortgaged, by way of conditional sale, a share of a village to A, a stranger. Such mortgage having been foreclosed, A sued B for possession of such share, and obtained a decree on the 16th April 1878, in execution of which he obtained possession of such share on the 9th September 1878. On the 1st September 1879 S, a co-sharer, sued A and B, to enforce his right of pre-emption in respect of such share, founding his suit upon the following clause in the administration paper of the village: "When a share-holder desires to transfer his share, a near relative shall have the first right; next the shareholders of the other pattis; if these refuse to take, the vendor shall have power to sell and mortgage, etc., to whomsoever he likes." Held (PEARSON, J., dissenting), having regard to the terms of the administration paper, that a cause of action accrued to S when such mortgage was foreclosed. Per SPANKIE, J., OLDFIELD, J., and STRAIGHT, J. (STUART, C. J., dissenting), that a cause of action also accrued to S when such share was mortgaged by way of conditional sale to A. ALU PRASAD v. SUKHAN

I. L. R. 3 All. 610

8. ————— Suit for pre-emption—Mortgage by conditional sale. The wajib-ul-urz of a village provided that the right of pre-emption should accrue "not only in respect of absolute sales, but also in regard to conditional sales, mortgages and ticca leases." Held, that under its terms the right of pre-emption accrued on a mortgage by conditional sale becoming absolute. The ratio decidendi in Alu Prasad v. Sukhan, I. L. R. 3 All. 610, relied on. The pre-emptor, in the case of a mortgage by conditional sale which has become absolute, is bound to pay as the price of the property the entire amount due on such mortgage at the time it became absolute. ASHIK ALI v. MATHURA KANDU

I. L. R. 5 All. 187

9. ————— First and second mortgages—Dispossession of second mortgagee—Limitation—Interest. Z, being indebted to A, executed in his favour a written mortgage of certain lands, in which it was agreed that, if the debt was not repaid within a fixed time, A should be put into possession of the lands. Subsequently Z executed in favour of P, to whom also he owed money, a second mortgage of the same land subject to the same condition. P, not receiving payment within the stipulated time, sued Z on the mortgage, and obtained a decree for possession of the lands, under which he was put into possession in the year 1846. After P had obtained his decree, A, whose debt had likewise remained unpaid, brought a suit as first mortgagee against Z and P for the possession of the lands, and, obtaining a decree, recovered possession in the year 1847, dispossessing P. In the year 1870, the heirs of Z, having paid off the debt due to A, resumed possession, whereupon the heirs of P applied to be restored to possession in execution of the decree obtained by P in 1846. This application having been rejected on the ground that that decree had been fully executed when P obtained possession under it, the heirs of P instituted a suit against the heirs of Z to recover possession and for interest during the time they were dispossessed. Held, by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee reversing the decision of the High Court, that the heirs of P were entitled to possession on A's mortgage being paid off, and that their cause of action accrued and limitation ran against them from the time when the heirs of Z resumed possession. Held, also, that they were not entitled to a decree for the interest accruing during the time they were dispossessed. *NARAIN SINGH v. ## 2. ACTS DONE IN EXERCISE OF SOVEREIGN POWERS.

1. ———— Suit for damages for refusal of license by excise authorities—Liability of Government—21 & 22 Vict., c. 106—Matter of revenue—21 Geo. III, c. 70, s. 8. The plaintiff, for some years before and up to 31st March 1874, carried on the business of a retail dealer in ganja and sidhi in Calcutta, and occupied for that purpose certain shops and godowns duly licensed under the Government regulations with respect to such sales. The license had to be renewed annually, and might, for sufficient cause, be withdrawn any time within the year which terminated on 31st March. On 4th

March 1874, while the plaintiff was carrying on his business, the Superintendent of Excise for Calcutta put the right to sell ganja and sidhi for the year commencing the 18th April 1874 up to public competition, which was the usual way of distributing the yearly licenses. The sale notification contained a list of the shops with the localities where they were situated, but the right was reserved, in case of combination or for other cause, to transfer, before settlement, any shop from the locality specified to some locality in the neighbourhood; and the conditions of sale were stated to be "that the Collector does not bind himself to accept the highest bid; that the settlement with the accepted auction-purchasers will be contingent on the approval by the police-authorities of the proposed locality of the shop, and the character of the applicant for license: that the person accepted as the auction-purchaser shall deposit at once a sum equal to the license fee payable for two months, and shall at the same time state in writing in what building his shop will be opened, it being understood that the above deposit will be returned to any person whose license is subsequently refused for police reason." At the sale the plaintiff was the highest bidder for the licenses for five shops for the sale of ganja and sidhi, and his bids were recorded; and he also paid the deposit due in respect of the licenses amounting to R968. Subsequently the excise authorities refused licenses to the plaintiff for the five shops, and failed to return the deposit made in respect thereof. In a suit brought by the plaintiff against the Secretary of State in Council for India, in which he alleged that the Government had accepted his bid, and thereby contracted with him to give him the licenses and allow him to carry on his trade in ganja and sidhi, and that by their not giving him licenses and so forcing him to close his godowns and shops they had committed a breach of contract for which he was entitled to damages:—Held, on the evidence per PHEAR, J., that there was no contract between the plaintiff and the Government. Held, also, both in the Court below and on appeal, even assuming there was a contract, that the suit was not maintainable, being in respect of acts done by the Government in the exercise of sovereign powers. Suits such as might, previous to the passing of 21 & 22 Vict., c. 106, have been brought against the East India Company, and subsequently against the Secretary of State in Council, are limited to suits for acts done in the conduct of undertakings which might be carried on by private individuals without sovereign powers. NOBIN CHUNDER DEY v. under cl. B, s. 6, of the Tariff Act, the Governor-General in Council had exempted salt which paid the excise duty at Bombay from liability to pay more than the difference between what was so paid and the import duty leviable under the Tariff Act. While the salt was in transit, the Salt Act of 1877, which raised the import duty to R2-8-0 a maund, came into force. The Collector of Malabar levied 11 annas a maund on the salt imported, in the belief that he was so authorised by law, and his action was ratified by Government. Held, that assuming the Collector's acts to be illegal, a suit to recover the amount so levied would lie against the Secretary of State for India in Council. Held, also, that the payment at Bombay was not a payment of import duty by anticipation, and that the plaintiff was not excused by the notification of the Governor-General from paying the amount levied by the Collector. NOBIN CHUNDER DEY v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA, I. L. R. 1 Calc. 11, dissented from. Held, on appeal, that the acts of State of which the Municipal Courts of British India are debarred from taking cognizance are acts done in the exercise of sovereign powers which do not profess to be justified by municipal law. Where an act complained of is professedly done under the sanction of municipal law and in the exercise of powers conferred by that law, the fact that it is done by the sovereign power, and is not an act which could possibly be done by a private individual does not oust the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts. HARI BHANJI v. 3. ———— Suit for breach of contract by Government to grant proprietary rights in land—Contract entered into or acts done in the exercise of sovereign powers. The plaintiff, in the suit, alleging that the Government had granted him a lease of certain land with the rights of a proprietor, promising to confer on him the proprietary rights in such land if he did certain things; that he had done such things; that the Government had refused to perform such promise and had conferred the proprietary rights in such land on another person, claimed by virtue of the contract between him and the Government, and as against the Government and such person, proprietary possession of such land. Held, per SPANKIE, J., that, assuming that the Government had entered into such a contract with the plaintiff as alleged, the suit would not lie, inasmuch as such contract was entered into, and the refusal of the Government to confer the proprietary rights in such land on the plaintiff, and the grant by it of such rights to such person, were acts done in the exercise of sovereign powers. Held, per STUART, C.J., that the Government had entered into the contract alleged by the plaintiff; that the suit would lie, as the Government had not entered into such contract in the exercise of sovereign

4. ———— Suit to enforce award—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 525. Disputes between the members of a Hindu family were referred to arbitrators who made an award as to how the whole of the property should be divided. In pursuance of the award, part of the moveable property was divided. Subsequently one of the members of the family died. 6. ———— Suit for compensation awarded by punchayet in accordance with caste custom. The plaintiff sued the defendants, his wife and her father (first and second defendants) to recover damages for the non-performance of a contract whereby the defendants agreed to deliver to the plaintiff a specified quantity of grain. The plaintiff and the first defendant appeared before a punchayet composed of members of their caste, and the first defendant having refused to live any longer with the plaintiff the punchayet awarded the compensation claimed, and the defendants promised to deliver the grain. It was found that the award of the punchayet was in accordance with the custom of the caste in cases in which the wife refused to live with the husband. Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to maintain the suit. *SOOBBA TEVAN v. possession of a moiety of certain lands by establishment of the title of the plaintiffs as purchasers and the cancelment of an award of arbitrators, was not barred by s. 9 of Regulation IX of 1833. The award was brought about, not under the Regulation, but owing to an application of the plaintiff for a partition of the share under Regulation VII of 1822, which application was rejected in reference to the award declaring the plaintiff's vendors were not in possession at the time of the sale. It was not necessary that the award should be set aside prior to an adjudication on the claim, as it determined no question of title. If the dispossession of the vendors did not take place at a period more remote than twelve years before the commencement of the suit, the plaintiffs were entitled to a decree for possession on establishment of their right even if there was no sufficient reason to set aside the award. *GUNGA BAKSH v. 2. — Erection of buildings by owners of adjoining sites under agreements with Government—*Government surveyor made arbiter in case of dispute—Party wall, liability of owners for costs of—Suit before obtaining Government surveyor's certificate. Under separate agreements made by them respectively with Government, the plaintiff and defendant held adjoining plots of land for building. The agreements contained the same terms and stipulations among which were the following: "(a) The buildings to be continuous, with party walls common to both adjoining houses. (b) All disputes regarding the cost and maintenance of party walls to be decided by the Government surveyor, whose decision shall be binding on both parties." The plaintiff employed a contractor to erect a house upon his plot of land. The house was completed in 1870, the north wall of which was built as a party wall in pursuance of the condition contained in the agreement with Government. Disputes subsequently arose between the plaintiff and his contractor, which were not settled until the 26th August 1878, on which date the plaintiff paid the contractor a sum of R20,515-4-11, which included the cost of the party wall. After the plaintiff's house had been completed the defendant built his house upon the adjoining land, and in so doing he used a large portion of the party wall as the southern wall of his house. He paid the plaintiff half the cost of the portion so used by him. The rear portion of the said wall was not used by the defendant, as his house did not extend so far to the rear as the house of the plaintiff. The plaintiff demanded payment of half the cost of that part of the wall not used by the defendants, but the defendants refused to pay. The plaintiff then claimed that part of the wall as his own property, and proceeded to open windows in it. The defendants objected. The plaintiff subsequently filed the present suit, claiming from the defendants payment of half the cost of the said portion of the wall not used by the defendants, and in the event of such payment not being awarded, he prayed for a declaration that he was the sole owner of the said portion of the wall, and for an injunction restraining the defendants from disturbing him in the sole enjoyment thereof. Both the defendants pleaded limitation, and denied their liability to pay any part of the cost of that part of the wall which they did not use. The first defendant further alleged that he had paid the whole cost of the foundation and other parts of the said wall and claimed to set off this payment against the claim of the plaintiff. At the original hearing, SCOTT, J., held that the part of the wall in dispute, although not used by the defendants, was a party wall, having regard to the terms of the agreement under which the said wall was erected; and that the suit was not barred, but that there was no right of action for the cost of the party wall independently of the award of the Government surveyor in whose decision lay all disputes as to such cost; and that, until his decision was given, there was no complete cause of action. SCOTT, J., accordingly, on 11th December 1882 decreed that the defendants were severally liable to pay the half of whatever sum the Government surveyor might certify to be due for the cost of the disputed part of the said wall, and that the defendants were entitled to set off, in the calculation of what was due from them, the cost of any work or materials which the Government surveyor might find had been contributed by the first defendant. The case was thereupon adjourned, in order that the certificate of the Government surveyor might be obtained. The Government surveyor subsequently gave his certificate as to the cost of the unused portion of the said wall, but stated that on the evidence before him he was unable to decide as to the ownership of the foundations, etc., of the wall. The case came on again before SCOTT, J., who decided to take evidence on the points left undetermined by the Government surveyor. Witnesses were accordingly examined and on 11th December 1883 the Court disallowed the defendant's claim of set-off, and gave judgment for the plaintiff for half the sum certified by the Government surveyor as the cost of the disputed part of the wall. The defendant appealed. Held, that, having regard to the terms of the agreement under which the plaintiff and the defendants respectively held their property, the Court was not competent to determine the question of the defendant's set-off or the other points raised by the pleadings. These were matters to be decided by the Government surveyor, whose certificate was a condition precedent to the plaintiff's right to sue, and upon which the Court might give judgment. *COVERJI LUDDHA v. In an action brought by plaintiff against defendant as an intruder upon his (the plaintiff's) office:—Held, that the plaintiff's claim to be chavadi of the Lingayet caste at Bagalkot was a caste question within the meaning of the unrepealed portion of cl. 1, s. 21 of Bombay Regulation II of 1827. *SHANKARA v. 9. CHARITIES AND TRUSTS.

1. ——— Suit to recover trust property—Advocate-General—Dedication of lands for charitable use—Illegal sale—Suit to set aside sale and recover trust property—Code of Civil Procedure, 1882, s. 539. The plaintiff's grandfather dedicated certain lands in a village, of which he was the jaghir-dar, to the expense of celebrating an annual fair in honour of a saint, and of lighting a lamp at his shrine. He reserved the paramount authority over, and management of, the said lands to his family, of which the plaintiff was the representative. The lands were sold illegally, as alleged by the plaintiff, to the defendant at an auction in execution of a decree obtained against one N who with his predecessors had, as was alleged, been employed to worship at the shrine. The plaintiff accordingly sought to have the sale set aside, and to be put into possession of the land. Held, that the object of the suit being merely to recover the trust property from outsiders, did not fail within s. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and it could be proceeded with without making the Advocate-General a party to it. LAKSHMANDAS v. He did not allege himself to be interested in the property further or otherwise than as being a Mahomedan. He stated as his cause of action that the defendant had, in a former suit between the same parties, filed a written statement in which he denied that the property now in question was wakf. Held, that, unless it could be shown that the suit was maintainable under some statutory provision, it could not be maintained. Held, also, that inasmuch as no permission had been given to the plaintiff to bring the suit, it was not maintainable under Act XX of 1863 or under s. 539 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held, further, that the suit was not maintainable under the provisions of s. 42 of Act I of 1877 (Specific Relief Act). Held, therefore, that the suit was not maintainable. WAJID ALI SHAH v. Code, 1882, ss. 30, 539. Every Mahomedan who has a right to use a mosque for purposes of devotion is entitled to exercise such right without hindrance and is competent to maintain a suit against any one who interferes with its exercise, irrespective of the provisions of ss. 30 and 539 of the Civil Procedure Code. S. 30 of the Civil Procedure Code applies only to cases in which many persons are jointly interested in obtaining relief, and not to cases in which an individual right has been violated. *Zafaryab Ali v. 8. ———— Suit by members of a caste and worshippers at caste temple against trustees of caste and temple property—Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), ss. 30 and 539—Right to manage caste and temple funds—Public charity—Private charity—Parties—Trustees—Negligence—Wilful default—Acquiescence of majority of caste in unauthorized use of trust funds—Rights of minority. In or about the year 1899 a temple to the god Shri Anoninathji was erected in Bombay by the Dossa Oswall Bania caste, the religion of which caste is the Jain religion. A large portion of the funds required for building the temple was advanced by one N N, at that time the leading man in the caste, the rest was obtained from the caste by subscription. The firm of N N acted as the bankers to the caste and to the temple received, all the gifts and offerings made by the worshippers, and for many years administered all the affairs of the temple. The sums advanced by N N were gradually but entirely repaid to him out of the gifts and offerings. There were three separate funds, of which separate accounts were kept in the books, viz. (i) the darasa fund, which was devoted to the temple purposes, such as maintenance of priests, repairs, etc., and gifts to poorer temples; (ii) the sadaran fund, which was more extended in its objects, but still limited to religious and charitable purposes, such as payments to poor devotees irrespective of their caste, etc., and (iii) the mahajan fund, which was devoted to caste purposes, such as purchase of caste utensils, etc. All three funds were collective at the temple. Gifts and offerings were made by all worshippers at the temple, whether members of the caste or not. Subscriptions were made only by members of the caste. All the regular subscriptions came from the caste exclusively, and the great bulk of the gifts and offerings came from the caste also. Only about R12,000 had been given by outsiders up to the date of the suit, while nearly six lakhs had been given by the caste. N N died in 1842, and his adopted son V became head of the firm which continued to manage the funds of the temple under the name of N V & Co. V died in 1852 and H (defendant No. 1) succeeded him. The firm meanwhile had invested the funds of the temple in eight lots of immoveable property. In 1867 the caste determined to appoint trustees of the temple property, and in September 1867 a trust-deed was executed whereby H, K, and G (defendants Nos. 1, 2, and 3), together with three others who were dead at the time of this suit,—viz., J R, T W, and M T,—were appointed trustees of all the immoveable property belonging to the temple. The deed set forth the objects to which the income of the property should be applied and provided that the surplus should be invested in Government securities, in corporation shares or in landed property, but in no other shares of any description whatsoever. It also authorized the trustees to invest surplus moneys in the firm of V N & Co. It was admitted that, subsequently to June 1869, the trustees managed the temple, and not only the immoveable property, but all the funds. A debt of R2,40,000 was due from the firm of V N & Co. to the temple and caste when the trustees took over the management. In 1870 the firm of V N & Co. became insolvent, and in their schedule the trustees were entered as creditors in respect of darasa account, R1,57,649; on mahajan account R68,017; on sadaran account, R22,597. It was admitted that the trustees knew of this entry in the said schedule. They, however, received no dividend, although other creditors, including K (defendant No. 2), were paid two annas in the rupee. The sum of R2,40,000 due to the temple was wholly lost. In April 1867, R15,000 of the temple funds were invested—it did not appear by whom—in the name of G (defendant No. 3), and in August 1868 a sum of R15,000 was advanced to one J P. In 1869 a sum of R10,000 was advanced by the trustees to N K & Co., which was never repaid, nor was any interest received upon it. It was lost on the failure of that firm in 1879. The principal partner of that firm (N K) was the only son of K (defendant No. 2), who also had an interest in it. In 1877-78 various loans were made by the trustees to three mills in which one or more of the trustees was interested. Of R55,000 lent to the mills and to N K & Co., R42,000 were lost. Half a lakh of outstanding gifts to the temple remained uncollected owing to the negligence of the trustees. Two suits brought by another caste against the trustees were defended out of the temple funds. All the defendants (trustees), with the exception of K, were in needy circumstances. In 1880 a hundred members of the caste protested against the management of caste and temple affairs by the defendants. The plaintiffs, six in number, took part in the protest, and filed the present suit in 1881. Thereupon there was a caste agitation in favour of the defendants, who were all shettias of the caste. A meeting of the caste was held, and a series of resolutions, supporting the defendant's management and approving of their conduct, was passed, and a document to that effect was signed by 1,468 persons—the whole caste in Bombay numbering only 1,500. The plaintiffs sought to make the defendants liable in respect of the moneys lost to the caste and temple funds, and prayed for the appointment of new trustees and for the settlement of a scheme. The defendants denied the charges of negligence, and pleaded that the suit was not properly constituted, not having been brought under s. 30 or 539 of the Civil Procedure Code of 1877, and that it was in contravention of Regulation II of 1827, Ch. II, s. 21. They relied upon the fact that the caste had approved of their conduct and had allowed them to defend this suit at the expense of the caste. They contended that under these circumstances the plaintiffs were not entitled to maintain the suit, and that the Court would not interfere with or control the decision of the majority of the caste in matters relating to the internal management of its affairs. Held, that s. 30 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877) did not apply. If the plaintiffs had any right of action, it was a complete right of action vested in each of them, and not a mere joint right shared with others and incomplete unless they united themselves with others. They sued as subscribers to the temple and devotees of the idol, and as such each had a right to complain of maladministration. They were entitled to sue in their own right and in their own name without permission of the Court or notice to other parties interested. Held, also (following Thanga Karuppa v. Arumuga Nadan, I. L. R. 5 Mad. 383), that s. 539 of Act X of 1877 did not apply. The three funds administered by the defendants were different in character. The mahajan fund was a purely secular fund; the other two funds were religious and charitable fund. Even if the case came under the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 539 would not apply, that section being permissive or directory, and not mandatory. Any person interested in the proper observance of a religious endowment may sue in his own name to have the trust properly administered. The section does not prohibit a private suit, and does not make the sanction of the Advocate-General a condition precedent. The gifts to the temple comprised in the darasa and sadaran funds were irrevocably dedicated to a public charity, and therefore the approval by the caste of the conduct of the trustees was no bar to the suit. They were also dedicated to the idol, who was a public, not a mere private household, divinity. The ideal personality of such an idol is well recognized, and in case of misappropriation of the property he is entitled to the protection of the public authorities, on the ground that it has been devoted to public religious purposes, and must not be wasted even by the donors. The management of the temple belonged to the Dossa Oswall

Bania caste, and not to the whole Jain community. Although the donation were irrevocably dedicated to public purposes, the donors had never lost the right, which was attached to the caste from the beginning, of managing the temple which they had founded, and their management could only be interfered with as a public charitable trust on proof of maladministration. On the evidence:—Held, that the defendants were not liable for losses prior to 1867. It was not clearly proved that they were managers of the temple funds before that date. Held, also, that the defendants were liable for the losses incurred subsequently to 1867. They assumed the management on the execution of the trust-deed in that year, and ought to have taken steps to recover the moneys which had been improperly advanced on loan or otherwise negligently invested. Not having done so, they were guilty of wilful neglect, and were liable to refund the moneys which had been lost. The liability was, however, confined to the first three defendants, it not being proved that the remaining defendants had ever acted as trustees. The negligence of the trustees in not taking steps to recover the R2,40,000 due from the firm of V N & Co. was a clear breach of trust. The evidence showed that, although the whole sum could not have been recovered at any time during the trusteeship of the defendants, yet that some portion of the money might have been obtained if due diligence had been used, and that other creditors of the firm had actually been paid 2 annas in the rupee. The first three defendants were therefore liable to refund 2 annas in the rupee of such portion of the R2,40,000 as belonged to the darasa and sadaran funds. As to the mahajan fund, it belonged to the caste, and the caste had condoned its misapplication, which it had power to do. The defendants were also held liable to refund such other sums as had come into their hands and had been lost in consequence of their negligence. The Court removed the defendants from the trusteeship, and ordered a scheme to be settled. THAKERSEY DEV-RAJ v. HURBHUM NARSEY I. L. R. 8 Bom. 432

9. ——— Suit for possession of endowed property—Religious trust—Charitable trust—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 30, 539—Act XX of 1863. The plaintiff sued to recover possession as mutwalis of certain parcels of land, alleging that they were dedicated as wakf, and that the profits were "applied to the feeding of wayfarers and travellers, to lighting the mosque and shrine in the evening, and to meeting the expenses of repeating prayers on the occasion of Id and Bakhrud, and that the said profits were never spent for personal purposes." The plaintiff based her right to sue upon the fact that her deceased husband had been mutwalli, and she prayed that the property in suit might be declared wakf, and that certain alienations made by her step-son since her husband's death might be set aside. Held, that the trust to which the suit related was one partly for charitable and partly for religious purposes. As far as it related to the former, it was governed by s. 539 of the Civil Procedure Code, and if viewed in the light of the latter, by Act XX of 1863; and that the suit, not being properly framed in compliance with the provisions of either of those enactments, was not maintainable. Held, further, that even supposing the endowment alleged was neither a public charity within the meaning of s. 539 of the Civil Procedure Code nor a religious endowment to which Act XX of 1863 applied, the plaintiff was not entitled to sue alone, as it was clear upon the face of the plaint that she was not alone interested in the subject-matter of the suit, and therefore that she could only sue on behalf of all who were so interested, having first obtained the leave of the Court and otherwise complied with the provisions of s. 30 of the Civil Procedure Code. *LUTIFUNISSA BIBI v. 10. ——— Suit in respect of religious endowment—Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), ss. 30, 539—Beng. Reg. XIX of 1810—Act XX of 1863. In a suit by two of the worshippers at a certain mosque, instituted after having obtained the sanction of the Advocate-General under s. 539 of the Civil Procedure Code, against the mutwalli of the mosque and two other persons to whom the mutwalli had mortgaged part of the endowed property to secure the repayment of a loan, it appeared that one of the mortgagees had sold some of the wakf property in execution of a decree which he had obtained upon his mortgage, and the property had been purchased by the other mortgagee. The plaintiffs prayed that the property purchased might be declared to be wakf; that the sale in execution might be declared to be invalid; that a mutwalli might be appointed by the Court; and that the costs of doing the acts of the work might be defrayed from the profits of the property belonging to the endowment. Held, that, so far as regarded that portion of the prayer which fell within the provisions of s. 539 of the Code, the plaintiffs were not entitled to sue, as they were not "persons having a direct interest in the trust" within the meaning of the section and that the suit should have been instituted under s. 14 of Act XX of 1863 after sanction obtained under s. 18. Held, also, that, though the plaintiffs might possibly have obtained leave to sue under s. 30 of the Code on behalf of themselves and the other persons attending the mosque, they, not having obtained such leave, were not entitled to institute the suit for the purpose of obtaining the relief asked for in the other prayers of the plaint. *JAN ALI v. The plaintiff's ancestor built a temple, a bathing-ghât, a room called "Gu-gajatri ghur," and a ghât close to it, to which persons on the point of death were removed, and certain ceremonies were performed. The defendants used the last mentioned ghât for the purpose of landing goods. Held, that if, when the plaintiff's ancestor erected the buildings, he intended to grant to the Hindu community merely a right of easement over the property, and not to transfer the ownership therein to the community, the plaintiff was entitled to maintain a suit to restrain defendants from using the ghât for trading purposes. *JAGGAMONT DAS v. an idol—Liability of persons in possession of an idol's property—Account—Jurisdiction of Civil Courts in cases relating to public charities—Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877), s. 539—"Direct interest," meaning of. 1. A trust for a Hindu idol and temple is to be regarded in India as one created "for public charitable purposes" within the meaning of s. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act X of 1877). 2. The Hindu law recognizes not only corporate bodies with rights of property vested in the corporation apart from its individual members, but also the judicial persons or subjects called foundations. A Hindu who wishes to establish a religious or charitable institution may, according to his law, express his purpose and endow it, and the ruler will give effect to the bounty, or at least protect it. A trust is not required for this purpose as it is by English law. 3. Those who take charge of gifts made to a religious or charitable institution whether such gifts consist of cash, jewels, or land—incur thereby a responsibility for their due application to the purposes of the institution. They are answerable as trustees would be, even though they have not consciously accepted a trust, and a remedy may be sought against them for maladministration by suit open to any one interested as under the Roman system in a like case by means of a popularis actio. The plaintiffs as relators filed this suit under s. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act X of 1877) against the defendants as trustees of the temple of Shri Ranchhod Raiji at Dakor. The plaintiffs were five in number. The first plaintiff was the hereditary manager of the temple and its appendant villages. The other plaintiffs were priests residing at Dakor, who ordinarily took charge of pilgrims visiting the shrine, and performed worship of the idol on their behalf. The defendants were the shevaks or ministers of the idol—about one hundred and fifty in number—who took office by hereditary descent. They remained in constant attendance on the idol, performed the daily services at the temple, collected all the offerings made at the shrine, and kept them in a bhandar or store-room. The god Shri Ranchhod Raiji was held in great veneration by the followers of the Vaishnava religion throughout Western India. Every full moon thousands of pilgrims resorted to the shrine, and made offerings to the deity of cash, ornaments, clothes, and other articles amounting in value to about a lakh of rupees in the course of a year. Besides these offerings, the temple enjoyed a grant, in perpetuity, of the revenues of several inam villages, of which Dakor and Kangri yielded the largest income. The plaintiffs sued as persons interested in the maintenance of this public religious and charitable institution, and prayed that the Court would make the defendants as recipients of the offerings at the idol's shrine, accountable as trustees, for the right disposal of the property thus acquired. The plaintiffs alleged that the income of the temple had largely increased, and had been wrongly appropriated by the defendants to their personal purposes. They therefore prayed for an account, for the appointment of a receiver, for the removal of the shevaks from their office, and for the settlement of a scheme of future management. The defendants answered (inter alia) that the plaintiffs had not such a direct interest in the institution as to entitle them to sue under s. 539 of Act X of 1877; that they themselves were owners of the idol and of the idol's property, and that as such they were not liable to render an account of the offerings they had collected at the shrine. They also contended that they were not liable to be removed from their offices, which they and their ancestors had held for several centuries past. The District Judge dismissed the suit, on the preliminary ground that, except the first plaintiff, who was a hereditary manager of the temple, the other plaintiffs had not such a direct interest in the charity as to entitle them to sue under s. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act X of 1877). Held, reversing the decision of the District Judge, that plaintiffs Nos. 2—5, as priests residing at Dakor and taking part in the worship of the idol, were directly interested in its due performance and its maintenance. Though they might not be trustees, they were clearly among those who in practice benefited by the execution of the trust. They had thus an undeniable locus standi as relators, and the suit could proceed at their instance. Held, further, that the shevaks were not the owners of the offerings made to the idol. As recipients of those offerings they were responsible for their due application to the purposes of the foundation. They were liable as trustees to render an account of their management. The Court accordingly directed the District Judge (i) to take steps either by appointing a receiver, or otherwise, in his discretion, for guarding the property of the temple; (ii) to take an account of the property and of the receipts and disbursements of the temple; (iii) to make the requisite orders for recovering property appropriated by the shevaks; and (iv) to draw up a scheme for the future management of the temple and its funds, regard being had to the established practice of the institution and to the position of the shevaks and of other persons connected with it. law. The defendants made a gift of land to a hindu temple for the purpose of defraying the expenses appertaining to the idol. The temple was built and the gift made in 1870. The defendants obtained from the revenue authorities mutation of names in the idol's favour and an acknowledgment of the person whom they nominated as agent or manager. The plaintiff, alleging that they had subsequently repossessed themselves of the land and the profits accruing therefrom, and that he was interested as a Hindu in worshipping at the temple, and professing to sue on behalf of the entire body of the worshippers thereat sued for declaration that the land was wakf, and the idol entitled to hold it in his own name; that the defendants should be directed to apply the income of the property to the purposes of the temple, and that the Court should give such orders and instructions as might be necessary and proper for the future management of the temple and payment of income. No sanction to the institution of the suit was obtained under s. 539 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held, by the Full Bench, that the gift made by the defendants constituted a trust for the purposes of the temple. Per EDGE, C.J., and TYRRELL, J., that the defendants before the Court did not constitute themselves trustees in any sense. Held, also, by the Full Bench, that the suit was not maintainable as against those defendants. Per TRAIGHT, J., that the suit was not maintainable under the Hindu Law; that the trust was one for public religious purposes; that such a suit, in which the plaintiff asked to have the trust administered by the Court, could not be maintained without the sanction required by s. 539 of the Code; that assuming s. 539 to be inapplicable, an Act XX of 1863 to apply, the suit could not be maintained without the sanction required by that Act; and that, with reference to s. 30 of the Code, no cause of action had accrued to plaintiff alone on which he could maintain the suit. Per EDGE, C.J., and TYRRELL, J., that if the trust were one for public religious purpose, the suit as against the defendants before the Court must fail for non-compliance with the provisions of s. 539 of the Code and, if for private or quasi-private religious purposes, it must also fail, since there was no principle on which the plaintiff, as one of the public worshipping in the temple, could maintain it against those defendants who were not trustees, but (if they had wrongfully taken possession) trespassers; that Act XX of 1863 could not apply; and that, with reference to s. 30 of the Code, the plaintiff could not maintain the suit alone on his own behalf, or on behalf of himself and others against those defendants. *Jawahra v. 21. Civil Procedure Code (1882), s. 539—Suit to remove a trustee and to recover possession of trust property in the hands of a third party—Limitation Act (XV of 1877), Sch. II, Art. 134—Stat. 52, Geo. III, c. 101—Civil Procedure Code Amendment Act (VII of 1888)—Act XX of 1863, s. 14—Duty of Collector in sanctioning suit—Irregularity not affecting merits of suit—Civil Procedure Code, s. 578. A suit for the dismissal of a trustee and for the recovery of trust property from the hands of a third party to whom the same has been improperly alienated is within the scope of s. 539 of the Civil Procedure Code. Subbayya v. Krishna, I. L. R. 14 Mad. 186, followed. Lakshmandas Parashram v. Ganpatrav Krishna, I. L. R. 8 Bom. 365, distinguished. Art. 134 of the second schedule of the Indian Limitation Act (XV of 1877) applies to such a suit. The difference between the provisions of s. 539 of the Civil Procedure Code and those of 52 Geo. III, c. 101 (Romilly's Act), pointed out. Persons having a right to worship in a temple are within the scope of s. 539. Under that section, as originally enacted, the words were "having a direct interest in the trust," and the word "direct" has been taken out by Act VII of 1888. The inference is that the Legislature intended to allow persons having the same sort of interest that is sufficient under s. 14 of Act XX of 1863 to maintain a suit under s. 539. The Collector, in giving his consent to the institution of a suit under s. 539, has to exercise his judgment in the matter, and see not only whether the persons suing are persons having an interest in the trust, but also whether the trust is a public trust of the kind contemplated by the section and whether there are prima facie grounds for thinking that there has been a breach of trust. But where the form of the permission showed that he had omitted to exercise his judgment in the matter of the interest of the plaintiffs in the trust, such omission was held to be a mere irregularity and within the scope of s. 578 of the Civil Procedure Code. *SAJEDUR RAJA CHOWDHURI v. 22. Charitable endowments—Interest sufficient to support a suit relating to charity. A Hindu, shortly before his death, directed his wife and mother to employ part of his property for the maintenance and upkeep of charitable institution, being a choultry where Japta Brahmans and travellers were fed, and at the same time empowered his wife to make an adoption, declaring that the adopted son should have no interest in the property devoted to the charitable purpose. On his death, the widow and mother executed a document, relating to the property, to give effect to the wishes of the deceased for the benefit of Brahmans; and three years later the widow took in adoption a boy, whose father acquiesced in the deceased man's dispositions. The charitable trust having been neglected and the adoptive son having taken possession in his own right of the lands constituting the

and non-contentious cases. S. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure applies both to contentious and non-contentious cases. The decision of BEST and WEIR, JJ., in Subbaya v. Krishna, I. L. The interest required to enable a person to sue under that section must be an existing one, and not a mere contingency: the mere possibility of an interest or the mere possibility of succession to the managership of the properties concerning which the suit is brought is not sufficient to give a right to sue. The right of worship of each worshipper in a Mahomedan mosque or religious endowment is an independent right wholly irrespective of the right of the other worshippers, and therefore non-compliance by a worshipper with the provisions of s. 30 of the Code of Civil Procedure does not affect a suit for the removal of a trustee of Mahomedan endowment. *Jan Ali v. 27. ———— Public charitable trust—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 539, 15—District Court, jurisdiction of. A church at Palayur and the property appertaining to it were in the possession of certain of the yogakars or parishioners, who had been elected kaikars or church-wardens, but whose election had since been superseded in favour of three other persons, who now sued to recover possession. The plaintiffs were Roman Catholics; and with the three persons above referred to were joined as plaintiffs the Vicar Apostolic, the Vicar appointed to the church by him, and two other persons representing the Roman Catholic yogakars. The defendants were Syro-Chaldean Christians, and with the two persons above referred to were joined the Chor Episcopal, the Vicar appointed to the church by him, and four persons representing the other yogakars. The plaint was framed under the Civil Procedure Code, s. 539, and contained besides a prayer for possession, prayers for declaration that the church, etc., was held on trust for worship according to the faith and discipline of the Church of Rome and for injunctions against the defendants. The suit was tried by the District Judge in whose Court it was instituted, although the defendants pleaded to his jurisdiction on the ground that the Civil Procedure Code, s. 539, was inapplicable. He passed a decree for the plaintiffs, holding that the church, etc., was dedicated to the trust above stated, although it had been diverted from the purpose of that trust for a time. Held, (i) that the suit not being one brought by beneficiaries against trustees, or for any of the purposes mentioned in the Civil Procedure Code, s. 539, that section had no application; (ii) that although the suit should accordingly have been brought in the Subordinate Court, the District Judge had jurisdiction to try it; (iii) that the decree was right, on its appearing that the church, etc., had been held on

28. ———— Suit by trustees to eject persons in wrongful possession of trust property—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 539, 622—District Judge, jurisdiction of—Subordinate Judge, jurisdiction of—Superintendence of High Court. S. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882) has no application to a suit brought by the trustees of a religious endowment to eject persons in wrongful possession of the trust property. The plaintiffs sued, as trustees of a temple, to recover certain trust property from defendants, who were alleged to be in wrongful possession. The defendants pleaded that they were owners of the property in dispute and applied the income thereof for the purposes of the temple; they disputed the plaintiffs' title to the management or possession of the same. The Subordinate Judge, who tried the case in the first instance, held that the defendants were trustees with respect to the property in their possession, and that the suit was one of the nature contemplated by s. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure. He therefore returned the plaint for presentation to the District Judge. This order was confirmed on appeal. Held, that the Subordinate Judge had jurisdiction to entertain the suit. Held, also, that the High Court had power, under s. 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure, to interfere in this case, the Subordinate Judge having failed to exercise a jurisdiction vested in him by law. Held, also, that the suit was one falling under s. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure. *VISHVANATH GOVIND v. 29. ———— Suit by trustees to eject a trespasser from trust property—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 539. D was the manager of a religious endowment called the Chinchvad Sansthan. On his death in 1852, disputes arose between C and G regarding the management of the sansthan, each claiming to be the heir and successor of D. After a long litigation they entered into a compromise in 1881 by which a portion of the sansthan property, consisting of certain inam villages, lands, and varshasans, were assigned to G, and C was left in charge of the rest of the sansthan property, together with all the rights, privileges, and manpans enjoyed by the hereditary trustees of the endowment. In 1886 by a decree made in a suit called the "Charity Suit," C was removed from his office, and the plaintiffs were appointed trustees in his place. In 1889 the plaintiffs filed the present suit to set aside the compromise of 1881 and recover back the sansthan property assigned to G under that compromise. Held, that the suit did not fall under s. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882). *DHUNDIRAJ GANESH DEV v. 1882), s. 539—Property set apart for religious and charitable uses—Trustee—Repudiation of the trust, effect of—Persons having a direct interest in the trust. The plaintiffs sued as relators, under s. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882), to have the defendants removed from the management of a religious endowment, called the "Chinchvad savasthan," on the ground that they had mismanaged and misappropriated the trust funds in their hands. The plaintiffs also prayed for the appointment of new trustees, and for the settlement of a new scheme of management under the direction of the Court. The plaintiffs and defendant were the descendants of Shri Morya Gosavi, the original founder of the savasthan. Shri Morya Gosavi was a devotee of the deity Shri Mangal Murti. He dedicated a temple to the deity at the village of Chinchvad, and established an annachhatra and sadavart for feeding the poor and the destitute. He buried himself alive, and over his tomb a temple was built to perpetuate his memory. The Raja of Satara conferred on his descendants, from time to time grants of lands, villages, and varshasans for the maintenance of the shrine and of the charities connected with it. Votaries of the god Shri Mangal Mutri visited the shrine in large numbers, and took part in the annual festivals and celebrations held in honour of the founder of the savasthan. In course of time the Chinchvad savasthan became one of the most popular sacerdotal institutions of the Deccan. In 1744 the Peshwa made a tahananama (or award) by which he set apart one half of the savasthan property exclusively for religious and charitable purposes, and distributed the other half among the descendants of the founder to provide for their temporal wants. Subsequently to the date of this award, fresh grants were made to the manager of the savasthan by the ruling authorities of the day. In 1774 and 1776 A.D. the new acquisitions were divided on the principal adopted in the Peshwa's award,—one-half being reserved exclusively for the savasthan, the other half distributed among the heirs of the grantee. In 1874 the defendant 1 succeeded to the office of manager and trustee of the savasthan. Within a few years after entering upon his office, the defendant 1, in conjunction with his son defendant 2, incurred heavy debts, mortgaged several villages belonging to the savasthan, and dealt with the savasthan income as if it was his own absolute property. The plaintiffs filed the present suit with the consent of the Advocate-General in 1883. The defendants pleaded (inter alia) that the property in suit was not burdened with a public religious or charitable trust; that they were not trustees, but owners, of the savasthan; and that the plaintiffs had not such direct interest in the property as to entitle them to sue under s. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The District Judge, who tried the case, found that the savasthan was a public religious and charitable institution; that the defendants were trustees in charge of the savasthan property, and that they were guilty of such gross misconduct as to make them unfit to act as trustees in future. He therefore passed a decree, directing the defendants to be removed from their office as trustees, appointed a new trustee in their place, and framed a scheme for the future management of the savasthan. Held, on the evidence, that the management of the Chinchvad savasthan—consisting of the sacred shrines at the villages of Chinchvad, Moregav, Theur, and Sidhateks with their endowments—constituted a public religious and charitable trust within the contemplation of s. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held, also, that the plaintiffs, being worshippers and devotees of the god Shri Mangal Murti and being also descendants of the original founder of the endowment, had a direct interest, in the trust, entitling them to sue under s. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Held, further, that the defendants' assertion of their right to treat the trust property as their private estate and to apply the trust funds to their private purposes was sufficient to justify their removal from the trust. Held, further, upon the construction of the Peshwa's tahananama (or award), that it was the intention of the governing power in 1744 A.D. that thenceforth the Chinchvad savasthan—consisting of the shrines at Chinchvad, Moregav, Theur, and Sidhatek—should constitute a public devasthan; and that in setting apart a moiety of the property for the savasthan, the object was to provide a fund for the support of the four shrines and the expenses of the customary festivals, as well as of the annachhatra established at Chinchvad. 32. ———— Public charitable trust—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 539—Consent of Advocate-General. Two out of five trustees appointed by a will to administer a public charitable trust brought this suit against the remaining three trustees praying (i) that the first defendant might be ordered to account for a specific sum of money of which it was alleged he had committed a breach of trust; (ii) that the first defendant might be removed from the office of trustee, and some other person appointed in his stead; and (i i) for such other or further relief as the nature of the case might require. The consent in writing of the Advocate-General to the institution of the suit under s. 539 of the Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882) had not been obtained. Held, that the suit.

33. ——— Suit to eject one claiming to be the jheer of a muth—Civil Procedure Code, s. 539. Three disciples of a muth brought a suit, with the consent of the Advocate-General under s. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure, alleging that the defendant was in possession of the muth under a false claim of title as the successor to the late jheer, and praying that it be declared that he was not the duly appointed successor to the late jheer, and that an appointment to the vacant office of jheer be made by the Court. Held, that the Civil Procedure Code, s. 539, was inapplicable to the suit. STRINIVASA AYYANGAR v. STRINIVASA SWAMI . I. L. R. 16 Mad. 31

34. ——— Suit to remove a mohunt—Civil Procedure Code, s. 539—Trust for "public religious purposes." Two plaintiffs instituted a suit, on behalf of themselves and 42 other persons named in a schedule to the plaint, against a mohunt of an akhra, to have certain alienations of property belonging to the idol set aside and the mohunt removed on the ground that he was wasting the idol's property and setting up an adverse title to it, and to have another mohunt and trustee of the property appointed in his place. The plaintiffs alleged that they and the 42 others named in the schedule were in the habit of worshipping the idol or of contributing to the worship and expenses of it, but it was clearly established by the evidence that any Hindu who chose was at liberty to give puja or render service and worship, and that others than the plaintiffs and the 42 persons named in fact did so, and that the plaintiffs and the persons named were therefore not the only persons interested in the suit. The suit was one to which the provisions of s. 539 of the Code applied, the suit being one based on the existence of a trust for public religious purposes and upon a breach of that trust and for the appointment of a new trustee, and being such should have been dismissed, not having been brought in the District Court or with leave of the Collector. *SAJEDUR BAJA v. 35. ——— Suit to trustee—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 30, 539—Public charity. The trustee of a temple sued to recover, from the representatives of the trustee of a fund constituted for special purposes in connection with the temple worship, a sum of money misappropriated by him and to obtain the appointment in his place of himself or some other fit person. The plaintiff obtained leave to sue under Civil Procedure Code, s. 30, but no sanction had been obtained under s. 539. Held, that the suit was maintainable. S. 539 was intended to apply only to persons who, before its enactment, had, or were believed to have, no right to take proceedings for the purposes mentioned in the section. *NELLAIYAPPA PILLAI v. 36. ——— Suit for a declaration that a certain piece of land is a grave-yard—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 539. Held, that a suit for a declaration that a certain piece of land was a grave-yard dedicated to the use of such persons as had no grave-yards of their own, and asking the Court to appoint a mutawalli and settle a scheme for the management of the grave-yard, was not such a suit as fell within the purview of s. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure. *Lakshmandas Parashram v. 37. ——— Suit for ejectment of a jeer of religious institution as being illegally appointed—Prayer for appointment of a new jeer—Elective office. The jeer of a muth died in 1888, and the defendant assumed office as his successor. The plaintiffs, who were disciples of the muth asserting in the plaint that the office of the jeer was elective, but without having held an election, brought a suit to eject the defendants and to have a new jeer elected or appointed by the Court and placed in possession of the properties of the institution. It was alleged both that the defendant had not been duly appointed to be jeer and also that he was disqualified for that office by immorality and otherwise. Held, that the suit was not maintainable. SRINIVASA SWAMI v. RAMANUJA CHARIAR . I. L. R. 22 Mad. 117

38. ——— Public religious and charitable trust—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 539—Hindu temple, with a dharmashala and sadavart attached to it—Liability of constructive trustee—Suit to remove trustee—Limitation. A Hindu built a temple in honour of the deity Shri Pandurang, to which were attached a dharmashala and a sadavart for feeding travellers and giving alms to the poor. For the maintenance of the temple and the charities connected with it, he dedicated certain property by a deed of gift, under which he constituted himself a trustee for life and appointed a panch to act as his successors in the trust. During his life-time he managed the temple as provided in the deed. On his death in 1867, the panch did not take charge, but his son (the defendant) assumed the management. The temple was open to the Hindu community. In 1894 the pujari of the temple and five other worshippers of the idol filed this suit, under s. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure, with the sanction of the Advocate-General, for removing the defendant from the management of the temple on the ground of his misconduct and mismanagement of the trust property. The defendant pleaded (inter alia) that the property was not a public religious and charitable trust, that he was not a trustee, that the plaintiffs had no right to sue, and that the suit was time-barred. Held (i) that, having regard to the fact that a certain number of the public had always used the temple, that there was attached to it a dharmashala, and that the surplus funds not required for the service of the temple were to be applied to feeding travellers and maintaining a sadavart, the intention of the founder was to devote the property to public religious and charitable purposes; (ii) that although the defendant was not appointed a trustee, yet by taking charge of the endowment and purporting to manage it as temple property he made himself a constructive trustee, and was liable, as such, to the beneficiaries; (iii) that the plaintiffs were entitled to maintain the suit under s. 53 of the Code of Civil Procedure; (iv) that the suit was not time-barred as with every fresh breach of the constructive trust or whenever the direction of the Court was deemed necessary a fresh cause of action arose. *JUGAL KISHORE v. 4. ————— Suit for a receipt for goods as being partners' goods—Suit for dissolution of partnership. Plaintiff and defendant entered into a contract with a view to trade, by which each was to contribute a certain sum either in cash or goods. A trading concern was opened accordingly, but after a very short time the parties fell out. Defendant then obtained through the Magistrate the return of certain goods which, as he alleged, he had placed with the plaintiff independent of the partnership speculation. Plaintiff thereupon sued for a declaration that the goods were partnership goods and to obtain a receipt for them as such. Held, that there was no cause of action, and a suit for a receipt did not lie. In the absence of books and accounts or any other evidence, the suit could not be converted into one for dissolution of partnership. ELIJAH v. ARATOON BROTHERS. 14 W. R. 47

5. ———— Suit on agreement to take over decrees—Subsequent compromise by payment of fixed sum. Plaintiff took a patni from defendants, and as a part of the consideration of the lease agreed to be responsible for certain decrees outstanding at the time against the defendants. Thereupon was executed a second contract between the parties, by which that particular responsibility of paying the decrees was compromised and got rid of by plaintiff paying down a certain sum of money. Subsequently, the defendants successfully contested payment of one of the decrees, after which plaintiff sued to recover the money of which payment had been thus withheld. Held, that, as the second contract had absolved plaintiff from all responsibility as regards the decrees, he was not entitled to recover the money claimed in the suit. SREENATH CHOWDHRY v. GREY . 13 W. R. 114

6. ———— Suit to set aside patni granted in breach of agreement. Where the proprietors of a mehal had agreed with an ijaradar that in the event of their granting a patni to any body he should have the refusal, and, notwithstanding their agreement, gave a patni to another ijaradar:—Held, that the latter, having been no party to the stipulation, was not bound thereby, and that a suit would not lie by the first ijaradar to set aside the patni granted to the second. KOMUL LOCHUN DASS v. DWARKANATH CHOWDHRY 10 W. R. 254

Held, however, on review, that where A, taking a patni to the prejudice of B, had notice of an agreement existing between B and the zamindar, he could not in equity maintain the lease which he had obtained, but B would be entitled to relief against him, and the case was remanded to try if A took with notice of the agreement with B. DWARKANATH CHOWDHRY v. 7. ———— Suit on agreement not to mortgage or sell except after offer to plaintiff—Right of pre-emption—Hypothecation, suit to recover property after. The plaintiff alleged that certain property was the hereditary property of himself and his brother N; that it had been determined by an award that if the plaintiff or N desired to mortgage or sell their respective shares they should, in the first instance, mortgage or sell to one another, and, if one party declined to take on mortgage or purchase, that the other should be at liberty to alienate elsewhere; that N had, however, executed a bond in favour of R, in which he had hypothecated the property and stipulated that the debt should only be recoverable from the property hypothecated; that N had confessed judgment in a suit brought against him by R on the bond, and had allowed a decree to be passed against the property; and that, as the bond had the effect of a deed of sale, and had been executed with an intent to defraud him, he sued to obtain possession of the property and a declaration of his title thereto as purchaser. The lower Courts decreed the plaintiff's claim. R, on special appeal, pleaded that the plaintiff had no cause of action, the property not having been sold. Held by PEARSON and SPANKIE, J.J., that the mere hypothecation of the property did not give the plaintiff a title to it as purchaser, and that the suit as brought must be dismissed. Held by STUART, C.J., that as the plaintiff stated matter sufficient to enable the Court to consider the validity of the claim made by the suit and on the facts and merits to do justice between the parties to the award, the objection to the form of the suit ought not to stand in the way of the plaintiff being decreed his rights under the award. PIRTHEE SINGH v. 8. ———— Suit to recover loan for Government revenue due from zamindari—Suit against zamindar for debt—Beng. Regs. of 1781 and 1787. When money was borrowed to pay the revenue due from a zamindari, and paid to the Government on that account, the bond given by the vakils and managers of the zamindari to the trustee for the lenders in the English form, for the purpose of enabling them to enforce the personal engagements of the vakils and managers in the Supreme Court, was held not to deprive the lenders of their right, under the law prevailing among the natives in matters of contract, to sue the zamindari in the Courts of the mofussil. Held, also, that the laws of 1781 and 1787 were repealed by the laws of 1796 when this action was brought, and there was nothing in those two former Regulations which made it illegal for the zamindar to contract a debt, or for any other native to take an obligation from a zamindar without the consent of the officers of revenue; but that such an obligation, if founded on a valuable consideration, would be equally binding upon the conscience of the zamindar, and the demand and the payment would be equally legal as if such consent had been obtained and registered, though no Court of justice might have jurisdiction to enforce the right. GOPIMOHUN THAKOOR v. 9. ———— Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), ss. 10, 11—Contemporaneous "ikrarnamah"—Condition restraining alienation—Restriction repugnant to interest created—Lambardar and co-sharer—Collection of rents by co-sharer—Suit by lambardar for money had and received. M, a co-sharer in a village, transferred to A, another co-sharer, a 2 annas share by deed of sale. Upon the same date A executed an ikrarnamah, in which he agreed that he would not collect the rents of the 2 annas transferred to him, that he would not ever demand partition of that share, and that he would not alienate or mortgage it or otherwise exercise proprietary rights over it. It was further provided that in the event of A committing any breach of covenant the sale should be avoided, and the proprietary rights in the 2 annas share should revert in M. A suit was subsequently brought by M

upon the allegation that, in breach of the covenants of the ikarnamah, A had collected the rents of the share; that, in consequence of his action in collecting the rents, the plaintiff had been compelled to sue the tenants; that in these suits the tenants exhibited receipts given by A on the basis of which the suits were dismissed; and that he had been subjected to various costs and expenses. He therefore claimed by way of damages from A certain sums of money realized by A as rent from the tenants, and further, by reason of the ikarnamah, to avoid the sale-deed which preceded it. Held, that provisions of this kind, which absolutely debar the person to whom the proprietary rights have passed from exercising these rights, impose conditions which no Court ought to recognize or give effect to; that a covenant in a sale-deed, the effect of which is to disable the vendee from either alienating or enjoying the interest conveyed to him is not only contrary to public policy, but in violation of the principle of ss. 10 and 11 of the Transfer of Property Act; and that therefore, as the agreement on the basis of which the plaintiff asked for relief was one which no Court should assist him in enforcing, the suit must fail. *Holman v. The plaintiff, who had established his right to the moneys collected under the certificate, then brought his suit on the security-bond to recover the amount so collected. Held, that the plaintiff, not having obtained an assignment of the indemnity bond from the District Court, was not entitled to sue the surety. *MAYAN v. 14. ——— Suit by assignee of contract for damages for non-delivery—Assignment of contract—Plea that assignment of contract was a sham—Sham assignment—Fraud—Right of third party to question bonâ fides of assignment—Assignment by deed—Demand for delivery—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 93. On the 25th December 1886 the defendant contracted to deliver to the plaintiff on the 26th May 1887 one hundred bales of cotton at R196 per candy. On the 28th February 1887 the plaintiff assigned this contract to one K, and a few days afterwards, viz., on the 7th March 1887, he became insolvent. In his schedule there was no mention of this contract, or its assignment, or of the receipt of any consideration for the assignment. K, as the beneficial assignee of the contract, subsequently called on the defendant to give delivery of the goods, and offered payment of the price; but the defendant, who was then aware of the plaintiff's insolvency, refused, on the ground that K was not a bonâ fide assignee of the contract for value and that the assignment was a sham, and was not intended to pass the beneficial interest in the contract. A suit was then brought against the defendant by K claiming damages for breach of the contract. This suit was dismissed, on the ground that the assignment of the contract was fraudulent. The plaintiff knew of the dismissal of K's suit in 1887, but had never himself made any demand on the defendant for the performance of the contract. On the 6th November 1889 the plaintiff's petition in insolvency was dismissed for non-prosecution, and on the 18th November 1889 K re-assigned the contract to the plaintiff. The plaintiff then sued the defendant to recover damages for breach of the contract. He contended that his assignment to K though in fraud of the

Official Assignee and the creditors of the insolvency was not in fraud of the defendant, and that by the dismissal of his petition the parties, as to their rights and liabilities under the contract, had been relegated to the position which they occupied prior to the plaintiff's insolvency. Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover damages from the defendant. There had been no demand for delivery by the plaintiff, or on his account, as required by s. 93 of the Contract Act. K had asked for delivery as beneficial owner, but the property had not passed to him by the assignment; and although the defendant would be bound to recognize an assignee who could establish his title of full ownership in the contract, he was under no obligation to recognize K when, as a fact, the beneficial interest in the contract still remained in the plaintiff, with whom the defendant had originally contracted. In England, where there has been an assignment by deed, the assigned property passes by force of the deed, and it cannot be impeached at law by the assignor or by third parties other than creditors, on the ground of its not being a real transaction; but where the assignment is not by deed, the true nature of it as a sham may be proved. In India it is in all cases open to third parties to show that such was the case. MULJI GOVINDJI v. NATHUBHAI HIRACHAND

15. ——— Suit by assignee—Assignment of contract—Novation of contract—Contract Act, s. 62—Contract for forward delivery. The defendant was sued by the plaintiffs as assignees of one S for differences on certain contracts of purchase and sale of cotton and seeds. The defendants contended that the contracts in question were not assignable without his consent, which had never been asked for nor given, and that the plaintiffs could not therefore maintain the action. Held, that the objection was a good one. An assignment of a contract (as distinguished from a debt or other chose in action), to be effectual, must amount to a novation, and requires the assent of the other party to the contract (s. 62, Contract Act, IX of 1872). The defect, however, was allowed to be cured by adding S as a plaintiff. The legal effect of the endorsement and handing over of such contracts considered. TOD v. LAKHMIDAS PURSHOTAMDAS

16. ——— Compromise of decree, effect of—Mode of enforcing agreement of compromise—Reciprocal promises—Form of decree—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 51. A decree for partition having been compromised by an agreement made by the parties, and communicated to the Court which passed the decree:—Held, that the effect of the decree was extinguished by the agreement, which could only be enforced by a fresh suit, and not by an application for execution of the former decree. An agreement, consisting of reciprocal promises to be performed by the plaintiffs and the defendant, can be sued upon by the plaintiffs when they have not refused to carry out their promises, though they may not have put an allegation in the plaint saying that they are ready and willing to do so, s. 50 of the Indian Contract Act being no bar to such a suit. When the plaintiffs are entitled to ask for the performance of the part of the contract in which they are interested, and the defendant claims execution of the whole, to which the plaintiffs do not object, the Court ought to pass a decree directing execution of the whole contract, instead of rejecting the claim. *HARI RAGHUNATH JOSHI v. The first defendants, G and A, were co-owners of a forest. G mortgaged his interest in the forest to the plaintiff and put him into possession. The mortgage was registered. Subsequently G and A joined in a license to the second and third defendants to cut and take wood in the forest, which the latter accordingly did. The plaintiff sued G and the other two defendants to recover as damages, the value of the wood removed, and for an injunction restraining the defendants from removing more wood. Held, that the claim would not lie, neither for the whole of the damages claimed nor for such part of them as was equivalent to G's interest in the value of the wood removed,—the only remedy open to the plaintiff being a suit against A, his co-tenant, for an account. Though G, being out of possession to the knowledge of the licensees, could convey to them no right, yet A could; and a license from A gave a right to cut wood in the whole of the forest, since a co-tenant may lawfully enjoy the whole property in any way not destructive of its substance so as to amount to an ouster of the other co-tenants, and whatever a co-tenant may do himself he may license another to do. The licensees therefore did no wrong in acting on their license, and no suit lay against them; nor did G's joining in the license do the plaintiff any distinct injury for which an action for damages would lie against him. Quære: Whether plaintiff might not, however, have a right of action against G to recover any sum which G had

3. ——— Suit by one co-parcener against the others for declaration of right to Government allowance forming part of joint estate. One member of an undivided family cannot sue his co-parceners for a declaration that he is entitled to recover the whole of a family varshasan. The only mode in which, as between the members of the joint family, a declaration of right to the varshasan can be properly obtained is by one of the co-parceners bringing a suit for partition of the whole of the family estate, including the varshasan and for a declaration of the shares of the respective co-parceners. *TRIMBAK DIXIT v. 4. ——— Suit to recover share of produce—Property left undivided at partition—Amendment of plaint—Suit for partition—Variance between pleading and proof. A claim to a share of the produce of the property left undivided at a partition does not lie, because such a claim is based on the right to a particular share in the property itself which has no existence in the case of an undivided family. A suit for a share of the produce of the property left undivided at partition cannot be amended, by making it a suit for partition, without entirely changing its character. *GAVRISHANKAR PARABHURAM v. 4. ——— Suit to recover costs incurred in former proceedings in Court having jurisdiction. An objection to the attachment and sale of a house which was advertised for sale in execution of a decree for enforcement of lien was allowed, upon the ground that the objector had purchased the house from the mortgagor, and his purchase was not subject to the decree, to which he was not a party. The decree-holder then brought a suit against the objector, claiming a declaration of his right to recover the amount due under his decree by enforcement of lien against the house, and that the order releasing the property from attachment should be set aside, and also to recover the costs incurred by him in the execution department on the defendant's objection. Held, that, inasmuch as where a Court, having jurisdiction, orders or refuses costs, a separate action for such costs cannot be brought, the plaintiff was not entitled to recover from the defendant the costs incurred by him in the execution department. *Mahram Das v. ## 15. CUSTOMARY RIGHTS.

1. ——— Suit to restrain the use for tazias of land used for the purposes of the Holi—Easement—Cause of action. A, a Mahomedan, purchased a house adjacent to a piece of waste land, on which after such purchase he caused a tazia to be erected at the time of the Mohurram. J and others, Hindus, instituted a suit against A, alleging in their plaint that for a long time previously they had been in the habit of going upon the land at the time of the Holi festival for the purpose of burning the Holi and celebrating the ceremonies incident thereto, and praying that the defendant "be restrained from improper interference, and that the plaintiffs be put in possession, by maintaining observance of the Holi rights, according to the ancient usage, on the land." It was found that the plaintiffs had, for a period of twenty years prior to the institution of the suit, exercised the right of going on to the land at the time of the Holi festival, without interruption or interference. It was also proved that neither the plaintiffs nor the defendant had any proprietary right in the land, and that it belonged to the zamindars of the kasba who did not appear to object to its use by the defendant and other Mahomedans at the time of the Mohurram, for the erection of tazias. Held, that the plaintiffs' claim appeared to be a claim to a right by custom of the nature described in Mounsey v. Ismay, 34 L. J. Ex. 52, and Abbot v. Weekly, 1 Lev. 176, and could not strictly be regarded as for an easement, the right not being set up in respect of any dominant tenement to which it was appurtenant over a servient tenement subject to it. Held, further, that, inasmuch as the nature of the right claimed was to come on the land for a few days at one period of the year, it by no means followed that the plaintiffs were entitled to object to the defendant's use of the land at another period; and that, looking to the extent and nature of the said right and to the form in which the plaint was shaped, the laying of a tazia upon the land at the Mohurram could not be held to be any interference with such right sufficient to afford a cause of action on which to come into Court. *ASHRAF ALI v. land, and the plaintiff sued for an injunction restraining them from exercising this right in future:—Held, that the right of burial claimed by the defendants was not an easement, but a customary right, which being confined to a limited class of persons and a limited area of land, was sufficiently certain and reasonable to be recognized as a valid local custom. MOHIDIN v. ERLANDI 5 Mad. 147

5. ——— Suit for right to use ghât for religious purpose—Abstract right—Cause of action—Costs. A Hindu brought a suit in which he alleged that the Hindu community had acquired by long-established custom an exclusive right to use for religious purposes a ghât situate on the River Ganges, but that the Mahomedans were in the habit of interfering with the exercise of such right by bathing at the ghât. He prayed for a declaration of the right, and for a perpetual injunction to be issued to the Mahomedans generally forbidding them to resort to the ghât. No act of trespass was charged against any of the defendants. The defence was that the Mahomedans were entitled to use the place, and that their use of it did not cause any inconvenience to the plaintiff. Held, that the suit was not maintainable, since the Court had no power to pass a decree against persons who had never interfered with the property in dispute, or to issue an injunction against the whole Mahomedan world: but that, inasmuch as the defendants had fought the case all along as if the suit were maintainable and upon a false issue, both sides must pay their own costs. *SHAH MUHAMMAD v. 1. ———— Suit by debtor to compel creditor to accept money due—Suit on bond—Refusal to accept instalments on bond. A bond having been executed, whereby it was stipulated that a debt should be paid by instalments, subject to the condition that, if any one instalment were not paid within a certain time after it became due, the whole amount remaining due should become payable at once, the creditor evaded the debtor's attempts to pay the instalments as they became due, and the debtor brought a suit to compel the creditor to accept an instalment due. Held, that such a suit would not lie. KRISTAYA v. KASIPATI I. L. R. 9 Mad. 55

2. ———— Agreement in subsequent deed to pay balance due on a prior document, gives no fresh right of suit, when previous obligation not discharged. Where a promissory note had been executed by the defendant in favour of the plaintiff and some time afterwards the defendant by another document assigned certain decrees to the plaintiff and the document provided that the amounts realized by executing the decrees should be credited towards the amount due on the promissory note and that the defendant should pay any balance that may remain due after the decrees had been realized, but the original promissory note had not been cancelled or returned to the defendant or otherwise discharged:—Held, that the plaintiff's only claim was on the promissory note and that the subsequent document conferred no fresh right of suit, and that the plaintiff's suit brought after the expiry of the period of limitation for a suit on the promissory note was barred. Barker's claim, [1894] 3 Ch. 290, referred to and applied. VENKATARAMIAH PANTULU v. 3. ———— Joint creditors—Succession Certificate Act (VII of 1887)—Pleading—Indian Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 45. It is open to one of two joint creditors to maintain an action for recovery of the debt if the other creditor is joined as a co-defendant and if there is good ground for not joining him as a co-plaintiff. Where plaintiff brought a suit for recovery of a debt due on a bond executed in favour of him and another person who had died before the suit and whose successor (who was alleged to have assigned to the plaintiff her share of the debt) was made a party defendant: Held, that, although no succession certificate to collect the debt of the deceased joint creditor was produced, the suit was maintainable at any rate as to the share of the plaintiff. The High Court in remanding the case directed that the successor of the deceased joint creditor who had not been properly served with notice of the suit, should be so served, and that on her expressing her desire to be joined as co-plaintiff, she should be so joined and opportunity given to her to produce a succession certificate, and that on the production of the same a decree for the entire amount should be passed. SHITAL CHANDRA BAIRIGEE v. The plaintiff proved by the evidence of the defendant himself that he was in possession of immoveable property of the deceased out of which the decree could be satisfied. 15. ——— Insufficiency of immoveable property to satisfy decree. A suit may be brought in the High Court of Bombay upon a judgment obtained in the Court of Small Causes of Bombay. The execution of the decree in such suits is rigorously confined to immoveable estate. The ground of the interference of the High Court in such cases is that practically the judgment-creditor could not recover his debt except by process against the immoveable estate of the debtor. In such cases the plaintiff must contain an averment and the plaintiff must establish to the satisfaction of the High Court that there is not any sufficient moveable property of the defendant against which the decree of the Court of Small Causes can be fully executed, and that he has immoveable property situated within the original jurisdiction of the High Court against which execution can be had. The plaintiff applied under s. 108 of the Civil Procedure Code to set aside the decree. His application was rejected, but he did not appeal from this order. The plaintiff then sued to set aside the decree and the sale in execution, on the ground that he had no interest in the land, in respect of which the arrears of rent were alleged to be due, and the decree and sale had been obtained by false returns of summons and of processes in execution, and were fraudulent and void. The defendant objected that the plaintiff, having applied under s. 108 without success, and not having appealed from the order rejecting his application, had no right of suit in the Civil Court: Held, that the suit was maintainable. *RADHA RAMAN SHAHA v. Judge rejected the application on the ground that the pleader had the requisite authority. The plaintiffs obtained rules from the High Court against this order, but they were discharged. Plaintiffs now instituted a fresh suit in the Court of the Subordinate Judge praying that the compromise and the decree made thereon be set aside on the ground that the pleader had no authority to compromise and that the terms of the compromise went outside the subject-matter of the suit. Held, that in order to have the compromise-decree set aside it was open to the plaintiffs to proceed either by way of suit or by an application for review, the latter being the more regular mode of procedure. Ashootosh Chandra v. Tara Prasanna Roy, I. L. R. 10 Calc. 612, followed. That the effect of the discharge of the rules issued by the High Court was to leave the order of the District Judge undisturbed. That the question regarding the pleader's authority to compromise was directly and substantially in issue in the proceeding for review and was heard and finally decided by the Court of the District Judge, which was a Court of jurisdiction competent to try the present suit. The suit in consequence is barred by the rules of res judicata. Koylash Chandra De v. Tarrack Nath Mandal, I. L. R. 25 Calc. 571; Bhagwanbuttee Chowdhurain v. A. H. Forbes, I. L. 5. ——— Máns, suit for right to—Perpetual injunction against invasion of these máns—Right to worship—Small gifts by presents of rice, cocoanuts, vida, and venison attached to such máns, how far considered as emoluments. The plaintiffs and the defendants, as members of a family of Ganvkars, claimed to be entitled to certain máns consisting of the right to be the first to worship the deity on certain occasions, and to receive gifts of rice, cocoanut, and vida and venison made by the priest on certain religious ceremonies and other occasions. The plaintiff, being obstructed by the defendants in the enjoyment of the máns, sought to obtain a perpetual injunction against the defendants. The Court of first instance dismissed the plaintiff's claim as being one for mere dignities unaccompanied with emoluments, and as such not cognizable by a Civil Court. The plaintiff thereupon appealed, and the lower Appellate Court reserved the lower Court's decree, and granted a perpetual injunction against the defendants, prohibiting them from interference with the plaintiff's enjoyment. On appeal by the defendants to the High Court:—Held, restoring the decree of the Court of first instance, that the plaintiff's suit was not maintainable. The máns were mere dignities to which no profits or emoluments were attached. The trifling gifts made by the priest of rice, a cocoanut, and vida, on the occasion of worshipping the deity, and of a piece of venison on other occasions, could not be regarded as emoluments, being merely symbols of recognition and marks of respect of and to the holders of the máns. *Rama v. did not belong to either party, but that all the inhabitants of the mohulla had from time immemorial exercised a right of way over it to and from their houses. It also appeared that on a part of the same land there had formerly stood a thatched building used as a "sitting place" by the residents of the mohulla. Held, that the right which was alleged to have been obstructed was not a public right of way, but a right which was confined to the people dwelling in the mohulla and going to and from the houses in the mohulla; and that the suit being brought in respect of an interference with a private easement, was maintainable without proof of special damage. *Karim Baksh v. ## 22. ENDOWMENTS, SUITS RELATING TO.

1. ——— Suit by a dharmakarta disaffirming the acts of his predecessor—Act XX of 1863, s. 7—Mad. Reg. VII of 1817, s. 12—Suit to set aside lease granted by former dharmakarta of temple—Limitation—Cause of action. The plaintiff, who had been appointed in 1886 by the Sub-Collector to be dharmakarta of a Hindu temple, for which no committee had been appointed under the Religious Endowments Act, s. 7, sued in 1886, to recover possession of land demised to the defendant on a perpetual lease in or about 1856 by a previous dharmakarta, who died in 1885. Held, that, Madras Regulation VII of 1817 having been repealed as regards Hindu temples by Act XX of 1863, the appointment by the Sub-Collector gave the plaintiff no right to sue: accordingly, it was necessary to determine the question whether he had such right apart from that appointment. Held, that, assuming he had such right, the plaintiff, since he did not derive title through his predecessor in office (the grantor of the lease), would be entitled to disaffirm his acts and could maintain the suit. The cause of action arose, and the period of limitation would therefore run not from the date of the lease, but from the date of the accession of the plaintiff to his office. MAHOMED v. GANAPATI. I. L. R. 13 Mad. 277

2. ——— Suit by a trustee of a devasom disaffirming the act of his predecessor—Adverse possession—Limitation. The trustee of a Malabar devasom, who had succeeded to his office in June 1883, sued in 1887 to recover for the devasom possession of land which had been demised on kanom by his predecessor in February, 1881, on the ground that the demise was invalid as against the devasom. The defendant had been in possession of the land for more than twelve years, falsely asserting the title of kanomdar with the permission of the plaintiff's predecessor in office. Held, (i) the suit was not barred by limitation; (ii) the plaintiff was entitled to maintain the suit for the purpose of recovering for the trusts of the devasom property improperly alienated by his predecessor. Suppammal v. The Collector of Tanjore, I. L. R. 12 Mad. 387, distinguished. VEDAPURATTI v. VALLABHA I. L. R. 13 Mad. 402

3. ——— Suit by dharmakarta of temple to recover temple property—Religious Endowments Act (XX of 1863), s. 12. The right to bring suits for the recovery of the property of a religious or charitable institution is vested in the trustee or manager of such institution, unless he is precluded by any special law from exercising it. There is nothing in the Religious Endowments Act to take away such powers. S. 12 relates only to the rents of property transferred by Government to the committees of such institutions. SANKARA MURTI MUDALIAR v. CHIDAMBARA NADAN

4. ——— Suit to prevent Committee under Act XX of 1863 from illegal interference—Decision as to validity of testamentary paper. The khaleefa of an endowment having, by a will or testamentary paper, appointed a successor, and given various directions respecting the endowed property, sent a copy of the paper to the Committee appointed under Act XX of 1863 for their information. The Committee having thereupon expressed their opinion that the document was of no effect, the khaleefa sued "to prevent the Committee from illegal interference, and to reverse their order respecting the will." Held, that such a suit was not maintainable and that no legal cause of suit appeared. HISAM-OD-DEEN KHAN v. KHALEEFA UNWAR-OOLLAH. 2 N. W. 400

5. ——— Alienation of wakf property—Suit to set aside such alienation—Mahomedan Law—Wakf—Mutawali—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 539. Plaintiffs sued to recover possession of certain lands, alleging that they had been granted in wakf to their ancestor and his lineal descendants to defray the expenses for, or connected with, the services of a certain mosque ; that their father (defendant No. 3) and cousins (defendants Nos. 4 and 5), who were mutwals in charge of the said property, had illegally alienated some of these lands, and had also ceased to render any service to the mosque, whereupon they (the plaintiffs) had been acting as mutwals in their stead. They therefore claimed to be entitled, as such, to the management and enjoyment of the lands in dispute. It was contended (inter aliâ) that the plaintiffs could not sue in the lifetime of their father (defendant No. 3), he not having transferred his rights to them. Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to sue to have the alienation made by their father and cousins set aside and the wakf property restored to the service of the mosque. They were not merely beneficiaries, but members of the family of the mutwals, and were the persons on whom, on the death of the existing mutwals, the office of mutwali would fall by descent, if, indeed it had not already fallen upon them, as alleged in the plaint, by abandonment and resignation. Wakf property cannot be alienated, and any person interested in the endowment can sue to have alienations set aside and the property restored to the trust. Per RANADE, J.—As a suit for possession, the suit was defective in form, and could not be maintained. It was a suit for partition of a moiety of the lands, and the owner of the other moiety was not a party. The suit was, however, really a suit for a declaration that the lands were the inam property of the mosque, and, as such, was not liable to alienation for the private debts of defendants Nos. 3, 4, and 5. The plaintiffs were entitled to sue for such a declaration, although they could not obtain actual possession. They were beneficiaries and had a right to sue under s. 42 of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1877). When a suit is brought to set aside an alienation made to a stranger, such a suit by the worshipper at a mosque or temple can be maintained, and does not fall within s. 539 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). That section is only applicable where there is an alleged breach of trust created for a public, charitable, or religious purpose, and the direction of the Court is necessary for the administration of the trust. As against strangers, s. 539 does not apply. HASSAN v. SAGUN BALKRISHNA

23. ENHANCEMENT, NOTICE OF.

Suit to set aside notice of enhancement—Act X of 1859, ss. 13 and 14. Where notice of enhancement of rent has been served under s. 13, Act X of 1859, upon a raiyat who has no right of occupancy, and whose rent has not been fixed by agreement with his landlord, such raiyat cannot maintain a suit to set aside the notice of enhancement. His remedy, in case the rent is excessive, is under s. 14. MOHEEM v. RAHEEMOT-OOLLAH . . . Marsh. 341 : 2 Hay 433

RIGHT OF SUIT—contd.*24. EXECUTION OF DECREE.

1. ——— Suit after adverse order in execution—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 283. S. 283 of Act X of 1877 enables a party against whom an order has been made in execution proceedings to bring a suit to establish his rights, whatever they may be, but it says nothing as to the nature of the suit or the Court in which it is to be brought. Whether the party is to sue in the Civil Court or in the Small Cause Court depends entirely upon the nature of the claim and the right which is sought to be enforced. A person whose goods are illegally sold under an execution does not lose his right to them, though he may have claimed them unsuccessfully in the execution proceedings. He may follow them into the hands of the purchaser or of any other person, and may sue for them or their value without reference to anything which has taken place in the execution proceedings. SHIBOO NARAIN SINGH v. MUDDEN ALLY. NATABAR NANDI v. KALI DASS PALI

2. ——— Order striking off objection to attachment—Suit for damages for wrongful attachment—Suit to establish right—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 283. An order striking off an objection to the attachment of property attached in execution of a decree for default of prosecution is not "conclusive," as regards the right which the objector claimed to the property, within the meaning of s. 283 of Act X of 1877. Held, therefore where a person objected to the attachment of certain moveable property attached in execution of a decree, claiming it as his own, and his objection was struck off for default of prosecution, that such person might sue for damages for the wrongful attachment of such property without suing to establish the right which he claimed thereto. *KALLU MAL v. 3. ——— Objection to attachment by judgment-debtor on behalf of others—Order against decree-holder—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 244, 278, 279, 280, 281, 282, 283. Where a judgment-debtor claims property which is the subject-matter of attachment, either on his own account as his own property, under whatever right, or as the representative of third parties, in which capacity he has been sued, the question between him and the attaching creditor is properly one between the parties to the suit under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. But where the judgment-debtor raises the claim or objection on behalf of third parties who are not represented before the Court, the order passed thereon must be regarded as an order under s. 280 of the Code, and the only mode in which that order can be contested is in a regular suit as provided by s. 283. In execution of a decree against a judgment-debtor in his private capacity, the judgment-creditor attached certain property. Thereupon the judgment-debtor objected that the property attached had been dedicated by him some time previously as wakf under a registered wakfnamah, and that he was only in possession as mutwali under the deed. The lower Court found that the document created a valid wakf, and allowed the objection and released the property from attachment. The judgment-creditor appealed. At the hearing of the appeal it was contended that no appeal lay, inasmuch as the order was one under s. 280 of the Civil Procedure Code. On behalf of the judgment-creditor it was contended that the order was one under s. 244, and was thus appealable. Held, that the order was one under s. 280, and that no appeal lay, the remedy of the judgment-creditor being by way of regular suit as provided by s. 283. 4. ————— Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 280-283—Judgment-debtor, suit by, to establish title to property the subject-matter of claim in execution-proceedings. A judgment-debtor is not necessarily a party against whom an order is made within the meaning of that term as used in s. 283 of the Code of Civil Procedure so as to preclude his instituting a suit after the lapse of one year from the date of such order (the period of limitation prescribed by Art. 11, Sch. II, Act XV of 1877) to establish his title to, and to recover possession of, the property which has been the subject-matter of a claim in execution-proceedings, and in respect of which an order has been made under s. 280 of the Code. 5. ————— Money-decree against mortgagor—Sale of equity of redemption by mortgagor—Mortgaged land attached and sold in execution—Claim by purchaser of equity of redemption—Civil Procedure Code (Act VIII of 1859), s. 246—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 278 to 283. In 1870 B mortgaged to N, with possession, a certain piece of land. On 17th June 1871 M and T obtained a money-decree against B. On 9th March 1872 the defendants bought from B his equity of redemption. In July 1872 M and T attached the land in execution of their decree. The defendants objected to the attachment under s. 246 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act VIII of 1859), but on investigation of their claim an order was made disallowing their claim on the 23rd December 1872. In June 1873 the defendants paid off the mortgage-debt and were put into possession by the mortgagee. In October 1873 M and T put up the land for sale in execution of their decree, and the plaintiff became the purchaser. On seeking to obtain possession, the plaintiff was resisted by the defendants, whose claim was allowed by the Subordinate Judge after inquiry. The plaintiff therefore brought this suit under s. 335 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). The Lower Courts rejected his claim. On appeal to the High Court:—Held, that where, under s. 246 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act VIII of 1859) or the corresponding sections (278 to 283) of the Civil Procedure

Codes of 1877 and 1882, an order has been passed against any person making a claim to property under attachment, such person may bring a suit to establish his title to the property within one year from the date of such order; but in default of his bringing such suit within the prescribed time, he is precluded from asserting his title against the auction-purchaser, whether as plaintiff or defendant. In the present case an order had been passed against the defendants under s. 246 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1859, on the 23rd December 1872; and as they had brought no suit within a year from that date, they could not now contest the plaintiff's title to the property. The defendants, however, having, since date of the said order, paid off the mortgage:—Held, that it would be contrary to justice, equity and good conscience for the Court to assist the plaintiff in obtaining possession unless he paid the defendants the amount paid by them to the mortgagee to free the property from the incumbrance. 6. ————— Decree against father—Family property attached—Objection by sons—Release of sons' shares—Suit to contest order of release—Cause of action. Certain land, the property of an undivided Hindu family, having been attached in execution of a decree against the father upon a bond, whereby the said land was hypothecated to secure the repayment of the debt, the sons intervened, objecting to the attachment of their shares in the said land, and their shares were released from attachment. The decree-holder then sued the sons to have it declared that their shares were liable to be sold in execution of the decree against the father. Held, overruling Chockalinga v. Subbaraya, I. L. 7. ————— Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 283—Hindu law, Alienation—Mitakshara—Mortgage by father—Liability of sons not made parties. The L Bank advanced money to C, a Hindu, governed by the Mitakshara school of law, upon mortgage of ancestral property. S, who has stated to be C's only son, joined in the mortgage. Subsequently the Bank obtained a decree against C and S for the amount due on the mortgage. On attempting to sell the mortgaged property, other sons of C objected. This objection was allowed, and the mortgagees referred to a regular suit. They then sued all the sons of C to establish their lien on the mortgaged property. Held, that the suit was maintainable under s. 283 of the Civil Procedure Code. *Nuthoo Lall Chowdhry v. 10. ———— Suit to stay execution of decree—Suit to stay execution against certain property until judgment-creditor had proceeded against other property—Res judicata—Suit for land—Jurisdiction—Letters Patent, cl. 12. One K C was entitled to a share in pergunnah Alumpore. Before he obtained possession, Government revenue on the whole estate fell due. K C failed to pay his share, and his co-sharer K, to save the estate, mortgaged her share of the estate to one H B and with the amount so borrowed paid the whole sum due, and subsequently sued K C for the amount, eventually obtaining a decree. Subsequently this decree became vested in one R, and the pergunnah Alumpore came into the possession of one K G, who in 1874 took an assignment of the mortgage executed by K in favour of H B. The plaintiffs also alleged that since the execution proceedings had commenced they had discovered a secret arrangement made in 1877 between K G, R, and H B, by which it was agreed that R should not execute the decree against Alumpore, but would release K G from all liability in respect of the charge on that property, and in consideration K G executed a patni lease to H B of a portion of Alumpore at a small rent. R obtained an order for execution against the property of K C, and, having transferred his decree to the High Court, proceeded to enforce the decree against the plaintiff, the widow of K C, and her son by attaching the family dwelling-house in Calcutta. The widow and son then brought this suit against K G, R, and H B to have the share of K C in Alumpore ascertained, and praying for a decree calling upon K G to pay the amount of the value of the share of Alumpore in satisfaction of R's decree. Held, that the suit could not be maintained so far as it attempted to make the decree a charge against Alumpore. Held, on appeal, that the suit was rightly dismissed; that, as far as R was concerned, it had already been decided that R was entitled, if he so chose, to execute his decree against the Calcutta property; and that therefore that question was res judicata; and that, as regards the plaintiff's claim that the patni given by K G to H B should be treated as part-payment to R, such a question could only be decided in execution proceedings; that the mere existence of the agreement between K G, R, and H B did not entitle the plaintiff to join them as co-defendants in the suit; and that, as far as K G was concerned, the suit brought against him could only be treated as a suit to establish a charge or lien on land out of Calcutta, and therefore the Court had no jurisdiction to try it. KRISTO MOHINEE DOSSEE v. KALIPROSONO GHOSE . I. L. R. 8 Calc. 402

11. ———— Execution against a person not the legal representative—Deceased judgment-debtor. The defendants, along with N and C, had brought a suit against one A in the Civil Court at Peshawar in the Punjab, and obtained a decree on the 23rd July 1878 for Rs. 30,745-12. In 1881 application for transfer of the decree to the Court at Moradabad for execution was made, and it was granted, but no steps were taken thereupon. On the 12th June 1883 A died. On the 30th April 1884 the defendants again applied to the Court at Peshawar treating their judgment-debtor as being then alive for a fresh certificate to execute their decree in the Moradabad district, and obtained it. On the 20th of August 1885 they made an application to the District Judge of Moradabad for execution of their decree, and in it it was stated that the application was "for execution against A, and after his death against A L, the own brother, and D K, widow, and L P and others, sons of A, residents of Kundarki, and the said A L, at present residing at Umbala and employed in the Commissariat Transport Department, judgment-debtors." It was further stated that "the judgment-debtor is dead, and his heirs are living and in possession of his estate, and A L himself has realized Rs. 9,637-4-9 due to the deceased judgment-debtor from the Commissariat Department of Calcutta and appropriated the same, therefore to that extent the person of the said A L is liable." Notification of this application was issued to A L, as also to the other persons named therein. A L objected to the application as against himself, stating that, although he was the brother of A, deceased, yet he always lived separate and carried on business separately; and that there was no connection or partnership between him and the deceased judgment-debtor, and that he had no property of the deceased in his possession. Further that, as A left issue, it was wrong to call him heir to A, and take out execution-process against him. In reply to these objections, the judgment-creditors (defendants) did not contend that A L was the legal representative of the deceased judgment-debtor, but treated him as a person in possession of a sum of money belonging to the deceased, and therefore liable to the extent of the sum so received by him. The Subordinate Judge, holding that A L was the brother of the deceased and had realized the amount from the Commissariat Office, which he failed to prove that he paid to the deceased, ordered execution to proceed against him. A L then instituted this suit to set aside the order of the Subordinate Judge. It was contended, first, that the suit was in effect a suit under s. 283 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and therefore barred as not having been brought within a year from the order of the Subordinate Judge; and secondly, that the proceedings of the Subordinate Judge were held under s. 244 of the Code, and therefore no separate suit would lie. Held, that the first contention must fail, inasmuch as an essential condition precedent to a suit under s. 283 of the Code is the making of an attachment of some property; of objection being taken to such attachment; of investigation being made into such objection; and lastly, of its being allowed or disallowed, and these did not exist in this case. The second contention also must fail, as the Subordinate Judge never treated the proceedings in execution against A L upon the footing that he was the legal representative of the deceased judgment-debtor. Mahomed Aga Ali Khan v. Balmukund, L. R. 3 I. A. 241; Nadir Hossain v. Bepin Chund Bassarat, 3 C. L. R. 437, were referred to. ANGAN LAL v. GUDAR MAL . I. L. R. 10 All. 479

Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 13, 108, 244, and 311. The plaintiff having applied unsuccessfully under ss. 108 and 311 of the Civil Procedure Code to set aside an ex parte decree against him and the sale of his property in execution thereof on the ground of fraud, and without preferring an appeal against the order rejecting his application under s. 108 of the Code, instituted this suit praying for the same relief. The Subordinate Judge dismissed the suit as not maintainable. Held, that such a suit was maintainable, and that ss. 13 and 244 of the Civil Procedure Code were no bar thereto. The fact that his application under s. 108 was unsuccessful, and that he did not appeal against the order rejecting that application, did not disentitle him from prosecuting his remedy by suit on the ground of fraud. Abdul Mazumdar v. Mohomed Gazi Chowdhry, I. L. R. 21 Calc. 605, approved. Held, also, that, when there is an appeal against a decision, the effect of not appealing is that the decision holds good for what it is worth: so far as concerns any other modes of relief available, the person not appealing is in no worse position than if he had appealed and failed. *Raj Kishen Mookerjee v. 3. ——— Suit in Recorder's Court to set aside for fraud decree obtained in Small Cause Court—Perjury. Where a decree has been obtained by a fraud practised on another, by which that other has been prevented from placing his case before the tribunal, which was called upon to adjudicate upon it, in the way most to his advantage, the decree is not binding upon him and may be set aside in a separate suit, and not only by an application made in the suit in which the decree was passed to the Court by which it was passed. But it is not the law that because a person against whom a decree has been passed alleges that it is wrong, and that it was obtained by perjury committed by or at the instance of the other side (which is fraud of the worst description) that he can obtain a rehearing of the questions in dispute in a fresh suit, by merely changing the form in which he places it before the Court, and alleging in his plaint that the first decree was obtained by the perjury of the person in whose favour it was given. In this case a suit brought in the Court of the Recorder of Rangoon to set aside a decree of the Court of Small Causes at Rangoon on the ground that it had been obtained by fraud was held under the circumstances of the case to be not maintainable. *MAHOMED GOLAB v. against A and others, and in execution of that decree certain lands of the judgment-debtors were sold and were purchased by a third party. Subsequently, at the instance of A, the said ex parte decree was set aside on the ground of non-service of summons, and the original suit was restored, but that was dismissed for default, as the then plaintiff did not proceed with it. An application was then made by A to set aside the sale on the ground of fraud which was rejected, because the auction-purchaser was not made a party to the proceedings. A then brought a suit for declaration of title to a portion of the land sold and for confirmation of possession, challenging not only the sale, but also the decree, on the ground of fraud. The defence mainly was that, regard being had to the provisions of s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code, the suit was not maintainable. Held, that, although there was no decree to be actually set aside, the plaintiff was entitled to show that the decree under which the sale was held was obtained by fraud as against him, and that therefore the suit was maintainable. *Abdul Mazumdar v. In a suit to set aside an ex parte decree and a sale in execution of such decree, as illegal, fraudulent and collusive, the allegations made in the plaint were clearly an attack, not on the regularity or sufficiency of the service of summons or the proceedings, but on the whole suit in which the ex parte decree was obtained, as being a fraud from beginning to end. Held, that the suit was maintainable, notwithstanding that the plaintiff had been unsuccessful in applications under s. 108 and s. 311, respectively, of the Civil Procedure Code to set aside the ex parte decree and the sale in execution, and had not appealed from the orders rejecting such applications; the questions in the suit as a whole being such as could not have been determined on applications under those sections. *KHAGENDRA NATH MAHATA v. a decree passed by any other Court of concurrent jurisdiction, where the cause of action has arisen either wholly or, in case the leave of the Court has been first obtained, in part, within the local limits of its Ordinary Original Civil jurisdiction. Allen v. Macpherson, 1 H. L. Cas. 191, referred to. The Original Side of the High Court is a Court, within the meaning of s. 11 of the Civil Procedure Code, and there is no enactment barring its jurisdiction to entertain a suit to set aside, on the ground of fraud, a decree passed by another Court of concurrent jurisdiction, if the suit complies with the provisions of s. 17 of the Civil Procedure Code. Queen v. Saddler's Co., 10 H. L. Cas. 404, and Rajib Panda v. Lakhan Singh Mahapatra, 3 C. W. N. 660, referred to. Where a beneficiary brought an administration suit, which sought incidentally to set aside certain leases, which the executors of the estate had granted to themselves, of lands situated without the jurisdiction of the Original Side of the High Court: Held, that the suit was not a suit for land, and that the Original Side of the High Court had jurisdiction to try it, and, further the defect, if any, would be cured if leave of the Court was previously obtained. *Prosunno-moyee Dassi v. ## 27. FRESH SUITS.

1. ——— Suit after dismissal of suit instituted in incompetent Court—Act XXII of 1872, effect of—Decrees made before Act came into operation. No provision of Act XXII of 1872 sets aside decrees passed by Appellate Courts before the date on which it came into operation, or restores decrees of the Court of first instance which had been annulled by the Appellate Court; nor is there any provision which debars a plaintiff whose suit has been dismissed on the ground of its institution in a Court incompetent to receive it, from re-instituting his suit in a competent Court. CHOONEE LALL v. KUDHAIRA. 6 N. W. 34

2. ——— Suit for possession after failure to obtain it in execution—Auction-purchaser, suit by, for possession—Execution proceedings—Possession, application for, by auction-purchaser—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 318. A suit by an auction-purchaser to obtain possession of land, the subject-matter of his purchase, will lie when it is shown that an attempt has been made to obtain possession in execution proceedings, and that such attempt has been unsuccessful. In the case of Lalit Coomer Bose v. Ishan Chunder Chuckerbutty, 10 C. L. R. 258, it was not intended to hold that, under no circumstances would such a suit lie, but that, so long as the means provided by s. 318 of the Civil Procedure Code are open to a purchaser, he is bound to have recourse to that section rather than to bring a fresh suit. ISWAR PERSHAD GURGO v. JAI NARAIN GIRI

3. — Suit to obtain possession of land sold in execution of a decree—Possession, application for, by auction-purchaser—Execution proceedings—Subsequent suit for possession of land sold in execution of decree. In execution of a decree certain land belonging to the judgment-debtor was sold; subsequently the auction purchaser, who had not got possession, resold the land to a third party and give him the certificate. The latter then applied to the Court to be put into possession, but having failed in those proceedings, owing to some irregularity in the description of the boundaries of the property, he instituted a regular suit against the judgment-debtor to obtain possession. On a plea that such suit would not lie, as the plaintiff could have got possession in the miscellaneous proceedings:—Held, that, having regard to the provisions of Art. 138 of Sch. II of Act XV of 1877 and of s. 11 of Act XIV of 1882, such suit was maintainable. SERU MOHUN BANIA v. BHAGOBAN DIN PANDEY . I. L. R. 9 Calc. 602

4. — Obstruction to execution of decree—Merger of cause of action—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 328. S A, R, and S B were members of an undivided Hindu family. S B died, leaving him surviving several sons. Subsequently S, R, and M, the eldest son of S B, mortgaged the family house to the plaintiff. In 1877 the plaintiff brought a suit on the mortgage against S, R, and M, and obtained a decree for possession of the house until payment of the mortgage debt. In execution of this decree he was obstructed by the widow and B and L, other sons of S B, but the Court on 14th January 1879 overruled their objections and directed possession to be given to the plaintiff. On 28th January 1879 the plaintiff complained that he was prevented from obtaining possession of one of the rooms in the house; B appeared and admitted that he had locked up the room and he refused to give up possession, contending that he was not bound by the mortgage, as he was not at the time joint with M and the other sons of S B, and that the loan was not one required for family necessity. The plaintiff's application was dismissed. In 1882 the plaintiff brought a suit against B, in which he prayed for a decree giving him possession of the room on the terms of the decree in 1877. By the defendant it was (inter alia) contended that the previous suit on the mortgage had exhausted the plaintiff's cause of action, and that the plaintiff had no further right against the defendant. Held, that the decree in the former suit could not affect the defendant, as he was not a party to it, nor was he represented. If he had been represented, he could not have resisted the execution of the decree. Not having been represented, he could on principle be exempted from liability in the present suit only if the cause of action was merged in the judgment against his uncles and brother. Here, however, there was no such merger. The previous decree had awarded possession of the whole house to the plaintiff. The existence of that decree could not be a reason for not awarding part of the same house when detained by the defendant. He avowed himself a stranger to the defendants, against whom the previous decree was obtained, and his act might be regarded as constituting a separate cause of action. Held, also, that s. 328 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882, does not make it obligatory on a decree-holder, who is obstructed in execution of the decree, to pursue his remedy under that section. Accordingly the omission of the plaintiff to avail himself of the remedy under that section did not prevent him from proceeding against the defendants by a regular suit. BALVANT SANTARAM v. BABAJI KIN SAMBHAPA

5. — Civil Procedure Code, ss. 318, 335—Suit to recover possession of property sold in execution of decree. S attached certain land and a house in execution of a decree against R. M put in a claim under s. 278 of the Code of Civil Procedure, alleging that he was in possession as purchaser from R. The claim was rejected. No suit was brought by M to contest this order. S purchased the said land and house in execution, and obtained a sale certificate. In 1884 S sued M to recover possession of the land and house, alleging that in execution-proceedings in 1882 he had been put into possession of the land, but not of the house, which was found locked up by the Court amin, and that M prevented him from enjoying both the land and house. M pleaded that S had never been put into possession, and again set up his title as purchaser from R and possession under such title. The Munsif found that S had been put into formal or constructive possession of the land, but not of the house, and decreed the claim. On appeal the District Judge held that S was bound to proceed according to the provisions of s. 335 of the Code of Civil Procedure to recover possession, and could not bring a separate suit. Held, that, whether there had been legal delivery or not, the suit was not barred. *SEVU v. ## 28. GOVERNMENT SCHOOL. SUIT FOR BENEFIT OF.

— Suit by secretary and manager of Government aided school—Improvement, damages for removal of. In a suit by the secretary and manager of a Government aided school for damages against the owner of the school premises for breaking down the building and removing the materials belonging to plaintiff:—Held, that the plaintiff, as secretary and manager, could maintain the action for the benefit of the school; that on the facts the plaintiff was not entitled to greater damages than had been awarded to him for the value of the materials removed by the defendant, or to compensation for the improvements made by him

29. IDOLS, SUITS CONCERNING.

1. ——— Suit to establish right to deal with Hindu idols—Property—Jurisdiction of Civil Court. Hindu idols being property, the right to deal with such property is a right cognizable by Civil Courts. SUBBARAYA GURUKAL v. CHELLAPPA MUDALI . I. L. R. 4 Mad. 315

2. ——— Suit for damages on account of omission to offer food to idol—Cause of action. The plaintiff, alleging that he was a member of a family of Guravs holding a vatan attached to a temple, complained that the defendant was the holder of an inam allowance, granted in consideration of his daily offering to the idol some rice and cake, and burning a lamp, and that he had omitted to make such offering for one year. The plaintiff claimed R15 damages. Held, that the plaintiff had no cause of action. The defendant's obligation, if any, was towards the idol ; and, if that obligation had not been performed, it could only be enforced by some person claiming to have a right to insist that the worship of the idol should be properly performed. DHADPHALE v. GURAV
I. L. R. 6 Bom. 122

3. ——— Suit to establish right to remove idol for turn of worship. When a plaintiff and defendant are jointly entitled to the profits from an idol in the defendant's temple, and the plaintiff is obstructed by the defendant in the use and worship of the idol, a suit will lie for a declaration that the plaintiff is entitled to have the idol removed to his own house during the period he is entitled to the profits of it. DWARKANATH ROY v. JANNOBEE CHOWDHRAIN . 4. W. R. 79

30. INCOME TAX.

——— Suit for refund of income tax—Income Tax Act (XXXII of 1860), s. 137. A person seeking a refund of income tax illegally assessed upon him may, under s. 137, Act XXXII of 1860, apply to the Commissioner, i.e., it is "lawful" for him so to apply, but there is no law that he must do so. He may legally sue in a Civil Court to recover the illegal assessment. COLLECTOR OF FUREEDPORE v. GOROO DOSS ROY . 11 W. R. 425

31. INJURIES BY REPRESENTATIVES OF DECEASED.

1. ——— Suit for damages for destruction of life—Son adopted by widow after death of deceased, right of, to sue—Damages. A son adopted by the widow of a deceased Hindu (in respect of whose estate no probate, letters of administration, or certificate of heirship has been granted) is the legal representative of the deceased, and as such was entitled to maintain a suit, under Act XIII of 1855, for the benefit of the persons, if any, entitled to compensation for the injury occasioned to them by the death of the deceased against those whose negligence caused that death. Such an adopted son was not, however, entitled to have any portion of the damages awarded in the suit allotted to him as a child of the deceased. Quære : Whether a son, if adopted by deceased in his lifetime, would be entitled to damages under that Act. VINAYAK RAGHUNATH v. GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY COMPANY . 7 Bom. O. C. 113

2. ——— Suit for wrong done by deceased person—Act XII of 1855—Defamation. A suit was maintainable under Act XII of 1855 against personal representatives for a wrong done by the deceased within a year of his death, although such wrong be of a purely personal character,—as, for example, defamation. GOKUL CHUNDER v. BUREEK BEGAM .

Marsh. 344 : 2 Hay 325

3. ——— Act XII of 1855—Survival of cause of action. Act XII of 1855 did not apply to wrongs which do not survive to the representatives of a deceased person. A widow who is the heir of her deceased husband is liable to make good the wrong committed by the husband. The plaintiff's right of suit does not abate by the death of the husband, but survives against his heir. CHUNDER MONEE DASSEE v. SANTO MONEE DASSEE . 1 W. R. 251

4. ——— Suit against representative of agent of Official Assignee—Act XII of 1855—Suit for money and for delivery of bonds and papers. Act XII of 1855 applied to suits for wrongs which, according to the law then in force, did not survive to or against executors or administrators. A suit for recovery of moneys due by an agent of the Official Assignee of an insolvent debtor's estate and for delivery of certain papers and documents belonging to such insolvent estate will lie against the legal representative of such agent after his deceased, and the right of action will not expire on his death. NUJUF ALI v. PATTERSON . 2 N. W. 103

32. INJURY TO ENJOYMENT OF PROPERTY.

1. ——— Suit for removal of trees—Contingent damage—Cause of action. The plaintiff claimed removal of certain trees, planted by the defendant on his own land, on the ground that the trees had been planted so near his land that, when they grew up, they would injure his crops. Held, that, until the plaintiff's enjoyment of his own land was directly and immediately interfered with by the growth of the defendant's trees, he had no right to ask for their removal, and he had therefore no cause of action. RAM LALL v. DALGANJAN. . . . I. L. R. 5 All. 369

2. ———— Burial ground—Land belonging in common to all the Mahomedan inhabitants of a village—Encroachment by some of the Mahomedans—Right of suit of some members of a community. Where certain Mahomedans of a village brought a suit against other Mahomedans of the same village for the removal of a wall built by the defendants upon land which was found to belong in common to all the Mahomedan inhabitants of the village for the purpose of a burial ground:—Held, that, the defendants having erected the wall in dispute so as to exclude the plaintiffs from a part of the common land, there was a violation of the plaintiff's right, and that therefore the plaintiffs were entitled to bring the suit for the removal of the wall. TANUDIN v. PANDU

3. ———— Mortgage of two portions of a house with a common party wall to two separate mortgagees—Interference with common wall by one of the mortgagees—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 76. The owner of a house, having built up a door which gave communication between one-half of the house and the other, mortgaged each half separately to separate mortgagees. One of such mortgagees re-opened the door communicating with the other mortgagee's portion of the house. Held, that a good action would lie on behalf of the other mortgagee against the mortgagee who had opened the door to compel him to close it. LACHMI NARAIN v. JETHU MAL

4. ———— Effect of an embankment erected by a superior riparian owner on the cultivation of lands lower down the stream—Cause of action. The defendants, being owners of land on the banks of a jungle stream, raised embankments which prevented their lands from being flooded, but caused the stream to overflow the land of the plaintiff situated lower down the stream. In an action by the plaintiff against the defendants for damages, it appeared that it was not reasonably practicable for the defendants to defend their lands from inundation by any means other than those adopted which would not have caused damage to the plaintiff. Held, that no actionable wrong had been committed by the defendants, and that the suit was consequently not maintainable. GOPAL REDDI v. CHENNA REDDI

I. L. R. 18 Mad. 158

5. ———— Right to access of light and air—Suit by person who had not obtained an easement by prescription—Easement—Trespass. The owner of a house, the light coming to which is obstructed by an erection made upon adjoining land by a person who quâ such adjoining land, is a trespasser, may possibly have an action against the person causing obstruction, even though he has not obtained by prescription an easement of light. But where the person causing such obstruction is the rightful owner of the adjoining land, or acting with the permission of the owner, no such action as aforesaid will lie against him unless the plaintiff has acquired an easement. *Jeffries v. 6. ———— Tenants-in-common, rights of, against each other—Trespass—Exclusion from common property. Laying a drain in land, and the incidental temporary interference with the soil necessary for that purpose, cannot be regarded as an ouster or destruction or an act of waste, and will not entitle a tenant-in-common of the land to maintain an action against another tenant-in-common. *MOHENCHAND NEMCHAND GUJAR v. 33. INSOLVENCY.

——— Right of insolvent or his assignee to sue—After-acquired property—Official Assignee—Parties. One R became possessed of certain properties in 1872 and 1881. In 1866 R had presented a petition in insolvency, and a vesting order had been duly made. No final order of discharge was ever made, and R died in 1888. The plaintiffs sued, as the heirs of R, for their share in the said properties. It was objected (i) that, looking to the insolvency of R, the plaintiffs had no interest in his estate; and (ii) that the Official Assignee, as the assignee of the estate and effects of R, was a necessary party to this suit. Held, that the properties in question, coming to R after his insolvency, vested in him subject only to the right and claim of the Official Assignee, should he think fit to assert it, and that the plaintiffs, as representatives of R, could maintain the action. Held, also, that the Official Assignee was not a necessary party to the suit, though, in case of a decree in plaintiff's favour, notice thereof should be given to him by the Court. FATIMABIBI v. FATIMABIBI I. L. R. 16 Bom. 452

34. INSTIGATING PROCEEDINGS, SUIT FOR.

——— Suit against party for instigating proceedings in false name—Form of suit. The plaintiffs sued for the reversal of a summary award and for restitution of the money they had paid under it, alleging that the proceedings before the Collector had been promoted entirely by the defendant using the false name of B, a person never in existence, and obtained a decree in the lower Courts. The point taken in special appeal was that the defendant not being a party on the record of those proceedings, the plaintiffs could not recover in this form of action. Held, that, though the proper and more prudent course would have been to sue the defendant for damages, yet, this being a mere matter of form, the Court refused to interfere with the decision of the Courts below. KHELARAM DOSS MISTREE v. DHUREE DOSS . . . 1 Hay 4

35. INTEREST, SUITS FOR.

1. ——— Suit for interest on money deposited under decree afterwards reversed. A suit will not lie for interest in respect of money deposited under a decree subsequently reversed on appeal. ASHRUFFUNNISSA BEGUM v. KHANUM JAUN . . . 6 W. R. 285

2. ——— Suit for interest on money for period defendant obstructed the plaintiff in his attempts to obtain it. Plaintiffs, in execution of a decree against A, attached certain money deposited in the Collectorate to which A was entitled, but were opposed by B, alleging that A's rights in the money had been transferred to him. The plaintiffs finally succeeded in obtaining the money, and then sued B for interest upon it during the time he prevented them from obtaining it. Held, that the suit was maintainable and the plaintiff was entitled to recover. PARBUTTY CHURN SOOR v. PROMOTHONATH GHOSE . . . W. R. 1864, 174

36. INTEREST TO SUPPORT RIGHT.

1. ——— Party without right or interest in subject-matter of suit. A party must show due right or interest in the subject-matter of the suit to entitle him to complain of any acts injurious thereto, and a mere stranger without interest cannot maintain any suit. CHUNDUN v. BHEKDHAREE SINGH v. KISHAN PERSHAD SINGH . . . 15 W. R. 106

2. ——— Want of interest in suit—Procedure in appeal—Stay of proceedings on application. The High Court will not, on the application of the defendant, stay all proceedings in the appeal, on the ground that the plaintiff has no interest in the suit, that being a question which can more properly be raised in the suit or appeal itself. In the matter of the petition of KHODEJOONISSA . . . 7 W. 3. ——— Right to expose fraud in Court—Evasion of order for guardians of minor to account. Where a gross fraud is being practised on a Court, with the object of evading an order which the Court has made directing a minor's guardians to account, any person who appears before the Court and exposes the fraud, undertaking also to prove it, has a locus standi in Court, and has a right to be heard. HOSSEIN ALI KHAN v. sue for the enforcement of the promise made in favour of the person from whom she bought, who did not convey to her the right to sue upon or otherwise enforce it. KISHORE v. JEY KISHORE DASS . . . 3 Agra 46

5. ——— Suit by male members of family—Insult to women. Held, that male members of a family cannot sue for the injury or insult which they have sustained indirectly in consequence of ill-treatment of certain female members of the family, and that, if there was any remedy by suit for such grievance or dishonour, it was open to the women themselves, and not to the plaintiffs. OODAI v. BHOWANEE PERSHAD . . . 1 Agra 264

6. ——— Suit to have trust fund paid into Court—Suit quia timet—Want of title or interest in plaintiff. A suit, the sole object of which was to have a trust fund paid into Court, was dismissed on the ground that the plaintiff had no actual title to any part of the fund. When the plaintiff in a suit, seeking solely the payment into Court of a fund for the relief of poor Armenian orphans, had no interest except as a member of the Armenian community:—Held, that he had no such title to part of the fund as would support the suit. Held, also, that the consent of the defendants, the trustees of the fund to the decree sought by the plaintiff would not justify the Court in making it. To support a bill quia timet, the plaintiff must have a title in possession or expectancy, and the property must be in danger. SATOOR v. SATOOR . . . 2 Mad. 8

7. ——— Interest sufficient to maintain suit—Suit by representative of testator to enforce charitable or religious trusts under will—Plaint, allegations in. The representatives of a testator are entitled to sue for the enforcement of the due performance of trusts created by him for religious and charitable purposes, and in which they are not personally interested, but their suit will be dismissed, unless upon their plaint they substantially allege a state of circumstances which, if proved, will constitute a distinct breach of trust. BROJOMOHUN DOSS v. HURRO LOLL DOSS . . . 6 C. L. R. 58

8. ——— Suit by wife in absence of husband for his share of property under partition-deed. Plaintiff brought a suit to procure delivery to her of a share of land purchased with money subject to the provisions of a deed of partition executed by her husband and the undivided members of his family. Plaintiff's husband had been since 1854 absent in a foreign country. Held, that the plaintiff sufficiently represented her absent and divided husband to enable her to sue for his share. PAPAMMAL v. RAMASWAMI CHETTI . . . 2 Mad. 365

9. ——— Interest as Collector of revenue of Government—Suit for accretion. A chur, B, formed by gradual accretion to an estate (mouzah B), was resumed by Government, who successively made temporary settlements for it with the patnidar of mouzah B, and finally with the zamindar. While the second settlement was in force, another chur formed, and a dispute arose between the patnidar of B and the patnidar of an adjoining mouzah, D, as to its ownership. Three suits were brought by the latter, claiming the second chur as an accretion to his estate, in all which suits he was successful, and in one of which Government was a party. Government then sued to set aside the decrees in the two suits in which it was not a party, and for possession of the land in dispute, and it was found in that suit that the land was continuous to chur B, and not to mouzah D. Held, that Government having a right to revenue, but not to actual possession, could have no locus standi, as plaintiff in such a suit. MOOKTAKESHEE DEBEA v. COLLECTOR OF BURDWAN. 12 W. R. 204

10. ———— Interest of lambardar—
Suit for sums paid as nuzzerana before resumption. A certain sum was paid to Government as nuzzerana during the existence of the maafi grant through a lambardar. After the maafi was resumed and a Government jumma assessed upon it, the nuzzerana continued to be paid until the interest of the holder of the resumed maafi was confiscated for rebellion and sold at auction. After the confiscation, Government allowed the amount to the lambardar by deducting it from the amount of Government revenue paid by him. Held, that by such arrangement the Government did in effect convey to him (lambardar), as trustee on behalf of Government, such an interest in the estate as would enable him to sue, and enforce such claim. ZAHOOOR HOSSEIN v. ASSUD ALI. 2 Agra Pt. II, 178

11. ———— Interest under decree—
Suit for balance due on decree—Decree for money. The appellant, having obtained a decree for money, sued to recover the unsatisfied balance thereof from the respondents, alleging that the property of the deceased judgment-debtor (being one-seventh share in the legacy of his father) was in their possession. He prayed that, after due inquiry, adjustment of accounts, and the determination of the value of the said legacy out of the share which might be found due to the judgment-debtor, the above-mentioned balance might be decreed with interest and costs. Held, that the decree did not vest in the appellant a right to the property sued for, and consequently he could not maintain the suit. *MAHOMED AGA ALI KHAN v. 15. ———— Enhancement of rent, suit for—
Right of a Hindu widow to sue for enhancement of rent as representing the estate of the deceased zamindar or as guardian of a minor son adopted to him by her. A Hindu widow, representing a zamindari interest in a mehal, sued for the rent upon a rent-paying tenure at an enhanced rate. She had, in former years, adopted a son to her deceased husband. The defendant objected throughout that, this son (deceased in 1884) having been of full age in 1881 when this suit was brought, the widow was not entitled to sue at the time, he having that right. Held, that the Courts below had rightly disallowed this objection. There was no sufficient evidence to show that the adopted son had attained majority when this suit was brought, and the plaintiff could sue either in her character as widow of the deceased or as guardian of the minor adopted son. *SURJA KANT ACHARYA v. 18. ——— Suit by vendor to set aside mortgage and decree as fraudulent—Specific Relief Act, s. 39—Sale of immoveable property—Covenant by vendor of good title—Suit and decree on a previous decree against purchaser—Vendor and purchaser. A vendor of land who had covenanted with his vendees that he had a good title, and who after the sale had no interest remaining in the property, brought a suit in which he claimed to set aside as fraudulent a mortgage on which the defendant had obtained a decree against the vendees, and the decree itself. He based his right to maintain the suit upon his liability under his covenant. The vendees were not parties to the suit. Held, that, as the defendant's mortgage had merged in his decree, the suit could only be maintained if the plaintiff could show himself entitled to have the defendant's decree set aside, and that he had shown no interest which would entitle him to maintain a suit for such a purpose. JHUNA v. office. The defendant was the eldest of three brothers whose mother on her marriage had been put out of the Lovana caste for having married a man belonging to a different caste. The defendant was anxious that he and his brothers should be re-admitted to the caste; and in 1864 he entered into an agreement with the plaintiff, who was at that time one of the setias of the caste, whereby the latter agreed to procure the admission of the plaintiff and his brothers and get them married to girls belonging to the caste. In consideration of these services, the defendant was to pay the plaintiff the sum of R5,000, which sum was to become due on the marriage of the defendant's youngest brother to a girl of the caste, and to be expended in purchasing caste utensils, which were to be kept for the use of the caste. The plaintiff alleged that part of this money had been already paid to him, and that on the marriage of the defendant's youngest brother in 1880 he had demanded payment of the balance (viz., R3,149), which the defendant had not paid. He now sued to recover this balance. One of the witnesses at the hearing was the setia of the caste who had succeeded the plaintiff in that position. He stated that he and other leaders of the caste to whom he had spoken, disapproved of this suit. Held, that the suit was not maintainable. The agreement was made with the plaintiff as one of the heads of the caste. It was made with him in his representative, not in his personal capacity, and the benefit of the agreement accrued, not to him, but to the caste. It was therefore for the caste to say whether they wished to enforce the agreement. The plaintiff, however, had lost his position as one of the heads of the caste in 1869, and was no longer the spokesman of the representative of the caste. His successor had told the Court that the leaders of the caste disapproved, as he did himself, of this suit. Under these circumstances, the suit was not maintainable. PITAMBER RATANSI v. by widow—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 69—
“Person who is interested in the payment of money.” The defendant having improperly refused to perform the marriage ceremony of his niece, the daughter of his undivided brother (deceased), the widow of the latter herself performed the ceremony, borrowing money for the purpose, and sued her late husband's said brother (the defendant) to recover the amount expended on the marriage. On its being contended that defendant was under no obligation to provide for the expenses of his brother's daughter's marriage:—Held, that defendant was liable, the marriage having been properly performed. Held, further, that the suit was maintainable, though it had been brought by the mother of the bride, and not by the bride herself. Semble: That the mother was, within the meaning of s. 69 of the Indian Contract Act, interested in making the payment which had given rise to the action. It was not necessary for her to prove that she had been compelled to make it or that she had made it at the defendant's request. VAIKUNTAM AMMANGAR v. KALLAPIRAN AYYANGAR. I. L. R. 23 Mad. 512

In execution of a decree passed against D in his personal capacity, the properties were attached and J preferred a claim on the ground of his purchase. The claim was allowed and the properties were released from attachment. In a suit brought by the decree-holder for a declaration that the properties were liable to be sold in execution of his decree, it was held that the words “person interested in the property” in sub-s. (4) of s. 90 of the Probate and Administration Act (V of 1881), as amended by s. 14 of Act VI of 1889, must mean a person interested independently of the executor whose alienation is sought to be avoided. The latter brought a suit to redeem a kanom, without first consulting his co-uralan or asking him to join in it. He impleaded the co-uralan as a defendant, given as his reason that, inasmuch as his co-uralan had denied his title, it was unnecessary to consult him as to the institution of the suit. Held, that the suit was not maintainable. It is only when one perversely declines to co-operate with the other, after being invited to do so, and when it is for the benefit of the institution that proceedings should be taken, that one uralan can sue, impleading the other as defendant. *SAVITRI ANTARJANAM v. of money on account of it. The widow and daughters of the deceased obtained letters of administration, but limited to the extent of their interests in the estate. In 1888 A brought a suit against his brother F and the other members of the family to recover out of the estate a certain sum of money advanced by him to D. Held, that, the estate being unrepresented, the suit could not be maintained (s. 190 of Act X of 1865). The letters of administration issued to the widow and daughters of the deceased, being limited only to the extent of their shares in the estate, were not letters of administration such as are meant by s. 190 of the Indian Succession Act (X of 1865). Held, also, that the only course open to the plaintiff was to take proceedings for the appointment of an administrator of the estate who would either administer it by the payment of the debts and the distribution of the surplus (if any) amongst the heirs, after taking an account of all property already received out of it by the creditors or heirs, or who could be compelled to do so by an administration suit. *FRAMJI DORABJI GHASWALA v. The Judge of the Court of Small Causes considered that the subject-matter of the plaint did not constitute a cause of action to the plaintiff, and dismissed the plaint, subject to the opinion of the High Court. Held, that the suit was maintainable by the Receiver to recover the fair rent payable for the use and occupation of the land under the muchalka, which was good evidence of what was the fair amount of rent. The second defendant, having been held to possess no title to the property, could not afterwards maintain an action for the non-payment of the rent of a portion of such property, due according to the terms of the muchalka. Held, also, that the right of suit did not extend to recover anything as interest on the rent due. *MORRIS v. He was released on the security of G, who executed a bond for the appearance of M at the inquiry into his insolvency. The defendant attested the bond, and wrote in the attestation that G was a solvent person. In consequence of the non-appearance of M, the plaintiff sought to execute his decree against the surety, G, who on his arrest also applied for his discharge on ground of his insolvency, and was discharged after inquiry. The plaintiff thereupon sued the defendant for the amount of his decree and cost of execution, on the ground of his representation in the attestation that G was insolvent. The Subordinate Judge rejected, but the District Judge on appeal allowed, the plaintiff's claim. Held, by the High Court, on second appeal, that the plaintiff had no cause of action against the defendant, whether the suit was considered as brought upon a covenant or misrepresentation, as the defendant was neither a co-obligor in the security-bond of G nor did he make any promise in the attestation of it to compensate the plaintiff for the non-appearance of M nor any representation to the plaintiff. Quare: Whether the nazir was liable to the plaintiff for negligence in not taking a proper surety? *NAGO MAHADEV v. 3. Loan obtained by guardian as such—Liability for such loan—Warranty by guardian of authority to borrow—Misrepresentation on point of law—Contract Act (IX of 1872), s. 235—Guardian's liability—Breach of warranty—Principal and agent. Plaintiff, having lent a sum of money to one R as guardian of her minor son, brought a suit against the minor, represented by his guardian, to recover it. In that suit a consent decree was passed, which directed the amount due to him to be recovered out of the minor's estate. On the minor's coming of age, he got the consent decree set aside, and the plaintiff had to refund the sum which he had recovered under it. Thereupon the plaintiff sued R to recover the amount as damages for breach of warranty, alleging that she had represented to him that she had authority to incur the debt on behalf of the minor and to bind his estate, whereas she had really no such authority. Held, that the plaintiff could not recover, there having been no such misrepresentation as would support an action for a breach of warranty. Assuming that there was a representation, the only possible representation, if the case be treated as coming within s. 235 of the Contract Act, was that the defendant represented that she was the agent of her son. But as the plaintiff knew that the son was an infant, he must have been aware that any representation that defendant was her infant son's duly authorized agent was incorrect, for an infant cannot appoint an agent, and consequently no warranty, such as would support a suit, could arise out of such a representation. Even if it were conceded that there was a representation by R as to her power to bind the minor's estate, it was one on a point of law, and, as such, it was incapable of supporting the suit. *Beattie v. ## 46. MONEY ADVANCED TO GUARDIAN FOR MINOR.

Advance by plaintiff for costs of minor defendants—Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 68, 70—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 220—Practice—Costs of guardian ad litem—Right to recover amount advanced. Plaintiff having in a prior suit sued the defendants, who were minors, and their father for specific performance, was ordered by the Court to advance money to the guardian ad litem of the minor (who was appointed by the Court) to enable him to conduct their defence. Plaintiff succeeded, but the Court refused to provide in its decree, for the repayment to plaintiff of the amount so advanced. On the plaintiff bringing this suit to recover that amount:—Held, per SUBRAMANIA AYYAR, J., (i) that the Court in which the prior suit had been brought had power neither to direct the plaintiff to make the advances to the guardian, as had been done, nor to award the amount so paid as costs in the cause. The present suit therefore was not unsustainable for the reason that the subject-matter of it was one for the Court to have dealt with in the previous suit; (ii) that the circumstances of the case were not such as to render the amount recoverable under s. 70 of the Contract Act, inasmuch as the defendants could not be said to have enjoyed the benefit of the expenditure; (iii) that payments or charges connected with legal expenses in which infants are concerned may, in certain circumstances, come under the head of necessities within the meaning of s. 68 of the Contract Act. Disbursements properly made in defence of the suit by the guardian ad litem out of the plaintiff's advances might be allowable, if it be alleged and proved that there were reasonable grounds for the defence put forward, though it proved unsuccessful. But that this ground could not now be relied upon on second appeal, inasmuch as it had not been put forward in the Court below, when an issue relating to it could have been framed. Per DAVIES, J., that a matter of this nature can and should be settled in the suit in which it arises, and that, where a plaintiff is successful, a supplementary issue should be framed and tried as to the amount due to him on account of advances made by him to the guardian ad litem for conducting the defence and a decree passed in his favour for the total amount of costs found to have been properly incurred in the case by the guardian out of such advances. *VENKATA VIJAYA GOPALARAJU v. ————— Suit for pay received and not given—Madras Police Act (XXIV of 1859), s. 53. The plaintiff, a head constable of police, sued the defendant, an inspector of police, for money had and received to the plaintiff's use. The defendant had received the pay of the plaintiff, but failed to give it to the plaintiff. Held, that the right of suit was not taken away by s. 53 of Act XXIV of 1859 (Madras Police Act) and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the amount sued for. *GUNDAM VENKATASAMI v. 48. MONEY LENT.

————— Insufficiently stamped document—Suit on hatchitta for money lent—Evidence Act, s. 91—Whether a suit maintainable if brought upon an insufficiently stamped document, where the defendant admitted the loan. In a suit brought in the Court of Small Causes on a hatchitta bearing a stamp of one anna, the defendant admitted the loan, but pleaded payment. The Judge, coming to the conclusion that the document sued upon was a promissory note and should have been stamped with a two-anna stamp, refused to admit it in evidence. He also came to the conclusion that the plaintiff had no cause of action independently of the document, and dismissed the suit. Held, that the plaintiff had a cause of action independently of the document. Held, also, that an implied contract to repay money lent always arises from the fact that the money is lent, even though no express promise, either written or verbal, is made to repay it. Therefore, in a case where the defendant admits the loan and has not repaid it, the plaintiff may maintain an action against him for breach of his implied promise or contract, entirely independent of any security which may have been given for the advance. *Akbar v. 5. ——— Suit for damages and injunction restraining Municipality from stopping water supply—Bombay District Municipal Act (XXVI of 1850)—Bombay District Municipal Act (Bom. Act VI of 1873), s. 14, Rules framed under—Rule 16—Jurisdiction of Civil Courts. The plaintiffs having sued the Municipality of Sholapur for damages and for an injunction restraining the Municipality from stopping the supply of water to their house, the first Court allowed the claim, but the Judge in appeal dismissed the suit, holding that it was premature, and that the plaintiffs had no right to sue the Municipality for damages under rule 16 of the Rules framed by the Municipality under s. 14 of the District Municipal Act (Bombay Act VI of 1873), that rule providing that "parties dissatisfied with a decision of the managing committee or any sub-committee may prefer an appeal, to the Municipality whose decision shall be final." Held, reversing the decree, that the rule must be construed as permissive, and not mandatory. It referred to departmental procedure only, and did not debar the institution of the civil suit. VASUDEVACHARYA v. MUNICIPALITY OF SHOLAPUR. I. L. R. 22 Bom. 384

6. ——— Suit to establish right to build structure forbidden by Municipality—Bombay District Municipal Act (VI of 1850), s. 33. S. 33 of the Bombay District Municipal Act (VI of 1873) gives the Municipality a discretion to issue such orders as it thinks proper with reference to a proposed building. Civil Courts cannot interfere with that discretion, unless it is exercised in a capricious, wanton, and oppressive manner. The plaintiff was the owner of two houses on each side of the passage of a khidki, or open square, containing three or four other houses. He proposed to connect the two houses by building a storey across the passage at such a height as not to interfere with the passage of those who were entitled to go to and fro. He applied to the local Municipality for permission to build in the manner he proposed. The Municipality forbade the work, on the ground that it was likely to interfere with the access of light and air to the neighbouring houses. The plaintiff thereupon sued the Municipality to establish his right to build the proposed structure. It was contended for the plaintiff that the Municipality ought not to have refused permission in the interest of the neighbouring householders, who were able to protect their own rights in case of injury. Held, that the suit would not lie, as the order of the Municipality refusing permission was not an unreasonable one under the circumstances of the case. Held, further, that the authority of the Municipality was not in any way affected by the circumstance that the proposed erection might be an encroachment on private rights subjecting the plaintiff to an action by the persons injured. *NAGARVALAB NARSI v. It appeared in evidence, although it was not alleged in the plaint, that the plaintiff had to use the land between the newly erected gate and the well when he repaired his house. The plaintiff, not having obtained permission to sue under the Civil Procedure Code, s. 30, sued for a declaration of his right to use the street and draw water from the well and for an injunction compelling the removal of the gate. Held, that the suit was within the rule precluding private actions for public wrongs without special damage alleged and proved, and was accordingly not maintainable. *SIDDESWARA v. 4. ——— Suit to establish right of access to public thoroughfare—Easement—Act XV of 1873, ss. 27, 32, 38—Special damage. Municipal Committee. While certain land formed part of a certain public thoroughfare, F had immediate access to such thoroughfare and the use of a certain drain. The Municipal Committee sold such land to M and constructed a new thoroughfare. M used and occupied such land so as to obstruct F's access to the new thoroughfare and his use of the drain. F therefore sued him to establish a right of access to the new thoroughfare over such land and a right to the use of such drain. Held, that, having suffered special damage from M's acts, F had a right of action against him, and that such right of action was not affected by the circumstance that M had acquired his title to the land from the Municipal Committee, inasmuch as the Municipal Committee could not have dealt with the old thoroughfare to the special injury of F, and, had it closed the same, would have been bound to provide adequately for his access to the new thoroughfare and for his drainage. *FAZAL HAQ v. 6. ——— Suit to establish right to carry tabuts along public road—Obstruction to public road—Special damage—Public inconvenience. Plaintiffs, who were Mussulmans, sued to establish their right to carry tabuts in procession along a certain road to the sea and alleged that the defendants (also Mussulmans) obstructed them in doing so. The plaint, however, did not allege any personal loss or damage to the plaintiffs arising from the obstruction. Both the lower Courts found as a fact that the road along which plaintiffs desired to carry their tabuts to the sea was a public road. Held, on special appeal, that plaintiffs could not maintain a civil suit in respect of such obstruction, unless they could prove some particular damage to themselves personally, in addition to the general inconvenience occasioned to the public. The mere absence of the religious or sentimental gratification arising from carrying tabuts along a public road is

10. ——— Special damage—Lease—Right of lessee—Trespass. The plaintiff, a holder of a ten years' lease of the share and rights of one of the co-sharers of a village, sued for the demolition of certain buildings and constructions on a plot of land within the area of the village, on the ground that the public had been very much inconvenienced in going to and coming from the road, and in taking carts, carriages, cattle, etc., and that he, by reason of his own inconvenience and also as lessee in possession of the entire rights of his lessor, had legally and justly a right to bring the action. The findings of fact were that by the terms of the lease plaintiff was entitled to maintain the action as representing the zamindari rights of his lessor; that the obstructions complained of existed when the lease was granted; that the roadway mentioned in the plaint was one used by the public in general as a footpath and also for vehicles, and that the buildings complained of had encroached on the road. The suit was dismissed by the first Court, but decreed in appeal by the lower Appellate Court. Held, that, in the absence of damage over and above that which in common with the rest of the public the plaintiff has sustained, his action must fail. Public nuisance is actionable only at the suit of a party who has sustained special damage, and the case law of British India in this respect is the same as the rule of English law on the subject. Further, that the lease to plaintiff failed to show either that the land upon which the defendant had built is included in the lease, or that it intended to confer upon the plaintiff any right to question the legality of the erections existing at the time of the lease. *Satku v. 11. ——— Suit by zamindar for removal of building—Obstruction by building—Special damage. The plaintiff, who is the zamindar of the village, brought an action claiming to have a chabutra or building erected by the defendant in one of the village roads removed. The road in question was a katcha road used by the village over which the public had a right of way, and it had been dedicated as a road for the use and convenience of the general public. The plaintiff got a decree for the removal of the chabutra, and the defendant appealed. Held, that the rule of English law that a member of the public cannot maintain an action for obstruction to a public road without showing special injury to himself beyond that suffered by any member of the public does not apply to a zamindar who or whose predecessor in title had dedicated to the public the road over his zamindari land. A zamindar, in giving the public a right of road of way over his land, does not give the public or any one else a right to interfere with the soil of the road, as by erecting a building upon it. In such a case the zamindar has, in common with the public, the right to use the road as a road; over and above it, he has a right to the soil in the road, which he had never given to the public. In an action of this kind the zamindar does not sue as a guardian of the public, but in respect of an interference with his own rights of property. *Baroda Prasad Mustafee v. half of the defendant on second appeal, that such damage would not entitle the plaintiffs to maintain a suit in the Civil Court. Held, that the injury caused to the plaintiffs, by the obstruction of the way leading from the village where they resided to that in which they had their fields and pastures, was peculiar to them and to their calling, and it caused them substantial loss of time and inconvenience; and that it was sufficient to entitle the plaintiffs to maintain the action. Held, also, that the death of the cows was too remotely and indirectly connected with the obstruction to furnish a cause of action. *Winterbottom v. 10. ——— Suit to establish privilege of administering purohitam to pilgrims—Alienability of such right. A suit will lie for the exclusive right to the privilege of administering purohitam to pilgrims resorting to Ramaswaram. The privilege claimed was admitted to be capable of alienation or delegation, and was therefore no longer the subject of religious sentiment, but a mere proprietary right. On the merits the plaintiffs were held to have failed to support their claim. RAMASAWMY AIYAN v. VENKATA ACHARI . . . . . 2 W. R. P. C. 21: 9 Moo. I. A. 344

11. ——— Suit to establish right to receive fees from pilgrims resorting to shrine. The plaintiffs sued to establish his exclusive right to receive fees paid to the purohit by the pilgrims resorting to a temple and to recover a sum of money received by the defendants as fees. Held, that, in the absence of any contract between the parties or of any such proof of long and uninterrupted usage as in the absence of a documentary title would suffice to establish a prescriptive right, the plaintiff's suit must be dismissed. inam land—Inam Commissioner's title-deed—Title to emoluments of office. The lands forming the emoluments of an hereditary village office having been separated from the office by Government were enfranchised and granted by the Inam Commissioner to V, who had been appointed to, and at the date of enfranchisement held the office without possessing any hereditary claim thereto. Inam lands constituting the emolument of the office of nattamgar were enfranchised in favour of the plaintiff and defendant separately. In November 1890 the defendant was informed that a pottah for half of the lands would be issued in his name, and it was so issued in the following May. In April 1891 (after the resolution to enfranchise the lands was come to) the plaintiff was appointed to be the sole nattamgar, and he now sued in 1894 for the cancellation of enfranchisement pottah issued to the defendant and for the issue of a pottah in his own name in respect of the lands comprised therein and for possession of the lands. Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to the relief sought. *SANKARA SUBBAYAR v. The holder of an hereditary office of karnam had two undivided sons, in favour of one of whom he resigned his office. Subsequently a revision of the village establishment took place, the new karnam was removed from the office, and the lands which constituted its endowment having been enfranchised by the Inam Commissioner, a title-deed in respect of them was issued to him. After his death without issue, his nephews sued to establish their right to the land. Held, that the land passed to the grantee personally, and not to his family, and consequently devolved on his death as private property. The plaintiffs therefore had no right of suit as regarded the property. Vencata v. Rama, I. L. R. 8 Mad. 249, followed. VENKATARAYADU v. VENKATARAMAYYA . . . I. L. R. 15 Mad. 284

Lands constituting the emoluments of the office of karnam were enfranchised in favour of a widow who had been in possession since the death of her husband, which took place about eighteen years previously. They were subsequently sold by her. Held, that the vendee's title was good against the reversionary heir of the husband, and the plaintiff had therefore Act X of 1876, s. 4*—Its application to suits between private persons. The plaintiff and his co-sharers in a kul-karni vatan entered into an agreement in 1869 for the performance of the duties of the vatan by the several sharers in turn. The agreement provided that, if sharers prevented the nomination of a sharer to officiate in his turn, he should pay R100 as damages to the person thus excluded from office. The plaintiff alleged that in 1883 it was in turn to officiate, that the defendants, instead of electing him in accordance with the agreement nominated another person, who was confirmed in the appointment by the Collector. The plaintiff therefore sued the defendants to recover R100 as damages for breach of the agreement of 1869. Held, that the agreement could not be enforced by a civil suit, and it was opposed to the policy of s. 40 of Bombay Act III of 1874, which contemplates a free election of an officiator by the whole body of registered representative vatandars to whom the Collector issues his notice—an election unfettered by any promises made beforehand by any of the sharers. Held, also, that a suit in respect of any injury caused by exclusion from office or service is barred by the second paragraph of cl. (a) of s. 4 of Act X of 1876.

Part of a sum of money, paid to the credit of the insolvent's estate in pursuance of the compromise, was made over, upon the passing of the consent-decree, with the knowledge of the assignee, but without notice to or the sanction of the Court to a person who had assisted in taking the account. From the representatives of the latter, he being now deceased, the successor in office of the assignee claimed repayment. In regard to the facts that he was neither a party to, nor had any control over, the compromised suit; that he owed no duty to the Court in respect of it nor to the creditors of the estate; and that he had taken no unfair advantage of the assignee:—Held, that there was no grounds upon which this repayment could be claimed. ABDOOL HOSSEIN ZENAIL ABADI v. 1. ——— Purchaser from rightful owner, suit by—Right of suit—Trespasser in possession—Sale deed voidable and not void—Effect—False recital as to consideration—Transfer by person out of possession—Validity—Champerty—Gambling in litigation—Adoption—Proof. It is not enough for a trespasser, who seeks to maintain possession against a purchaser from the rightful owner, to make out that the sale-deed in favour of the purchaser is voidable at the option of the vendor. He must show that it is absolutely void. A sale-deed cannot be challenged by a person, who was no party to it, when apart from an untrue recital as to consideration there was no other flaw in the transaction. The sale-deed in this case had been passed in favour of the plaintiff by the rightful owner, who was out of possession, needy and unable to prosecute his claim against the trespasser without assistance. The Judicial Committee held that there was nothing extortionate or unreasonable in the terms of the bargain in this case, no gambling in litigation, nothing contrary to public policy, and that the transaction was a present transfer by the owner to the plaintiff giving the latter a good title, on which he was competent to sue. ACHAL RAM v. In the year 1839 the defendant's ancestor had mortgaged a share in a mouzah to the ancestor of the plaintiffs. The mortgagee sued to foreclose the mortgage and obtained a decree, in execution of which he obtained possession of the share. After this, some prior mortgagees obtained a decree in the Sudder Court in 1847, to the effect that the disputed property should be taken away from the plaintiff's ancestor and given to the prior mortgagees till their lien was satisfied, when he should obtain possession as before. The lien of the prior mortgagees was satisfied in 1870, when the defendants obtained possession. The holder of the decree, in execution of which the tenure was sold, assuming him to be only a shareholder in the zamindari right, had no right under s. 64 to sell the tenure, but only the interest of the person against whom the decree was passed. ## 60. PUBLIC OR PRIVATE RIGHTS.

1. ———— Right to graze cattle—Civil Procedure Code, ss. 31, 53—Public right—Amendment of plaint. A suit for an injunction to restrain interference with his right to graze cattle on the bed of a certain tank. The other raiyats of the village in whom the same right vested were originally joined as plaintiffs, but the plaint was amended under s. 53 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and their names were struck off the record. A proved no special damage. Held, that the fact that the other raiyats of the village had similar rights did not make A's right a public right in the sense that no action could be brought upon it unless special damage was proved. *VENKATACHALA v. ## 62. REGISTRATION OF NAME.

1. ———— Suit as proprietor of estate to compel entry in Collector's book—Right to share in land. A person claiming a share in land by right of heirship has no right of suit against a Collector to obtain entry of his name in the revenue books: the proper form of suit is against the co-heirs for a declaration of his right to a share, and an award of such share. FATMA KOM NUBI SAHEB v. DARYA SAHEB . . . 10 Bom. 187

2. ———— Suit to compel registration of name—Suit of vague and speculative nature. A suit by a plaintiff, who alleges that he is in possession of property, praying that the Court will cause the registry to be altered into his name without stating that the proper authorities had refused to make the entry, and without joining as defendants the only person who had power to do so, was held to be not maintainable. *IBRAI BYARI v. 2. ———— Payment of Government revenue by mortgagees in possession to save the property—Payment of mortgage-money into Court by mortgagors and relinquishment of possession by mortgagees, subsequent suit by mortgagees to recover the—Government revenue paid by them by sale of the mortgaged property—Transfer of Property Act, (IV of 1882), s. 83. The plaintiffs were mortgagees in possession of certain shares in a village under a mortgage, which, as to the principal amount advanced, was a simple mortgage: as to the interest a usufructuary mortgage. The mortgagees, to save the property from sale paid up certain arrears of Government revenue. Subsequently the defendant, who was the representative of the mortgagors under s. 83 of the Transfer of Property Act, paid the original sum due under the mortgage into Court. The mortgagees withdrew the money so paid in and deposited the mortgage-deed in Court. The mortgagees then, after relinquishing possession of the mortgaged property, sued to recover the money which they had paid as Government revenue by sale of the mortgaged property. Held, that, though the mortgagees might originally have treated the amount paid by them as Government revenue as part of the mortgage-money, they did not by such payment obtain a lien independently of their position as mortgagees, and when once they had abandoned their lien on the mortgaged property by accepting the money paid into Court by their mortgagors and by relinquishing possession of the mortgaged property, they could not afterwards revive it, and their suit, which was for realization of the Government revenue paid by them by sale of the mortgaged property, must fail. Semble: A mortgagee who had given up his lien under circumstances similar to those above described, might bring a simple money suit to recover money paid by him to save the property from sale in execution of arrears of Government revenue. KINU RAM DASS v. 3. ———— Sale for arrears of revenue—N.-W. P. Land Revenue Act (XIX of 1873), ss. 185, 186—Disposal of surplus proceeds—Distribution amongst creditors of defaulters—Suit by one of such creditors against another—Cause of action. An estate which had been mortgaged separately to two different mortgagees was sold for default in payment of Government revenue. By the sale a much larger sum than was sufficient to satisfy the arrears of revenue was realized. The Collector, instead of paying the surplus to the defaulter, mortgagor, paid therewith one of the mortgagees in full and the other in part. The mortgagee who had been paid in part only sued the other mortgagee for the balance due on his (the plaintiff's) mortgage, alleging that it was prior to that of the defendant and ought to have been paid off in full. Held, that the suit would not lie. The action of the Collector in contravention of the express provisions of s. 185 of Act XIX of 1873 gave the plaintiff no cause of action against the other mortgagee. KUNJ BEHARI LAL v. 1. ———— Omission to appeal to Commissioner—Act XI of 1859, s. 33—Public Demands Recovery Act (Beng. Act VII of 1880), s. 2. A suit to set aside a sale for arrears of road and public cesses will lie, although no previous appeal to the Commissioner has been made under s. 33 of Act XI of 1859. Such a sale is not one for arrears of revenue or other demands realizable in the same manner as arrears of revenue are realizable within the meaning of that section. *MOHIBUL HUQ v. 1. ———— Suit to set aside sale—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 257—Suit by representative of judgment-debtor. S. 257, Act VIII of 1859, did not bar the representative of a judgment debtor from bringing a regular suit to set aside an execution sale, except on the score of its having been irregularly conducted. *JUMMAL ALI v. 2. ———— Suit on ground of fraud—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 256. S. 256 of Act VIII of 1859 did not bar a suit brought by a judgment-debtor to set aside an execution sale on the ground that the decree-holder fraudulently got the property sold in execution of a previous satisfied decree : it only applied to cases of irregularity in the sale proceedings. *BUDREE v. 4. ———— Suit to set aside order confirming sale—Omission to claim property on its attachment. The plaintiffs objected to the confirmation of the sale of certain property in execution of decree, on the ground that it was their property, and they were unaware that it was incumbered, otherwise they would have discharged the debt ; neither did they know the land had been attached, and was to be sold in execution. The sale was confirmed, and they sued to set aside the order confirming the sale. Held, that the suit would not lie. HOSSEIN BEG v. JEEWA RAM

5. ———— Right of purchaser under previous private sale—Notice of transfer—Landlord and tenant—Beng. Act VIII of 1869, s. 26. The plaintiff purchased under a private conveyance from the registered tenant of a permanent transferable interest in land such as is described in s. 26 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869, but no notice of the transfer was given to the zamindar. The zamindar subsequently brought a suit against the tenant for arrears of rent and obtained a decree, in execution of which he caused the tenure to be sold, and himself became the purchaser. The plaintiff took proceedings under s. 311 of the Civil Procedure Code to set aside the sale, but his application was rejected, on the ground—an erroneous one—that he was not a proper party to take such proceedings and he did not appeal against the order rejecting it. Held, in a suit brought against the zamindar and the tenant to set aside the sale, that in the absence of fraud the suit was not maintainable. The plaintiff might have satisfied the rent decree and so prevented the sale, or he might have appealed against the order rejecting his application to set it aside ; but having done neither and the zamindar having had no notice of the transfer, the plaintiff was not entitled to treat the proceedings in the rent suit as a nullity on the ground that he was not a party to that suit. *PANYE CHUNDER SIRCAR v. The provisions of s. 110, Act X of 1859, were applicable in such a case ; and a party whose objection under s. 111 was overruled had a right to bring a suit in the Civil Court. *JUGGESSUR SUHAYE v. 12. ————— Fraud—Sale under Act X of 1859—Civil Procedure Code, s. 244—Act XXIII of 1861, s. 11. B obtained an ex parte decree for arrears of rent against S under Act X of 1859, and in execution of that decree brought the tenure to sale. At the sale the tenure was purchased by N. S then brought a suit against B and N to set aside the sale on the ground that the rent-decree and all execution proceedings taken thereunder were fraudulent, and alleging that B was the actual purchaser in the name of N. An objection was taken that the suit would not lie, and that the questions in the suit were such as could have been determined, and were determined, by the Court executing the decree. Held, that neither s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code nor the corresponding s. 11 of Act XXIII of 1861 has any application to proceedings in execution of a decree under Act X of 1859, and that the suit being one to set aside the sale on the ground of fraud, was maintainable. *Saroda Churn Chuckerbutty v. 13. ————— Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 99, Sale contrary to provisions of—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 244—Sale by mortgagee in execution of decree. Property subject to a mortgage having been sold by the mortgagee as holder of a decree against the mortgagors, a separate suit was brought by the mortgagors to set aside the sale being in contravention of s. 99 of the Transfer of Property Act. On objection being taken that the suit was not maintainable, the matter being one for determination in execution proceedings under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure :—Held (i) that, although the sale was contrary to the provisions of s. 99 of the Transfer of Property Act, that section being for the benefit only of a particular class of persons, namely, those concerned with a right to redeem mortgaged property, such a sale was not void, but voidable ; (ii) that the question, being one arising between the parties to the suit wherein the sale was made and relating to execution, could not be raised and decided in a suit, but should not be raised and tried only in execution proceedings taken under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and the sale set aside if such relief were not, for any reason, barred ; (iii) that the sale having been confirmed, such confirmation was final, and precluded the mortgagors from seeking the relief to which they would otherwise have been entitled ; and (iv) that, notwithstanding such sale and confirmation, the mortgagors might not be precluded from suing to redeem the mortgaged property on payment of the amount given credit for by the mortgagee in respect of the sale. *MAYAN PATHUTI v. 19. ———— Civil Procedure Code, 1859, ss. 256, 257—Sale in execution—Order of attachment and sale notifications not signed by Judge, but by Munsarim—Sale set aside—Equitable estoppel. On the 21st August 1876 certain immoveable property belonging to M was put up for sale and was purchased by R. On the 20th April 1877 such sale was set aside under s. 256 of Act VIII of 1859 on the ground that the order attaching such property and the notifications of sale had not, as required by s. 222, been signed by the Court executing the decree, but by the Munsarim of the Court. On the 27th June 1877 M conveyed such property to H, who purchased it bonâ fide and for value, and satisfied the incumbrances existing thereon. On the 15th April 1878 R sued H and M to have the order setting aside such sale set aside, and to have such sale confirmed in his favour, on the ground that it had been improperly set aside under s. 256 of Act VIII of 1859, the judgment-debtor not having been prejudiced by the irregularities in respect whereof such sale had been set aside. Held, by OLDFIELD, J., that although such sale might have been improperly set aside, yet, inasmuch as the order of attachment and the notifications of sale could have no legal effect, having been signed by the Munsarim of the Court executing the decree, and not by the Court, as required by s. 222 of Act VIII of 1859; and inasmuch as it would be inequitable, after the incumbrances of such property had been satisfied and the state of things changed to allow R, after standing by for a year, and permitting dealings with the property, to come in and take advantage of the change of circumstances, and obtain a property become much more valuable at the price he originally offered, R ought not to obtain the relief which he sought. Held, by STRAIGHT, J., that the fact that the Court executing the decree had not signed the order of attachment and the notifications of sale vitiated the proceedings in execution ab initio, and rendered the sale which R desired to have confirmed void and R's suit therefore failed, and had properly been dismissed. 20. ———— Civil Procedure Code, ss. 244, 278, 283—Suit to confirm sale after it is set aside—Person not party to proceedings—Specific Relief Act, s. 42. M, in whose name property had been purchased at an execution sale which was improperly set aside, brought a suit to have the order setting aside the sale reversed and the sale confirmed in her favour, and for a declaration that the property was not liable to be sold in execution of a decree of the defendants against third persons under which it had been attached and advertised for sale. Held, that such a suit could only be maintained under s. 42 of the Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), but that s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code indicated the intention of the Legislature that such questions should be determined in the execution department, and, reading together the provisions of ss. 244, 278, and 283 of the Code, the suit was premature and therefore not maintainable. MAN KUAR v. TARA SINGH . I. L. R. 7 All. 533

The Collector set aside the sale before the date of confirmation, on the sole ground that the judgment-debtor had, subsequent to the sale, made full payment of the sum decreed. Thereupon the auction-purchaser filed a suit for a declaration that the sale had been improperly set aside, and for a confirmation of the sale. Held, that the suit would lie. Reading s. 312 with s. 311 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the suit was not barred under the last clause of s. 312 nor under s. 588, cl. 16. Held, also, that the rules framed by Government under s. 320 of the Code only restricted the powers of the Court to interfere with the procedure of the execution of decrees transferred to the Collector. They did not come in the way of a party bringing a civil suit to establish his purchase. Held, also, that the Collector had no power under s. 311 of the Code to set aside the sale and receive payment from the judgment-debtor. *MA-THURADAS v. 22. ———— Advance by mortgagee to pay off prior lien on mortgaged property and save the property from sale in execution of decree—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), ss. 60, 68, 72, 74, 75, 95—Suit against purchaser of property to recover amount so advanced—Charge on the mortgaged property. Plaintiff's undivided brother had advanced money on a usufructuary mortgage-bond to enable the owners of certain property to obtain possession of it from one in whose favour a lien had been decreed to subsist. The money not having been so applied, the holder of the lien attached the property and applied to the Court for its sale. To save the property from being sold, plaintiff's said brother further paid the amount of the lien into Court; and at about the same time the mortgagor sold the property to defendant. Plaintiff's brother had never obtained possession of the property and had since died. Upon plaintiff suing to recover (in addition to the mortgage amount, liability for which was not disputed), the amount of the lien so paid into Court to save the property from sale. Held, that, inasmuch as plaintiff could only succeed by showing that by such payment a charge was created upon the land (the money not having been paid at the request or for the benefit of the defendant), the suit must fail. There is no provision in the Transfer of Property Act to support the proposition (involved by the plaintiff's suit) that a second mortgagee may, by a transaction between himself and the first mortgagee, without knowledge or concurrence on the part of the mortgagor, acquire a new right over the mortgaged property. Per SUBRAMANIA AYYAR, J.—That as against the mortgagors plaintiff would have been entitled to add the sums paid by him to the prior incumbrancer to the mortgage amount. But as the mortgage was usufructuary and plaintiff had never obtained possession, he had acquired no charge on the mortgaged property for the money recoverable by him under s. 68 of the Transfer of Property Act. The amount sought to be added thereto consequently stood on a similar footing, and the plaintiff's contention that a charge in respect of it existed in his favour was unsustainable. *Nogender Chunder Ghose v. 24. ———— Suit by purchaser at execution sale to sue for partition—Certificate of purchase by Registrar—Conveyance—Declaration of right to share—Rules of Court, 415, 431. The position of a purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree of the High Court after he has obtained a certificate from the Registrar under rule 415 of the Rules of Court is that of a person clothed with a right to a conveyance in virtue of a contract; he does not hold, save as regards the parties to the contract of sale, the position of an owner. When the sale is confirmed, the purchaser is entitled to a conveyance, and until he obtains a conveyance the property in the estate purchased does not, having regard to rule 431, pass to him so as to give him rights as against parties not bound by the decree under which the sale took place. All that passes to him as against the defendant in that suit is an equitable estate and a right to a conveyance of the property. And, therefore, as the estate in the property purchased has not passed, the purchaser is not entitled to maintain a suit for partition. In such a suit he could not on partition give a good conveyance to the parties interested in the estate

27. ——— Sale in execution of decree enforcing mortgage—Distribution of proceeds of execution-sale—Priority of mortgages—Transfer of Property Act (Act IV of 1882), s. 80. A mortgaged certain property to B in July 1874, to C in March 1877, and again to B in November 1877. B obtained a decree directing the sale of the property in satisfaction of his two mortgages, and it was sold accordingly. Subsequent to the sale, C obtained a similar decree upon his mortgage, and, having unsuccessfully applied in his own suit to have his decree satisfied out of the sale-proceeds after payment of B's first mortgage of July 1874, brought a suit under the last paragraph but one of s. 295 of the Civil Procedure Code to recover the amount received by B in respect of B's mortgage of November 1877. Held, that to read the words "an incumbrance" in s. 295, prov. (c) of the Civil Procedure Code as "an incumbrance or incumbrances," so as to give priority to B's mortgage of November 1877 over C's earlier mortgage of March 1877, would be to defeat the intention of the Legislature as expressed in that section and also in s. 80 of the Transfer of Property Act, and that C was entitled to maintain the suit. *MITTHU LAL v. 29. ——— Suit for confirmation of prior sale—Decree transferred to Collector for execution—Sale held by Collector, but afterwards set aside—Purchase by one joint decree-holder in his own name—Suit by auction-purchaser to have the sale confirmed. Muthara Das and Gappu Lal held a joint decree for money against Jamna Prasad. Mathura Das applied in his own name for execution of the joint decree, and certain property of the judgment-debtor was attached. That property being ancestral, execution of the decree was transferred to the Collector, by whom the property was sold. The property so sold was purchased by Mathura Das, who, however, did not pay for it in cash, but gave a receipt for satisfaction of the joint decree. Subsequently this sale was set aside by the Collector under the provisions of s. 311 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Mathura Das, accordingly, filed a suit in the Civil Court to have the Collector's order set aside and the sale confirmed in his favour. Held, that the suit would lie; but that the plaintiff was not entitled to a decree in it, inasmuch as, to give the plaintiff the decree which he asked for, namely, a decree confirming the sale in the plaintiff's sole name without reference to the rights of his co-decree-holder, would be to assist the plaintiff in perpetrating a fraud. *Sham Behari Lal v. S seized the ship in French territory for a debt due to him by M, and the French Court sold the ship. C made a claim on the proceeds of the sale in the hands of the Court in December 1878. The French Court required C to produce a copy of an English Court's judgment acknowledging and sanctioning C's claim against M. C sued S to obtain a declaration of his right to recover the amount due by M on the bond. Held, that, whether or not his lien was destroyed by the sale of the ship in French territory, C was not entitled to any of the proceeds of the sale, either at the date of the sale or of his claim in the French Court, and the denial by S of C's right to any of the proceeds of the sale gave C no cause of action. *CHITHAMBARA v. ## 68 (a). SOCIETY, SUIT AGAINST.

Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), ss. 30, 539—Suit by subscribers of society, maintainability of. Some of the subscribers to a society brought a suit on behalf of themselves and other persons interested against the office-bearers and members of the society, for the removal of the office-bearers and for an account of the affairs of the society. No sanction of the Advocate-General under s. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure or permission of Court under s. 30 of the Code for bringing the suit was obtained by the plaintiffs. Under the rules of the society the subscribers as such had no control over the officers of the society or the conduct of the society's affairs and they were not beneficiaries having any claim on the funds of the society. Held, that they had no right to maintain the suit. Per SIR ARNOLD WHITE, C. J. —Even if it is assumed that the suit was maintainable without the sanction of the Advocate-General under s. 539 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the plaintiffs cannot maintain the suit as they were not members of the society and their rights were in no way analogous to the rights of worshippers in a Hindu temple, who could maintain a suit in their own right. Per ABDUR RAHIM, J.—Assuming that the defendants are in the position of trustees of the society, liable to be sued for misconduct by persons interested, the plaintiffs cannot maintain a representative suit without sanction or leave obtained under s. 539 or 30 of the Code of Civil Procedure. S. 539 is enabling as regards the general public interested in the sense that two persons may sue now where it would have been necessary before that all should sue, or that some should obtain leave to sue on behalf of the rest. *Thackersey Dewraj v. 1. — Suit by secretary of charitable institution against subscriber—Liability of subscribers to charitable institution. The extent of a subscriber's obligation must depend upon the nature of the particular charity or other subject for which the subscription is given, and, in some cases, upon what the subscribers said or did when he agreed to subscribe. Quære: Whether (assuming the liability of a subscriber for unpaid subscriptions) the secretary of a charitable institution with the consent of the committee of management, is entitled to sue a subscriber for the amount of his contribution. Suit simultaneously brought in different Courts on same cause of action—Bar to maintenance of suit—Election. A suit brought in a District Munsif's Court, filed on the same day as a suit for the same amount brought on the same cause of action in the Small Cause Court, is not a bar to the maintenance of the Small Cause suit; but the plaintiff must elect which suit he will proceed with. ## 71. SURVIVAL OF RIGHT.

1. — Trustee and cestui que trust—Survival in representative of cestui que trust of right to sue. If the money due on a bond belonged to A, and B, the nominal plaintiff in a suit on the bond, was a trustee for him:—Held, that A's son might sue to get the benefit of the decree obtained by B. 2. — Revival of suit in favour of minor—Suit for partition. A suit for a partition of family property was, upon the death of the plaintiff, revived on behalf of his minor sons with the permission of the Court of first instance, and a decree for a partition given. The Appellate Court reversed the decree upon the ground that, as a partition can be enforced on behalf of minors only when it can be proved to be necessary for the protection of the minor's interest, the cause of action did not survive to the minors. Held, by the High Court, that this was not a universal rule, and the Court of first instance having allowed the suit to be revived, considering that it had been brought

4. ——— Malicious prosecution, suit for—Civil Procedure Code, s. 361—Abetment of suit—Tort—Cause of action, survival of, as against heir of a deceased wrong-doer—Act XII of 1855—“Actio personalis moritur cum persona,” Application of. The plaintiff sued to recover damages from the defendant's father R for wrongful arrest and malicious prosecution. During the pendency of the suit R died, and the plaintiff substituted the defendant as his heir and representative. The defendant contended that the suit abated. Both the lower Courts disallowed the defendant's contention, and awarded damages to the plaintiff, to be recovered from the estate of the deceased. On appeal by the defendant to the High Court:—Held, reversing the decision of the lower Courts, that the suit abated on the death of R, his estate having derived no benefit, but, on the other hand, suffered loss, in consequence of his wrong-doing. Phillips v. Homfray, L. R. 24 Ch. D. 439, followed. It was contended for the plaintiff that Act XII of 1855 gave the plaintiff a right to continue his suit against the heir of R. Held, that Act XII of 1855 did not apply to a suit such as this, brought originally against the wrong-doer himself, and only subsequently sought to be continued against his heir. *HARIDAS RAMDAS v. 5. ——— Application to revive suit by person whose claim is in conflict with that of original plaintiff—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, ss. 361 and 371—Cause of action—Abatement of suit—Substitution of parties. The language of ss. 361 and 371 of the Code of Civil Procedure relating to abatement of a suit show that, where it is sought to revive a suit on the death of the plaintiff, the cause of action of the original and revived suit must be the same, and that no fresh cause of action can be imported into the revived suit. Where a suit was brought to have it declared that the plaintiff was entitled to succeed as mohant of the Tarkessur shrine on the allegations (a) that he had been selected as the chela or disciple of the deceased mohant; (b) that the ceremony of initiation had been duly performed, by which he was brought into the brotherhood of his gurus; and (c) that the installation ceremony had been performed with the consent of the dasnami, and that by virtue thereof he became the mohant, and exercised the functions of that office; and on the death of the plaintiff an application to be substituted in his place was made on grounds which put the applicant into opposition to the original plaintiff and made his claim not dependent on the original plaintiff's case, but in conflict with it:—Held, that the right of suit could not be said to survive to the applicant within the meaning of the sections of the Court relating to abatement of suit, but that the suit abated by the death of the plaintiff. *SHAM CHAND GIRI v. 6. ——— Claim to guardianship based on a will does not survive to claimant's representative—Death of appellant pending appeal—Abatement of appeal—Guardians and Wards Act (VIII of 1890), ss. 7, 8, 13. One K applied to be the guardian of the person and property of her minor son. Her application was opposed by G, the grand-mother of the minor, who alleged that she has been appointed guardian by the will of the minor's father. The Judge found the will not proved and he appointed K to be guardian. G appealed, and, pending the appeal, she died. G's brother, one M, thereupon applied for leave to prosecute the appeal as G's representative. Held, refusing the application, that the appeal must abate by reason of G's death. Her appointment, alleged to have been made under the will, was a matter of personal preference and trust. A claim based on personal trust could not survive to her representative. *GANGABAI v. Pending the hearing, the executor died. Thereupon his widow and legal representative applied to have her name substituted for his, and to have the petition for probate amended by substituting a prayer for letters of administration with copy of the will annexed, in place of the prayer for probate. Held that the application must be refused, as the right to sue had not survived, and the suit had abated. *SARAT CHANDRA BANERJEE v. ## 73. TORTS.

1. ——— Suit for tort amounting to felony—Cause of action—Proof of previous conviction in Criminal Court. Where a person brings a suit alleging a state of facts which amount to felony, he must show that he has done his best to procure a conviction on the criminal charge before the Civil Court will entertain such a suit. COONAMULL v. SARNO RAUR . 2 Ind. Jur. N. S. 187

2. ——— Suit in respect of tort—Taking away and detaining property—Remedy by civil action. In a case where a person took away a cow out of another's field and wrongfully detained it, pretending that he purchased it at an auction-sale in execution of a decree, it was held there was a remedy by civil action. The plaintiff was not bound to institute criminal proceedings in the first instance, and the Civil Court was bound to take cognizance of the suit under s. 1 of the Code of Civil Procedure of 1859. *SHAMA CHURN BOSE v. 3. ——— Suit for damages for abuse—Failure to take criminal proceedings. The failure of an injured party to institute criminal proceedings does not deprive him of his right to bring a suit in the Civil Court to recover damages for abuse. SREENATH MOOKERJEE v. KOMUL KURMOKAR . 16 W. R. 83

4. ——— Suit for property (or its value) attached before judgment and made away with—Failure to institute criminal proceedings. A suit will lie for the recovery, or for the value, of property attached under s. 81, Act VIII of 1859, and afterwards made away with by the defendants in collusion with the attaching officer without a criminal prosecution being previously instituted against them. *CHOITUNNO PARAMANICK v. 5. ——— Suit for tort not compoundable—Merger of tort in felony—Law applicable to Hindus and Mahomedans—English law—Right to bring civil suit before prosecuting for offence. Within the original jurisdiction of the High Court of Madras, a Hindu or Mahomedan whose civil rights have been infringed by an act which is also a non-compoundable offence is not bound to prosecute the offender before maintaining his civil action, nor is his right to prosecute his action suspended until the offender is brought to justice. *ABDUL KAWDER v. 7. ——— Suit for fine realized after imprisonment in default of payment—Imprisonment—Fine. An accused person was punished by the Magistrate both with imprisonment and fine and was sentenced in default of payment of fine to a further imprisonment. After the accused had undergone both the principal punishment and additional imprisonment, he was released, and the fine realized from him. Held, that a suit by him to recover the amount of the fine was not maintainable; the additional imprisonment not being in lieu of the fine, but as a punishment for non-payment of it. *MANOOLLAH v. 3. ——— Slander—Privilege of witness—Slander uttered by witness whilst under examination in a judicial proceeding. A witness in a Court of justice is absolutely privileged as to anything he may say as a witness having reference to the enquiry on which he is called as a witness. The plaintiff sued to recover damages for slander, the statement complained of being alleged in the plaint to have been made by the defendant while being examined as a witness during the hearing of a case before a Magistrate. It was found that the statement was made in answer to questions put to the defendant as a witness and allowed by the Court as relevant to the case. The plaintiff alleged that the statement was made maliciously, that the defendant bore him a grudge, and that it was to give vent to that grudge, and to injure his reputation that the statement was made. Held, that the plaint disclosed no cause of action, and that the suit had been properly dismissed. BHIKUMBER SINGH v. BECHARAM SIRKAR. BHIKUMBER SINGH v. GOTI KRISTO DAS . I. L. R. 15 Calc. 264

4. ——— Defamation—Verbal abuse—Special damage—Witness—Privilege. The plaintiff was cited as a witness by one S in a suit instituted by him against defendant. After plaintiff's evidence had been concluded, in which he stated that there was no enmity between him and defendant, the defendant was examined by the Court, and stated that there was enmity between him and plaintiff, and on the Court inquiring to know what was the cause of enmity, defendant used words conveying the meaning that plaintiff descent was illegitimate. In a suit for slander instituted by the plaintiff:—Held, by BRODHURST, J., that under the circumstances, the statement complained of was made by defendant while deposing in the witness-box, and was therefore absolutely privileged. Per MAHMOOD, J. (contra), that the question whether or not the statement complained of was made by defendant in course of his deposition or after it was finished and when he was no longer in the witness-box, had not been tried, and the order remanding the case for trial on the merits was right. Further, that the English law of slander as forming part of the law of defamation, and as such drawing somewhat arbitrary distinctions between words actionable per se and words requiring proof of special or actual damage, is not applicable to this country, either by reason of any statutory provision or by any uniform course of decision sufficient to establish such distinctions as part of the common law of British India; that whilst the English law of defamation recognizes no distinction between defamation as such and personal insult in civil liability, the law of British India recognizes personal insult conveyed by abusive language as actionable per se, without proof of special or actual damage; that such abusive and insulting language, unless excused or protected by any other rule of law, is in itself a substantive cause of action and a civil injury, apart from defamation, and that malice is an element of liability for abusive and insulting language, and that such malice will be presumed or inferred, unless the contrary is shown; that when the defendant is not absolutely privileged and protected by reason of the office or occasion on which he employed such language, he renders himself subject to a civil liability for damages, irrespective of any plea of justification based upon proving the truth of the statements contained in the abusive and insulting language complained of; that the rule of English law as to the privilege or protection of a witness in regard to defamatory statements made in the witness-box is based upon a public policy which is equally applicable to insulting and abusive language used by such witness and such statements, when made in the witness-box, are privileged and protected, even though made maliciously and falsely, so long as they are relevant to the inquiry in the broadest sense of the phrase; and that, even where such statements have no reference to the inquiry, the defendant may prove the absence of malice, and that they were made in good faith for the public good. *DAWAN SINGH v. 16. ————— User of twenty years to support servitude—Extent and mode of user—Calcutta Municipal Act (Beng. Act IV of 1876). As establishing his right of way over the defendant's passage, the plaintiff relied upon a user of it, several times in the year, for twenty years prior to the defendant's interruption of it, by mehters for the purpose of removing the contents of a cesspool connected with a privy belonging to the plaintiff's house. The facts indicated by way of limit to the user of the passage only showed that it must be a reasonable user for the above purpose. There was no agreement specifying times or occasions of access, and the inference was that if the plaintiffs had thought fit to use the passage more frequently than they did, they were at liberty to do so. In and after 1876, instead of the plaintiff's mehters, those employed by the Municipality came and went upon the passage, not at distant intervals, but daily, the plaintiffs under bye-laws, in conformity with Bengal Act IV of 1876, being bound to give them access, and the system being to clean the place daily. Held, that the above was neither a discontinuance by the plaintiffs of their user nor an aggravation of the servitude. Also that, although a servitude gained for one pur-

31. ——— Grant of land to build dwelling-house—Implied right to build privy—Way of necessity for sweepers—Caste prejudices—Modification of English law. A plot of land in the centre of the defendant's oart was granted to plaintiff's predecessor in title on fazendari tenure, to build a dwelling upon. A hut was accordingly built thereon. No privy was built with or attached to the hut, the occupants of the hut using the oart or neighbouring oarts, for natural purposes. The plaintiff bought the hut, knocked it down, and proceeded to build a substantial dwelling with a privy on the site of the old hut. Defendant denied his right to build a privy, or to have any right of way for sweepers to the said privy when built. Held, that the suitable enjoyment of the hut, when it was originally built, implied the use of a privy, whenever the occupants of the hut should think fit to build one; and that therefore the plaintiff was entitled to build a privy, and consequently also to a way of necessity for a sweeper to have access to the privy when built. The occupants of the old hut had been allowed, as a way of necessity and had always used as a means of access to that portion of the site of the old hut on which the new privy was now being built, a path which went in a straight line from the gate in the outer wall of the oart to the front door of the hut, and thence, skirting the hut, to the site of the new privy. The plaintiff now claimed a right of way for his sweeper in a direct line from the outer gate to the new privy, thus avoiding the front entrance of the house. Held, that, having regard to the class of persons who had lived in the old hut (who were of low caste), there could have arisen up to the present time no reasonable necessity for two ways to the site in question, and therefore the plaintiff was limited to the old way enjoyed by his predecessor in title. Quere: Whether, if the lessees had been persons belonging to one of the higher castes, it would not be right to take into consideration the prejudice entertained by members of such castes against being brought into close proximity with persons following the occupation of a sweeper, and, if necessary, to modify the general principle of English law, which lays down that a grantee is only entitled to one way of necessity. ESUBAI v. 32. ——— Place dedicated by owner of land for convenience of occupiers of adjoining houses—User of such open space—Covenant or grant presumed—Easement—Public land—Encroachment—Injunction. The plaintiff and defendant occupied houses situated in the same lane and opposite each other. Close to both houses was an open space in which a cross had stood. The plaintiff alleged that the said vacant space was originally intended for, and had always been used by, the occupants of his house and the residents in the lane in common for the purposes of recreation, save where the cross stood. The cross had been for many years visited by Christian worshippers who prayed and worshipped there. The plaintiff also alleged that, in addition to the general use of the open space, he and his predecessors in title and the occupants of his said house had for more than twenty years used the open space as a footway and a way for carriages and other vehicles to approach the said house and to stand and be able to turn there. He complained that the defendant had wrongfully removed the cross, and enclosed the greater portion of the said open space, and he prayed for a declaration that he and the occupants of his house were entitled to the use of the said space for purposes of recreation, and as a footway and carriageway and for an injunction. The defendant pleaded that the whole of the open space formerly belonged to a Portuguese religious confraternity who were the fazendars of both his property and the plaintiff's; that this confraternity had permitted the cross to be erected on the land, at which the residents of the houses of the plaintiff and defendant and other adjacent houses who were then Portuguese used to assemble and worship; that the Portuguese having left the locality the cross was removed, and the part of the open space which had been enclosed by the defendant had been sold to him by the confraternity in 1887. He denied the use of the space alleged by the plaintiff. Held, that the evidence was not sufficient to establish that the land in dispute had been dedicated to the public, but that, on the evidence, the Court was justified in presuming, and ought to presume, a covenant on the part of the fazendari owners of the oart to keep the lane, including the upper end of it, open for the use of the owners of the houses abutting upon it. Such a covenant should be presumed equally in the case of a land-owner giving land for building purposes to fazendari tenants in a perpetual tenure at a fixed rent, and in the case of a owner selling land out and out for building purposes. RANCHORDAS AMTHABHAI v. 33. ——— Easement of necessity—Easements Act (V of 1882)—Act I of 1872, s. 114, illus. (g)—Presumption against plaintiff from failure to produce his title-deeds. The plaintiffs were owners of an hotel, and the defendant of certain adjacent property. The two properties had at one time been united, and at that time the manager of the hotel on behalf of the owner used to obtain water for the purposes of the hotel from a certain spring by means of a road which ran over land which subsequently became the defendant's. There was another but smaller and much less convenient path from the hotel to the spring. The plaintiffs became owners of their portion of the property in 1886, and the defendant of his portion in 1888. The plaintiffs continued to use the above-mentioned road through the defendant's property for the purpose of getting water from the hotel until 1889, when the defendant refused to permit them any longer to use the road. The plaintiffs accordingly sued the defendant for a declaration of their right of way over the said road, but refused to put in evidence the deed under which they became owners of the hotel property. Held, upon these facts, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to any right of way over the land in question. Owing to the non-production by the plaintiffs of their title-deed, it must be presumed as against them that the evidence afforded thereby would be unfavourable to their claim, and no right of way in favour of the plaintiffs could be shown to arise otherwise, either as an easement of necessity or as an easement the intention to grant which might be inferred. *Charu Surnokar v. 34. ————— Purchase of land adjoining purchaser's land—Way of access—Way of necessity—Deed of sale, construction of. A person purchasing a plot adjoining his own land and having access to the plot through his land cannot acquire a way of necessity over his vendor's land of which the plot formed a part. The fact that, if the plot had been sold to a third person, he would have acquired a way of necessity, does not affect the question. Where a portion of an estate is sold, a right of way leading to such portion may be created by the use of general words, provided that the circumstances existing at the time of the sale were such as to justify the belief that such was the intention of the parties. Where the words used in a Marathi deed of sale were "sarva hakk wa sambandh" (i.e., all rights and accompaniments):—Held, that the words in themselves, apart from the circumstances at the time of the sale, did not include a right of way over the vendor's property as conveyed along with the portion of the land sold; but if there was an old path leading across the vendor's adjoining ground to the plot sold, and the purposes for which the plot was sold, and the conduct of the parties were such as to justify an inference that by the use of these words it was the intention of the parties to convey the right to use the path, it would be open to the Judge to find as a fact that such was the intention. *MUNICIPALITY OF THE CITY OF POONA v. palmyra and cocoanut trees and manufacture toddy—Proof of custom to exclude such caste men—Compromise of suit by trustee of temple after obtaining decree—Breach of trust—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 375. The respondent as hereditary trustee of a Hindu temple, dedicated to the worship of Siva, at Kamudi, a village in his zamindari, sued the appellants, who were of the Nadar or Shanar caste and represented that community, and who, alleging immemorial usage, claimed a right to enter and worship in the temple, to exclude them from such entrance and worship on the grounds that the presence of persons belonging to the appellant's caste was repugnant to the religious principles of the Hindu worship of Siva, and to the sentiments of the caste Hindus, who worshipped in the temple, and that it was contrary to custom for them to enter and worship there. The appellants had a temple of their own in the village, where they worshipped. Held, by the Judicial Committee (affirming the decrees of the Courts in India), that the fact that the appellants worshipped by themselves in a temple of their own, and that their evidence completely failed to prove any resort by persons of their caste to the temple in dispute, entirely negatived the case of the appellants so far as the assertion of immemorial usage was concerned, and also strengthened the respondents' contention that the separation in worship between the two classes was not accidental or voluntary, but rested on a deeper ground. The respondent, moreover, had succeeded in proving that by custom the appellants were not among the people for whose worship the temple in suit existed. The respondent, after obtaining a decree in the first Court, compromised the suit and asked that a decree should be made in favour of the appellants. Held, that the High Court, on an application to make a decree in accordance with the compromise, had acted properly in adding as plaintiff's members of the temple community, who opposed the application (as the respondent also himself then did), and in refusing the application on the ground that the compromise was a breach of trust on the part of the respondent, and therefore unlawful under s. 375 of the Code of Civil Procedure. *SANKRALINGA NADAN v. 2. ——— Practice—Suits under Civil Procedure Code, 1859. It was held under the Civil Procedure Code of 1859 that the Common Law practice in respect of the right to begin ought to prevail in cases under that Act, that practice having been followed up to that time, and the Procedure Code making no distinction between suits in the nature of Common Law actions and those in the nature of equity suits. RUNGUNMONEY DOSSEE v. BRIJO LALL DAY . Cor. 25

3. ——— Small Cause Court references. The right to begin in Small Cause Court references is generally allowed to the plaintiff, but in one case the counsel for the defendant was allowed to begin where the judgment of the Small Cause Court was in favour of the plaintiff. HARAN CHANDRA MOOKERJEE v. NUNDGOPAL MUTTY LALL . 13 B. L. R. 142 : 22 W. R. 71

The right to begin is now specially provided for by s. 179 of the Civil Procedure Code, 1882.

4. ——— Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 179—Suit for mesne profits—Burden of proof. It cannot be laid down as a general proposition controlling the provisions of s. 179 of the Code of Civil Procedure that in a suit for mesne profits against persons who have been in possession of the land in respect of which the mesne profits are claimed and who have been shown to have no title, that the burden of proof is upon the defendants. 5. ——— Suit for partition—Nucleus of joint property. In a suit for partition of certain property, and trading businesses the defendants, who resisted the suit, admitted a nucleus of joint property, and claimed the right to begin, on the ground that the onus was on them to prove that the whole property and the trading businesses were not joint. Held, that, unless the defendants

5. ——— Riparian proprietor, right of—Bunds or embankments. protected by walls. The defendant, the wall on his side becoming dilapidated, constructed a fresh one, altering its direction, and encroaching five feet upon the bed of the stream. In a suit for possession of land by demolishing the said wall, the plaintiff alleged that he was entitled to the solum on which it was built, that his navigation was obstructed, and that there was a danger of his screw-house falling down. It appeared, however, that the Government, and not the plaintiff, was the owner of the solum, and that the plaintiff neither claimed nor proved that he was entitled to the flow of the water as it had been accustomed to flow, and that that flow was seriously and sensibly diverted so as to be an injury to his rights. Held, reversing the decree of the High Court, that the plaintiff had failed to show either damnum or injuria, and therefore had no right of action. L. R. 6 I. A. 190 : 5 C. L. R. 97

8. ——— Easements Act (V of 1882), ss. 6, 7, 17—Natural stream—Surface water. The owners of a tank fed by natural streams, which depended for their supply on natural rainfall and surface water, sued for an injunction to restrain superior riparian owners from damming the streams or interfering with the supply of water, over which the plaintiffs claimed a right of easement. The issue as to the ownership of the land on which the streams rose was undecided. Held, (i) The Easements Act only declared the existing law as to easements over water; (ii) An easement can therefore be acquired in regard to the water of the rainfall. But surface water not flowing in a stream and not permanently collected in a pool, tank, or otherwise is not a subject of easement by prescription, though it may be the subject of an express grant or contract; (iii) It is the natural right of every owner of land to collect or dispose of all water on the surface which does not pass in a defined channel; (iv) Riparian owners are entitled to use and consume the water of the stream for drinking and household purposes, for watering their cattle, for irrigating their land, and for purposes of manufacture, subject to the conditions (i) that the use is reasonable, (ii) that it is required for their purposes as owners of the land, and (iii) that it does not destroy or render useless or materially diminish or affect the application of the water by inferior riparian owners in the exercise either of their natural right or their right of easement if any. (v) It was therefore necessary to ascertain where the streams rose, and the course, source, and length of their tributaries. PERUMAL v. RAMASAMI

9. ——— Water-course—Mamlatdar, jurisdiction of—Easements Act (V of 1882), s. 7. The law as to riparian owners is the same in India as in England, and is stated in illus. (h) of s. 7 of the Easements Act (V of 1882). Each proprietor has a right to a reasonable use of the water as it passes his land, but, in the absence of some special custom, he has no right to dam it back, or exhaust it, so as to deprive other riparian owners of like use. What would constitute an unreasonable diversion of water such as to disturb the use of the lower riparian owners is a question of fact which the Legislature has given a Mamlatdar jurisdiction to decide. NARAYAN HARI DEVAL v. KESHAV SHIVRAM DEVAL . . . I. L. R. 23 Bom. 506

10. — Proprietor of water-course, Right of—Proof of user by other persons. The proprietor of a pyne has a right to allow or to deny the use of water flowing through it to other persons unless they have also a clearly-defined right enabling them to control the water and convert it to their own use,—a right clearly found to have originated in some grant or valid contract, or to have been exercised for so long a period that such title may be presumed. INDURJEET KOORER v. LUCHMEE KOORER . . . 14 W. R. 349

11. — Right to discharge water on another's land on lower level—Drainage. There is no reason why the proprietor of land on a higher level should not, for the purpose of keeping his land drained, claim a right to have the water which falls thereon run off over adjoining land on a lower level. KOPIL POOREE v. MANICK SAHOO 20 W. R. 287

12. — Easement—Embankment—Drainage—Right to drainage of surplus surface water through natural water-course. The right of the owner of high lands to drain off its surplus surface water through the adjacent lower grounds is incident to the ownership of land in this country. Where the defendants had erected a dam across a natural water-course which was found to interfere with the natural drainage of the surplus rain-water of the adjacent lands of the plaintiffs, and where the lower Court had ordered that the dam be altogether removed:—Held, that the Court was wrong in taking it for granted that the plaintiffs were entitled to have the whole dam removed, but should have inquired how far the erection of the dam interfered with the plaintiff's right. ABDUL HAKIM v. GUNESH DUTT I. L. R. 12 Calc. 323

13. — Obstruction to flow of water—Erection of bund to stop flow of water. Where water flows in its natural course from somewhere outside A's land, through it, and onwards to other people's land, A is not entitled to stop the flow by an embankment across it, unless he can make out some special right to do so. Such course is a part of the natural condition of the land, and the flow of the water over it, when it occurs, is a natural incident. CHUMROO SINGH v. MULLICK KHYRUT AHMED . . . 18 W. R. 525

14. — Claim to erect bund cutting off water from neighbouring lands. A party claiming to erect a bund in a natural flowing river, so as entirely to cut off the water from another party, is bound to prove that he has acquired the legal right to do so by user. HEERANUND SAHOO v. KHUBEERONISSA 15 W. R. 516

RIGHT TO USE OF WATER—contd.

15. — Deprivation of right to a rise of water by breaking bund—Claim to repaired bund. Deprivation of the right to a rise of water is an injury, and a claim to repair a bund for the purpose of securing such right is not answered by the tender of another bund quite as good. SHUNKUR SAHOO v. GURBHOO SAHOO 15 W. R. 216

16. — Infringement of right to water—Suit to remove obstruction and for damages—Cause of action. In a suit to compel defendant to remove an embankment recently constructed on his own land, on the allegation that it infringed plaintiff's right of irrigation by a certain channel where it was found that the embankment in question was no manner of obstruction to the water-course by that channel:—Held, that, to entitle plaintiff to a decree, there must have been some actual infringement of his right by the defendant, and not merely some act whereby, as it were, that right was denied or questioned. SHAMA CHURN CHATTERJEE v. BOIDONATH BANERJEE 11 W. R. 2

17. — Cause of action. In order to maintain an action upon an infringement of a right (as where an obstruction is made to a natural flow of water), it is not necessary to show that there has been any subsequent injury consequent on such infringement. RAM CHAND CHUCKERBUTTY v. NUDDIAR CHAND GHOSE 23 W. R. 230

18. — Water from tank—Onus probandi. Where a plaintiff alleged that, subsequent to his purchase of a tank, at a period specified, defendants had commenced to take water from it and had opened a channel for the discharge of the water:—Held, that the onus lay on the plaintiff to prove the assertion on the part of the defendants of any new right. BUNGSHEE DHUR THAKOOR v. KHETTUMONEE DEBIA 11 W. R. 15

19. — Right to raise embankment to diminish flow of water into reservoir. Where parties by agreement in a butwarra restricted their rights by the condition that one of their number was to have full use of the water in a reservoir, the others were held not to be at liberty to set up, even on their own lands, an embankment round the reservoir so as to diminish materially the flow of water into it. GOUR SAHOY SINGH v. SHEO SAHOY SINGH . . . 15 W. R. 94

20. — Erection of bund to keep water in reservoir. Water falling on A's land and collected in a reservoir there, used to flow on to B's land. Held, that B had no right to the use of the water, and that A was entitled to erect on his own land a bund to prevent the water flowing on to B's land. BUNSEE SAHOO v. KALEE PERSHAD . . . 13 W. R. 414

21. — Right of owner of two properties—Dispersion of rain-water. The owner of two properties may conduct through troughs the rain-water accumulating on one property over a water-course to the other property before it reaches another water-course into which the rain-water, unless diverted, would naturally flow. RAMRUT-TUN NEOGEE v. PHOOL SINGH

W. R. 1864, 147

22. ——— Cessation to make use of water—Revocation of permission. Where a party who had enjoyed the permissive use of the water of a tank does not use it for four years from the date of its further excavation, the permission may be taken to be revoked. GOOROO CHURN SOOR v. SREE CHURN GHOSE . . . 15 W. R. 308

23. ——— Right to discharge rainfall overland—Abandonment of right. Exposition of the right of discharging the rainfall on one's land through a water-course over another's, and of the abandonment of such right. KHETTUR NATH GHOSE v. PROSUNNO GHOSE . . . 7 W. R. 498

24. ——— Abandonment of right to water—Construction of new waterway. Where a party suing for the use of a waterway was found to have allowed it to be filled up without objection, and another of the same description to be constructed, which he had used for a year or two, he was held to have abandoned his right of user to the former water-way. JUGUTBUNDHOO CHUCKER-BUTTY v. JUGUT CHUNDER CHOWDHRY

12 W. R. 519

25. ——— Irrigation channels—Power of Collector to regulate water-supply. In a suit between raiyats holding lands under Government, in which the Collector of the district was joined as second defendant, it appeared that the first defendant, in pursuance of an order of the Sub-Collector, made on a petition preferred by him, had opened a new irrigation channel, thereby materially diminishing the supply of water necessary for the cultivation of the plaintiff's land and causing damage to him. The lower Court passed a decree for damage and issued an injunction directing that the channel be closed. Held, that the order of the Sub-Collector was in excess of his powers. RAM-CHANDRA v. NARAYANASAMI

I. L. R. 16 Mad. 333

26. ——— Water rights for irrigation where a stream flows through separate estates—Relative rights of upper and lower proprietors on the banks to the use of the water—Issues not raising actual rights. A riparian owner, where a stream flows in a channel down from a property higher up, is entitled to the flow of water without interruption, and without substantial diminution caused by the upper proprietor, who may for legitimate purposes withdraw so much only of the water as will not materially lessen the downward flow on to his neighbour's land. In this suit the upper proprietor claimed the right to dam up a stream on his own estate, and to impound so much of its water as he might find convenient for irrigation, leaving only the surplus, if any, for the use of the proprietors below. He has no such right, in the absence of a right obtained by him in virtue of contract with the lower proprietors, or acquired by him as a consequence of prescriptive use. His common law right is to take for the purpose of irrigation so much water only as can be abstracted without materially diminishing what is to be allowed to descend. What quantity of water can be abstracted and used without infringing that essential condition, must, in all cases, be a question of the circumstances depending mainly upon the size of the stream and the proportion which the water taken bears to its entire volume. In this suit, the upper proprietor's claim having been put too high, the real question as to the proportion of his share had been omitted. No issue had raised it, and no evidence had been given to determine it approximately. The Court of first instance and the first Appellate Court had attempted to decree what they considered would be the just proportion, but the High Court had rightly pointed out that there had been no materials before the Courts upon which a right to a more limited kind than that which had been in excess claimed could be decreed to the upper proprietor; and the suit had been rightly dismissed. DEBI PERSHAD SINGH v. JOYNATH SINGH

27. ——— Riparian owners—Irrigation—Relative rights of upper and lower proprietors on the banks of a stream, based on custom and prescription—Prescription—Custom—Injunction—Dams, construction of—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 30—Suit by some of a class as representative of the class—Parties. The plaintiffs prayed for a declaration that the plaintiffs and their co-villagers had a prescriptive right to conserve the water of a natural streamlet passing by their village for the purpose of irrigating their agricultural land, by constructing dams every year during the rainy season at a specified place, but allowing surplus water to run out by the sides of the dams. They also prayed for a perpetual injunction to prevent the defendants, who were riparian owners lower down the course, from interfering with the construction of dams at the place specified. The defendants denied the plaintiff's right, and claimed a similar but exclusive right to construct dams at their village. Both the Courts below found that the plaintiffs had proved their prescriptive right, and that it did not interfere with the right of the riparian owners lower down the channel. The suit was accordingly decreed, in terms of the prayer made in the plaint. Held, that, the plaintiffs having established their right by prescriptive use, they were entitled to the reliefs claimed, and that the injunction decreed in their favour was not unwarranted by law nor vitiated by vagueness and indefiniteness. Debi Pershad Singh v. Joynath Singh, I. L. R. 24 Calc. 865, distinguished. Held, also, that, the plaintiffs having applied for permission, under s. 30 of the Civil Procedure Code, to sue on behalf of all parties having the same interest in the suit, and the permission having been given in fact and notices issued accordingly, the mere fact that the order granting the permission was not recorded in the order sheet does not vitiate the proceedings. *Dhunput Singh v. The plaintiff and his predecessors in title used from time immemorial the water of the tank through these openings and channels, for irrigating their lands. Held, that a presumption arose that this enjoyment had an origin, conferring a right to the use of the water. *Ramessur Persad Narain Sing v. Koonj Behari Pattuk, I. L. In all such cases the landholder acts on his own responsibility, and if, in the alleged exercise of this power, he attempts to seize the goods of his tenant when no rent is in arrear, mere obstruction to the seizure is not an offence, nor where made by several persons does it constitute rioting. ANONYMOUS. 8 Mad. 8. ———— Attempting to stop what rioters thought an illegal procession. In the case of a very serious riot, in order to stop a procession which the rioters disapproved of, the rioters were acquitted by the Magistrate because he thought they might have considered their act justified because the procession was illegal by virtue of some orders (which did not appear) which might have been efficacious in point of law. Held, that the thinking a thing legal which is not so can be no defence to a man who violates a rule of law; that there was no evidence that the procession was illegal, and that, if it were, the accused were bound to invoke the aid of the tribunals charged with the enforcement of the law. ANONYMOUS

9. ———— Common object—Persons coming armed with sticks on purpose to fight—Affray. Two parties were convicted of rioting. One party consisted of not less than five persons who were all found to have been assembled together in the fight which took place, and it was also found that they, as well as their opponents, came armed with sticks, prepared to fight, and did fight. Held, that they were not improperly convicted of rioting, their common object being to assault their opponents. The other party only consisted of four persons. It was not found what object they had in common with the first party. The fight did not occur in a public place. Held, that they were not properly convicted of rioting. Held, also, that, had the fight

10. ———— Unlawful assembly—Penal Code, s. 148—Resisting trespass. A disturbance having been created with reference to the possession of certain chur land, the Sessions Judge on appeal found that certain persons had unlawfully trespassed thereupon, and that the accused had been justified in resisting the trespass by force. Inasmuch, however, as he considered the accused had exceeded their right of private defence of their property, he convicted them of rioting under s. 148 of the Penal Code. Held, that, on the findings of the Judge, the conviction could not be supported, inasmuch as on such findings the persons convicted were not members of an unlawful assembly. In the matter of KALLEE MUNDLE 10 C. 12. ———— Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 141 and 147. A party of persons consisting of some five peadas and a number of coolies sufficient for the work to be done, went to a spot on a river flowing through the lands of M, for the purpose of either repairing or erecting a bund across it to cause the water to flow down a channel on the lands of their master T. The river at the time was almost dry, and the party did not go armed ready to fight or use force, and they did not during the subsequent occurrence use force. Having arrived at the spot about 10 A.M., they proceeded to work at the bund until the afternoon. At about 4 P.M., a body of men, consisting of about 1,200 in all, many of them armed with lathies and headed by the prisoners, who were servants of M, which had been seen collecting together during the day, proceeded to the spot, and about 25 or 30 of them attacked T's men, some five of whom were more or less severely wounded with the lathies. The occurrence resulted in the conviction of some of M's servants for rioting under s. 147 of the Penal Code. M's people wholly denied any right on the part of T to construct or repair the bund, and had previously denied the existence of such right, and refused permission to T to exercise it. It was contended that the assembly of M's people was not an "unlawful assembly;" that the interference by T's people with the channel of the river justified them in coming to stop the work, and the show and use of force in compelling them to do so.

13. ————— Right of private defence of property—Causing grievous hurt in furtherance of common object—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 97, 99, 147, 149, and 325. The accused, receiving information that the complainant's party were about to take forcible possession of a plot of land which was found by the Court to be in the possession of the accused, collected a large number of men, some of whom were armed, and went through the village to the land in question. While they were engaged in ploughing, the complainant's party came up, some of them being armed, and interfered with the ploughing. A fight ensued, in the course of which one of the complainant's party was grievously wounded and subsequently died, and two of the accused's party were hurt. Held, that, if the accused were rightfully in possession of the land and found it necessary to protect themselves from aggression on the part of another body of men, they were justified in taking such precautions as they thought were required and using such force or violence as was necessary to prevent the aggression. Held, also, that under such circumstances they could not rightly be held to be members of an unlawful assembly. *Queen-Empress v. In an affray specific evidence as to the acts of each fighter cannot be expected, but only general evidence as to the accused taking part in it and persons who, as in this case, punted the boats on which the fight took place, and in whose interests the fight on the boats took place, were held to be just as blameworthy as the men who struck the blows. *MOHER SHEIKH v. The complainant, who with some other co-sharers represented an eleven annas interest in the tank, went there with some of these co-sharers, to protest on the ground that the accused had no share or interest in the tank. A fight ensued, in the course of which some of the complainant's party received slight injuries. Held, that the accused were rightly convicted of rioting and voluntarily causing hurt under ss. 147 and 323 of the Penal Code. *Ganouri Lal Das v. 24. ———— Landholder's responsibility—Owner or occupier of land on which riot takes place, liability of—Agent—Manager—Acts of commission as well as omission—Knowledge—Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), s. 154. The accused was the sole proprietor of village A. A serious riot, involving loss of life, took place at village A, and the accused's naib, instead of doing anything to prevent or suppress the riot, accompanied the rioters and stood close by, while the riot was going on, after which he absconded. The accused, who had no knowledge that a riot was likely to be committed, was convicted under s. 154 of the Penal Code, and fined. Held (RAMPINI and PRATT, JJ.), that a landlord is liable, under s. 154 of the Penal Code, for the acts of commission as well as omission, not only of himself, but of his agent or manager. Knowledge, on the part of the owner or occupier of the land, of the acts or intentions of the agent, is not an essential element of an offence under s. 154 of the Penal Code, and he may be convicted under that section, although he may be in entire ignorance of the acts of his agent or manager. RAMPINI, J.—There seems to be no ground for holding that s. 154 is intended in order to punish the landlord where his agent has not rendered himself liable to the criminal law, and that, when the agent has done so, then his liability is at an end. On the contrary, the provisions of the section impose on non-resident landholders and their agents the duty of maintaining the public peace and preventing un-

A charge of neglect assumes that the agent is not directly concerned in the commission of the offence. If he is so concerned, it ceases to be neglect—it is a crime. It would be straining the law to make the absent owner, who has himself no knowledge of the occurrence, liable for not giving information of a riot that has taken place, if his agent takes part in it, and, as a rioter actually taking part in it, does not, as a matter of course, give notice of it. *KAZI ZEAMUDDIN AHMED v. Where such a prosecution was instituted more than two years after the riot or unlawful assembly, to which the alleged misconduct or neglect related, was committed:—Held, having regard to the special character of the law constituting the offences, as also to other circumstances of the case, that the prosecution was stale and ill-advised, and should be discontinued. *ESHAK MEAH v. (RAMPINI, J., dissenting), that, when the judgments of the Appellate Court and the Magistrate contain no finding as to what the common object of an unlawful assembly, if any, was, the conviction ought to be set aside. Where the common object stated in the charge against the petitioners was to take possession of some property by criminal force or to enforce a right or supposed right on it, and the Appellate Court found that the opposite party had been trying to encroach upon the land decreed to the petitioners and that the occurrence was the result of the complication, which the opposite party was trying to introduce by stealthy, wrongful acts:—Held, by the majority of the Court, that the common object alleged in the charge had not been made out, and that the accused were entitled to be acquitted. Rahimuddin v. Asgar Ali, I. L. R. 27 Calc. 990, followed. Where the charge did not specify the property, the taking possession of which was stated to be the common object of the unlawful assembly, and its specification would have altered the whole complexion of the case:—Held, by the majority of the Court, that the omission had prejudiced the accused and was not cured by s. 537, cl. While they were thus in actual, but temporary occupation, the complainant and his party went on the land and tried to unyoke the cattle, whereupon a riot took place. Held, that the petitioners were not justified in entering on the land, in ploughing it, uprooting the plants and throwing them away, that they were members of an unlawful assembly, the common object of which was to enforce a right or supposed right for the exercise of which they were prepared to use force and that their action in beating the complainant's party was not justified by the fact of their having obtained temporary occupation. The question in each case is whether the common object established agrees in essential particulars with that laid in the charge. Where the common object set out in the charge was to assault the complainant and his party, who were cutting the paddy or their land, and thereby to forcibly oust them, but the common object established by the facts found by the Sessions Judge was to maintain possession of the land by the accused:—Held, that the common object in the charge had not been substantially made out, and that the conviction under s. 147 of the Penal Code was, therefore, bad. Where the accused, who were found to be in possession of the disputed land, went upon it in a large body armed with lathis, prepared in anticipation of a fight, and where reaping the paddy grown by them, when the complainant's party came up and attempted to cut the same, whereupon a fight ensued, and one man was seriously wounded and died subsequently:—Held, that on the facts established, the common object was not to enforce a right or supposed right but to maintain undisturbed the actual enjoyment of a right, and that the assembly was not, therefore, unlawful under s. 141 (4). Where one accused, under the circumstances, caused simple hurt, and another, a fracture of the skull which ended fatally:—Held, that the former was within his right of private defence, but that the latter had not proved facts bringing the case under s. 103 (4). SILAJIT MAHTO v. of the assembly—Responsibility of other members continuing in it, and aiding and abetting—Indian Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860), ss. 99, 147, 148 and 326. If the accused are justified in resisting the theft of the crops, they cannot be considered as members of an unlawful assembly, with the common object to assert a right to the disputed land and crops, because some members thereof may have exceeded the right of private defence; but if some of the members continue in it, after the others have exceeded the right by the infliction of unnecessary violence, and aid and abet the latter, they also must be considered as having exceeded the right. In the matter of Kalee Mundle, 10 C. Each case of this kind must be decided on its own particular facts. Baij.

2. ——— Riparian owners—Easements Act (V of 1882), s. 7, illustration (J)—Stream—Usufruct—Right to use and consume water without material injury to other like owners. With respect to riparian owners, the law is that each such owner has a right to the usufruct of the stream, which passes through his land. The right is not an absolute and exclusive right to the flow of the water in its natural state, but to the flow of the water and the enjoyment of it subject to the similar rights of all the proprietors of the banks on each side to the reasonable enjoyment of the same gift of Providence. Embrey v. Owen, 6 Exch. 353, followed. S. 7, illustration (J), of the Easements Act (V of 1882) shows that a riparian owner has the right to use and consume water for irrigating the land abutting on a natural stream, provided that he does not thereby cause material injury to other like owners. *DINKAR v. 3. ——— Water rights for irrigation where stream flows through separate estates—Relative rights of upper and lower proprietors on the banks to the use of the water—Action to enforce rights—Absence of proof of damage. A riparian owner, where a stream flows in a channel down from a property higher up, is entitled to the flow of water without interruption and without substantial diminution caused by the upper proprietor, who may, for legitimate purposes, withdraw so much of the water as will not materially lessen the downward flow on to his neighbour's land. In order to support an action by one riparian owner to restrain another from diverting the water beyond his riparian tenement, it is not necessary that the plaintiff should prove that he has suffered any damage. *AIYAVU MOOPPAN v. 3. ———— Power to grant rule—Sufficiency of affidavit. A Recorder refused an application for execution against certain defendants who came in and confessed judgment before any issue of summons in the suit. The plaintiffs then applied to the High Court by petition for an order that the Recorder should issue execution against the defendants, or that he should show cause for not doing so. The affidavit did not state whether any decree had actually been made. Held, that the affidavit was insufficient; the Court cannot grant a rule to show cause, unless it is satisfied that the rule should be made absolute, if no cause be shown. 8. ———— Grounds for granting rule—Practice—Discretion of Court hearing a rule. Although rules to show cause are frequently granted on particular grounds, the form of any rule granted would ordinarily be such as to leave the action which the Courts should take in case the conviction is set aside to the discretion of the Court which hears the rule. Where a rule was granted "to show cause why the conviction should not be set aside, and the case sent back for re-trial," and it came on for hearing before a Bench other than that which had granted it:—Held, that the terms of the rule did not prevent the Bench hearing it from discharging the accused. XX and XXXI, passed under the Act—Application to High Court to direct Agent to review his decision. Maintainability. In a suit in the Court of the Senior Assistant Agent to the Governor, in Vizagapatam, a decree was passed, in favour of the plaintiff, for possession of certain villages. On appeal to the Court of the Agent, this decree was reversed. Plaintiff thereupon filed a petition in the High Court, praying that the Agent might be directed to review his judgment. The petition was filed under Rule No. XX of the Agency Rules, which is as follows:—"All decrees passed by the Agent on appeals from decrees of his subordinates shall be final, the Sudder Court having the power, on special grounds, to require him to review his judgment, as directed by them." A preliminary objection was taken to the hearing of the petition on the grounds (i) that the latter part of Rule No. XX is ultra vires, and (ii) that, even if it be not ultra vires, the application should have been presented to the Governor in Council, under Rule No. XXXI, and not to the High Court. Held, that Rule No. XX is not ultra vires; and that Rule No. XXXI has no application to a case of this nature. *Maharaja of Jeypore v. Nor do the rules authorise the Collector to set aside a sale. On 27th July 1889 the property in dispute was sold by the Collector in execution of a decree which was referred to him under s. 320 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882). On 23rd September 1889 the Collector set aside the sale, on the ground that the auction-purchaser had purchased the property for, and on behalf of, the decree-holder. Thereupon, the auction-purchaser applied to the Court which had passed the decree, complaining of the Collector’s proceeding, and praying for a confirmation of the sale. The Court asked the Collector to return the record of the case, but this he refused to do, on the ground that he had extended the time given by the decree to the judgment-debtor to redeem. In January 1890, the Local Government framed new rules in exercise of the powers conferred by s. 320 of the Code of Civil Procedure as amended by s. 30 of Act VII of 1888. One of these rules empowered the Collector to confirm a sale held in execution of a decree transferred to him. In April

RULES MADE UNDER ACTS—contd.

1890 the auction-purchaser again applied to the Court for a confirmation of the sale. This application was rejected, on the ground that under the new rules framed by Government the Collector alone had the power to confirm the sale. Held, that the rules in question had no application to the present case, the sale having been held before the rules were promulgated. The Civil Court was, therefore, competent to confirm the sale. Held, further, that, even if the rules did apply, they did not empower the Collector to set aside the sale or extend the time given by the decree to the judgment-debtor to redeem. *GANPATRAM MOTIRAM v.
